EIGHT-HOUR ATTACK IGNOBLE, SAYS OLNEY

Hughes "Hadn't the Nerve" to Demand Filibuster in the Senate Against the Law.

WILSON'S ACT COURAGEOUS

Member of Cleveland's Cabinet Praises President's Domestic Achievements and Policy of Averting War.

No American can speak with higher authority on the issues of this campaign than Richard Olney, who was President Cleveland's Attorney General during the railroad strike of 1894, and President Cleveland's Secretary of State when the Venezuelan message was sent to the British Government. He should know whether President Wilson's action in averting the railroad strike was a "surrender to force"; whether the Wilson foreign policy has been "timid and vacillating."

Mr. Olney seeks no political preferment; his interest is that of a retired statesman, of a wise, experienced, dispassionate patriot, who is concerned only with the welfare of his country.

Mr. Olney has written for the New York World a signed article in which he warns the American people against the danger now to result from turning over their affairs to Mr. Hughes and the interests which would dictate his policies, foreign and domestic.

Where Was Hughes' Nerve?

Discussing the passage of the Adamson eight-hour law, Mr. Olney points out that the Republicans in the Senate, if they had really wished more time for consideration of the bill, could have obtained it by means of a filibuster, as a recognized Senatorial weapon, and adds:

"Why did not the Republican Senators resort to it and get all the time for deliberation they wanted? What was Candidate Hughes doing that he did not make the wires hot with messages to Washington—warning against the law the seventy-four Republican Representatives who voted for it and urging the twenty-eight Republican Senators to filibuster to the last ditch?"

"But neither he nor the Republican leaders generally had the nerve to face the situation. With ample means in their hands to prevent legislation until after its due consideration, they deliberately elected that it should appear to be enacted under coercion in order that, after the great national deliverance had been effected, they might object to the mode of its accomplishment."

"A pettier and more ignoble game of politics never was conceived. In comparison, and in view of the sudden and extraordinary exigency which sprang upon the country, President Wilson's course was characterized by both courage and common sense."

Of Candidate Hughes' conduct in the campaign, Mr. Olney remarks:

"No sooner was the nomination assured than the robes and ermine of the Judge fell from the candidate as if by magic, and there appeared in their place the motley wear of the ordinary office seeker—a transformation as sudden as that made by the wind of Harlequin in the pantomime, and a transformation showing how thin is the judicial veneer, and how forever discrediting the United States Supreme Court as a training camp for high political offices."

Has Kept Rubber True

In its conduct of foreign relations the Wilson Administration, Mr. Olney says, "has kept its rubber true and has won and deserved the respect and gratitude of the country."

The principles and objects of the Wilson foreign policy as stated by Mr. Olney have been:

First—To keep the country out of the great European war.

Second—To insist upon the existence and vitality of international law as determining its own status as a neutral, and defining its rights and obligations as such.

Third—To deal with the Mexican situation in a spirit of perfect fairness and friendliness to the Mexican people, now suffering from civil dissensions and revolution to an extent which leaves a large part of the country in a state of anarchy.

Mr. Olney shows that all these objects have been attained through the wise, patient and courageous diplomacy of Woodrow Wilson; that the President has kept the country at peace without dishonor; that under his leadership "the United States has rendered an inestimable service to belligerents and neutrals and to all mankind" in "steadily bearing aloft the banner of international law as the standard under which all civilized peoples must eventually gather."

Mr. Olney finds particular cause to commend President Wilson's Mexican policy. He stands with the President in declaring that the Mexicans have the right to work out their own destiny even through revolution.

Closing by asking what is likely to happen if the "Presidential tiller passes into new hands," Mr. Olney says that Hughes' inducement to change the existing foreign policies of the country will be very great.

"The American people can hardly fail to realize the danger and to refuse to put at risk the continuance of a foreign policy which, as a whole, must have their hearty approval."

HISTORIC SCENES IN OLD NEW ENGLAND.

THE MOST FAMOUS ROAD IN AMERICA

Lexington Green in Eastern Massachusetts, where British regulars first fired on American colonists, attracts hundreds of automobilists each day during the summer. Here on the 19th of April, 1775, a regiment of eight hundred British regulars dispatched from Boston by General Gage to seize stores of ammunition supposed to have been hidden in Concord by the colonists, were met by seventy provincials. Failing to disperse on command, the patriots were fired on by the British and sixteen of them were killed. This, the "Battle" of Lexington, fired the country and within a short time an army of sixteen thousand men had gathered about Boston, the first organized defiance of British rule in America.

Fine State roads lead to Lexington from every direction and every road has its historic points and scenes. Many of the original houses about Lexington Green are still fine residences. The white house seen in the picture is the Harrington homestead at the doorway of which John Harrington—who was fatally wounded when Pitcairn commanded the British to fire on the assembled "rebels," expired at the feet of his wife.

The road from Boston to Lexington is over the original route of Paul Revere's Ride, "through every Middlesex village and farm" and from all parts of the country come tourists who react in their minds the stirring scenes of revolutionary times as they glide over perfect roads at speed and comfort never even dreamed of in those early days of our country's history.

Scene of THE LEXINGTON MASSACRE

The accompanying illustration is of the road from Lexington to Concord in Massachusetts. Over this road, now a fine State boulevard, the British regiment marched on the morning of April 19, 1775, after their massacre of the colonists on Lexington Green, to Concord in search of the ammunition hidden there by the Boston colonists.

While the British searched for the stores of powder and shot, minute men hastened from the surrounding country. A company of them gathered at the bridge, and here Americans for the first time were ordered to fire on British troops. Defeated at the bridge, the British retreated over the road to Lexington. The minute men attacked them from trees, fences, rocks and buildings, the whole distance to Lexington where the British were joined by reinforcements and saved from complete destruction. The British lost two hundred and seventy-three men in their retreat over this road and the colonists, forty-nine.

This road is now a part of one of the fine State boulevards that extend from the Atlantic Ocean to the New York State boundary and is attractive to tourists from all parts of the country, not only on account of its natural scenic beauty, but because of its historic associations as well.

The Orchard Lands of Long Ago.

The orchard lands of Long Ago!
O drowsy winds, awake, and blow
The snowy blossoms back to me,
And all the buds that used to be!
Blow back the grassy ways
Of truant feet, and lift the haze
Of happy summer from the trees
That trail their tresses in the seas
Of grain that float and overflow
The orchard lands of Long Ago!

Blow back the melody that slips
In lazy laughter from the lips
That marvel much if any kiss
Is sweeter than the apple is.
Blow back the twitter of the birds—
The lisp, the titter, and the words
Of merriment that found the shine
Of summertime a glorious wine
That drenched the leaves that loved it so,
In orchard lands of Long Ago!

O memory! alight and sing
Where rosy-bellied pippins cling,
And golden russets glist and gleam,
As, in the old Arabian dream,
The fruits of that enchanted tree
The glad Aladdin robed for me!
And, drowsy winds, awake and fan
My blood as when it overran
A heart ripe as the apples grow
In orchard lands of Long Ago!
