HUGHES DODGES ISSUE ON EIGHT HOUR LAW

Attacks Wilson's Plan but Won't Tell Public What He Would Have Done.

ONLY WAY TO AVERT STRIKE

Republican Nominee is Asked to Declare if He Would Have Vetted the Bill With Certain Assurance of Industrial Disaster.

So busy has been Charles E. Hughes criticizing the deeds of the Wilson Administration that he has had little time, or has purposely evaded, telling the public what he would have done had he been President under similar circumstances.

Lately Mr. Hughes has turned his attacks upon President Wilson's successful settlement of the crisis in the railroad world by causing to be passed by Congress the Adamson eight-hour bill. Mr. Hughes has characterized this action as a "surrender to force"; he is "opposed to being dictated to by any power on earth before the facts are known"; and he would not act until he had had a "fair investigation and candid treatment."

Taking issue with the Republican candidate's attitude the New York Times, in an editorial, asks: "WHAT WOULD MR. HUGHES HAVE DONE?" "Well, what would Mr. Hughes have taken?" continues the Times. "What would he have done? Here was Mr. Wilson's position: The brotherhood refused arbitration, the railroad presidents would not accept the settlement Mr. Wilson proposed, granting the eight-hour standard day with provision for an impartial inquiry into its working. There was no law on the statute books to enforce arbitration."

"The President knew, knew with certainty and beyond question, that he could not get such a law from the Congress now in session. The sure and inevitable alternative to his acceptance of the eight-hour standard day measure was a strike, the suspension of railway service, freight and passenger, all over the country, beginning on the morning of Sept. 4th. WOULD HUGHES HAVE DONE IT?"

"Mr. Hughes 'would not surrender to anybody in the country.' Then he would have surrendered the country to the disturbance, immeasurable loss, and peril of a strike. Would he, in fact, have done that? Had he been President, confronted by that situation, would Mr. Hughes have brought on a strike by refusing to sign the bill granting a wage increase? There was the strike in plain sight, a few hours away, sure to come. Would Mr. Hughes have vetoed the bill? On the contrary, would he not have done just what Mr. Wilson did, sign it?"

"The Republican candidate stands for two things: First, for the principle of fair, impartial, thorough, candid, arbitration; and second, for legislation on facts according to the necessities of the case. Mr. Wilson stands for these two things and, much more, has pledged himself to use all his influence to secure them."

"What more could Mr. Hughes do? Would it be too much to ask the Republican candidate to put a little common fairness into his speeches? Is he afraid to tell his audience what the President actually did urge upon Congress?"

"As a true champion of arbitration, President Wilson recommended that arbitration judgments be made records of a court of law, in order that their interpretation and enforcement may not be with the parties to the dispute, but with an impartial and authoritative tribunal. It was his purpose in this recommendation to provide against future emergencies, to prevent the recurrence of such dangers as then confronted him and the country."

ADVICE TO RAILROADS. "The people of the United States are not going to be put off with the misinformation as to what the President did to avert a strike and to prevent the threat of future strikes. We have reason to believe that the full revelation of what he did, what he tried to do, and what he nearly succeeded in doing in the White House conferences would put such a face upon the matter that Republican efforts to make an issue of it would fall entirely flat."

"But the people do know, for it was before them in the President's address to Congress, that he proposed, not a single emergency act, but a broad program of legislation to meet a public need and permanently remove a public danger. It was a program which we are convinced the railroads would be very wise to accept in its entirety."

"Certainly it seems to us that they are ill advised to pray for the election of Mr. Hughes, who, if we take him at his word, would have brought on the strike, with all its irreparable injuries to the country's business and peril for the country's peace."

"What Would You Have Done? The People Have A Right To Know"

THE SINGING WORLD.

THE WHOLE EARTH IS QUIET AND AT REST; THEY BREAK FORTH INTO SINGING.—Isaiah.

I saw an old fellow, with one arm and lame,
With a bundle of papers to sell, but so game,
Why, in spite of his wrinkles of trouble and care,
And many a strand of snow-white in his hair,
His eyes twinkled brightly, he shifted his load,
And crying his papers went down the highroad,
He had seen better days, but he wasn't a shirk—
And he sang at his work!

A little child passed me whose eyes seemed to tell
A tale out of torment and sorrow of hell,
Her wan cheeks, forgetting how rudely they'd been,
Were pale with the hardship of hunger, and thin,
She hurried to toil, she was earning her bread,
And she lifted her heart with a toss of her head,
Forgetting the darkness of life and its murk—
And she sang at her work!

I saw an old farmer bent over a plow,
With the wrinkles of labor and age on his brow,
His voice had grown weak through the toil of the years,
But his eyes shone with smiles, not with shadow and tears,
He yelled to his horses as lusty as youth,
And plowed up the field as if plowing up truth,
With nothing to harm him and nothing to irk—
And he sang at his work!

I came by a mill where the spindles were roaring,
And many pale women by the huge looms were pouring,
And standing all day in their places to wind
The spools and the shuttles, for women must find
Some work at something to help in the strife
That keeps the red wolf from the doorways of life,
But these seemed as gay as sweet maidens of the kirk—
And they sang at their work!

Oh, this is the world of the singers, I say,
The singers of toil at the hardships of day,
That find in hard labor the sweetest of content,
That go to their tasks with a double intent—
Of toiling and slaving, if such things must be,
But keeping up heart and a sound bit of glee,
And looking at life with a quib and a quirk—
And they sing at their work!

WOULD THE "CROOKS OF 1912" LET HUGHES KEEP PLEDGES?

Candidate Hughes is running on a platform of promises. The safest—the only trustworthy—method of judging the future is by assessing the past. Candidate Hughes' promises should be weighed in the light of his past performances as an executive. Here are some of his promises made when he was a candidate for Governor of New York and set opposite them are his performances to correspond with them:

CANDIDATE HUGHES SAID:	GOVERNOR HUGHES DID:
"I believe in labor legislation and the great benefits that have flowed from the wise conduct of labor organizations."	Refused to appoint a practical railroad man to the State Public Service Commission, although urged to do so by organized labor.
"I want to see fair justice done to everybody who works."	Vetoed the bill, giving women schoolteachers equal pay with men for equal work.
"Every practical measure for the real benefit of labor will have my support."	Vetoed the full-crew railroad bill.
"I promise the enforcement of the law with equal severity and in equal justice to all—corporations and individuals."	Vetoed bills urged by State Tax Commission to compel corporations to pay their franchise taxes promptly and to authorize the Tax Board to equalize special franchise tax valuations.
"The conditions of transportation in New York City are a shame and I purpose to find out the proper method of procedure and whether legislative or administrative action is necessary."	Vetoed Coney Island five-cent fare bill which would have saved the people of New York city $1,500,000 a year. Accomplished nothing to correct street-car overcrowding.
"I shall devote myself with renewed zeal to the people's service. My administration shall be an unbiased administration."	Blocked in his efforts by the bosses of his party, Gov. Hughes resigned in his second term to accept appointment to the United States Supreme Court.
Mr. Hughes is not the Republican party. He would be no more able to make good his promises as President than he was as Governor of New York. If he were elected President he could deliver only so much as the Republican bosses—the "Crooks" denounced by Roosevelt in 1912—would permit him to deliver.

SUFFRAGISTS CERTAIN OF DEMOCRATS' HELP

Leaders Resent Efforts to Turn the Cause Into an Adjunct of Republican Party.

WON OVER BY PRESIDENT

"I Have Come Here to Fight With You," He Tells Them—"Wilson Voted for Suffrage; Has Hughes?" Asked One.

Western women who have had the ballot equally with the men for several years resent the interference of one of the factions of suffragists and the attempt to turn the suffrage cause into an adjunct of the Republican party. They believe they know how to vote without being told by women who never had the vote; and they refuse to turn against the Democrats who have done so much for their cause in their respective states.

This attitude is brought out clearly in an interview by Nicola Greeley-Smith, nationally prominent as a writer on the staff of the New York World, with Mrs. Alexander Thompson, Democratic National Committeeman from Oregon, and Mrs. Theresa M. Graham of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

"One would think," observed Mrs. Thompson, to Nicola Greeley-Smith, "that if any instruction in suffrage matters had to be given it would come from the women who have won the vote and do vote rather than from Suffragists in the East who are still disfranchised. I am a young woman, but I have been through three campaigns for the vote in Oregon. In the final campaign we won through the co-operation and help and belief in us of the men of Oregon."

Aided by Democrats. "We have been voting only five years and we are still grateful to our men. So, when the Congressional Union sent speakers to Oregon to tell us to vote against all Democrats we laughed at them. Why, at the last election they campaigned against George E. Chamberlain, who introduced the first Suffrage bill in Oregon and who had been the friend of the women all through their fifteen years' fight."

"I agree with every word that Mrs. Thompson has spoken," declared Mrs. Graham. "The conditions in my State are the same as in Oregon, except that we have had the vote for twenty years and it was given to us without our having to fight for it. The Congressional Union has speakers in Idaho now urging us to slaughter the Democrats and free our sisters in the East. How silly that is! Are women in the East so foolish as to be led away by the mere declaration of a candidate unsupported by his party, that is, personally in favor of a Federal amendment? Woodrow Wilson voted for Suffrage. Has Charles E. Hughes ever voted for Suffrage? Wilson has done everything consistent with a belief in State rights, one of the fundamental principles of Democracy. Suffrage can never win as a partisan issue. Alas! the Democrats en masse and you have killed every chance Suffrage has."

Won by Wilson's Speech. "It is admitted by practically all suffragists that their cause has been helped greatly by the speech President Wilson made before the convention of the National Woman's Suffrage Association at Atlantic City recently, on Sept. 18. When the President told them he had 'come here to fight with you' the 4000 suffragists gathered in Nixon's Theatre arose and cheered him enthusiastically."

This pleber by the President led Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the association, to say: "You touched our hearts and won our fealty when you said you had come here to fight with us."

"The astonishing thing about this movement," said President Wilson, "is not that it has grown so slowly, but that it has grown so rapidly. . . . I get a little impatient sometimes about the discussion of the channels and methods by which it is to prevail. It is going to prevail, and that is a very superficial and ignorant view of it which attributes it to mere social unrest. It is not merely because the women have seen visions of duty, and that is something which we not only cannot resist, but, if we be true Americans, we do not wish to resist. . . ."

"I have felt as I sat here tonight the wholesome contagion of the occasion. Almost every other time that I ever visited Atlantic City I came to fight somebody. I hardly know how to conduct myself when I have not come to fight somebody, but with somebody. . . . I have come to suggest, among other things, that when the forces of nature are steadily working and the tide is rising to meet the moon, you need not be afraid that it will not come to its flood. We feel the tide; we rejoice in the strength of it."

Constipation Dulls Your Brain That dull, listless, oppressed feeling is due to impurities in your system, sluggish liver, clogged intestines. Dr. King's New Life Pills give prompt relief. A mild, easy, non-gripping bowel movement will tone up your system and help to clear your mind, simplify your complexion. I hardly know how to conduct myself when I have not come to fight somebody, but with somebody. . . . A dose tonight will make you cheerful at breakfast.

None are so ignorant as those who think they know it all.
