HEAVEN IS HERE.

If We Live in Accordance With The Laws of God we Will Not Have to Wait Until After Death to Get a Taste of That Heaven, Which is in the Reach of All Right Here.

I met a friend of mine several years ago, and in answer to my question as to how he was getting on replied that he was doing very badly; in fact, he had been living in hell of late. He said that he owed a great deal of money and his creditors were harassing him so his life was unbearable. To owe money, he said, and not be able to pay it is hell. Hell, he went on to say, was a condition, and not a place where people suffered eternal punishment for their sins; it is a figure of speech which represents a corrective state of mind.

The words of my friend were recalled a few days ago by reading the following taken from a sermon of a Methodist preacher in Los Angeles, Cal.: "The graphic and spectacular presentation of hell and its penalties which characterized preaching thirty to fifty years ago has properly passed, because the interpretation of truth has changed. It is not any longer believed that man shall have a physical body in his future state, but a spiritual body, and hence all reference to a lake of fire is now accepted as figurative and symbolical. And, moreover, the climax of preaching today, instead of reaching beyond the grave into the unseen, is now focused in the enlargement and glorification of human life this side of death. That there is a hell and that hell is the present time was never so certainly believed as it is today. If any one would see hell, all he needs to do is to look around him among those who are breaking the laws of God and Man."

In a sermon Archdeacon Farrar said: "There would be a proper teaching about hell if we calmly and deliberately erased from our English Bible the three words, damnation, hell and everlasting. I say unhesitatingly, I say with the fullest right to speak with authority of knowledge, that not one of these words ought to stand any longer in our English Bibles, for in the present acceptance of them they are simply translations."

Some time after this conversation with my friend about hell I met another, and at the first glance I saw that everything was well with him. I remarked that it was not necessary to inquire into the state of his health and feelings, for his appearance showed plainly that he was happy and prosperous.

"Yes," he replied, "I am so happy that I feel lifted up above the sordid things of this world; in fact, I have been in heaven lately. Last night I went to church with a little lady whom I consider the very incarnation of purity—so pure and spotless that nothing of an impure nature lived in her presence. Seated by the side of this little divinity, dressed in white, and listening to the choir singing, not the operatic airs, but simple hymns I was accustomed to hear in my childhood days, I was transported to another world, and all thoughts of a worldly nature slipped from me like a garment discarded. It was a most ecstatic condition—in fact, heaven here in this world—and I have not been able to come down to mundane affairs. Heaven is not a far-off place up in the skies which you only reach after death, but right here in our midst, and can be attained by all who lead the true life.

"Our Saviour, whose mission was to teach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, said that it lies within us, and if we seek it first all other things will be added. We lose sight of the fact that heaven is right here with us, and go on making ourselves miserable, endeavoring in our old age to make atonement for the misspent years, so we can enjoy the heaven we have been taught awaits us in some far-off place up in the skies. It is a condition and not a place, and I believe the world is beginning to realize this fact. If we live in accordance with the laws of God we will not have to wait until after death to get a taste of that heaven, which is in the reach of all right here."—Everything.

THE CALL TO ARMS.

There is no bugle sounding for the army of the child—
The beaming of a mother's heart, the lips with rapture smiled;
The call to arms at twilight
When she folds them to her breast,
The children of her dreaming soul,
To rock them unto rest.

No trumpets from the parapet to summon them, indeed,
But mother at the vineclad door, and that is all they need:
The call to arms of mother
When the playtime hour is past,
And to the bosom of her love
She holds them firm and fast.

They come not armed and ready for the battle and the strife;
They come with arms of clinging from the sweetest dream of life:
The call to arms of loving
Where she waits the little lips
At which her own find comfort
As their honeyed lips she sips.

No sabres clash and tingle when the call of love is heard,
But only distant echoes of the singing mother-bird:
And leaping to her sweetly,
How she holds them warmly in
From suffering and from sorrow
And the gleaming eyes of sin.

The call to arms of mother—how it wakes the dreams of rest
With little faces hidden on the pillow of her breast,
The call to arms that soundeth
Not of battle and of dread,
But of goodnight song and story
And the prayer beside the bed.

—Benztown Bard.

Little sparks from matches,
Little piles of trash,
Will turn your pretty cottage
Into smoke and ash.

A night in the winter
A crack in the flue,
A heap of black charcoal
When the fire is through.

ARE FLIRTATIONS DANGEROUS?

Many Enter Into a Flirtation With a Laugh on Their Lips Which Ends in a Sigh or a Tear.

So you think you love me, do you? Well, it may be so. But there's many way of loving. I have learnt to know. Having seen what looked most real. Crumble into dust. Now I show that test and trial shall precede my trust.

Are flirtations dangerous? That depends less on how it begins than on how it ends—whether the affections have been stirred or—only friendship's waves have been rippling from a merry breeze.

There are some women, happy of heart, fun loving and sensible, who could be brought into contact with the most pronounced, fascinating "lady killers" without experiencing an extravagant heart throbbing. There are others who were never intended, presumably, to have a beau who had no matrimonial intention, because they were sure to fall headlong in love although the man in the case stopped carefully at the crossroads of a mild flirtation.

Such young women are really more to be pitied than censured, for the reason that their feminine intuition has led them far afield, as it were, leaving them unable to decide as to just what value to place on his whispered words or the lingering clasp of his hand.

All women will tell you they go on their summer vacations for the sole purpose of gaining the benefit derived from a change of scene and air.

While this is true, it is also quite true that the majority of winsome maidens are not adverse to finding at the place they have chosen for recreation an agreeable, unattached young man who will also help them pass the vacation days pleasantly. If he pays a bevy or more of girls the same amount of attention, favoring one not more than the others, he is simply a very agreeable new acquaintance. If he singles one girl out, talking, walking, golfing, yachting with her almost exclusively, the busy bodies will be burning with curiosity to discover whether it is real heart affair or only a flirtation.

Unwise is the girl who attaches more importance to his attentions than his conversation warrants. Pleasant companionship is one thing, tender sentiment quite another. The girl who is only intent upon a very slight flirtation should not lead a young man on or allow him to believe that his suit would meet with acceptance should he propose marriage. Men have hearts quite as susceptible to the tender passion as those that beat in women's bosoms. Where one or the other has "no future intentions" he or she should not monopolize entirely the society of the other.

Flirtation is a dangerous game. Frankly acknowledged friendship simply that but nothing more—is always wisest and best in the long run. It is by no means a compliment for a man or woman to become recognized as an acknowledged flirt. Many enter into a flirtation with a laugh on their lips which ends in a sigh or a tear.

PEANUT BAGS.

For the good of the Peanut Industry, it has been determined by the members of this association, that it will be necessary to request the farmers to pack their peanuts in new 68 inch and 70 inch 8 ounce burlap bags, and when peanuts are packed in bags different from the above, a deduction will be made on the following basis:

Cotton bags, a deduction will be made 10c each.
Second hand bags a deduction will be made 10c each.
New 7 1-2 ounce bags 68 or 70 inches a deduction will be made of 5c each.

In view of the fact that some dealers in the past have delivered 7 1-2 ounce bags on contracts for 8 ounce bags, we would advise you to see that each bale of 500-68 inch 8 ounce bags you receive weigh 472 1-2 pounds, and each bale of 500-70 inch 8 ounce bags weigh 486 1-2 pounds, exclusive of the wrapping and cordage. If they run short of the above weight, you are receiving 7 1-2 ounce bags instead of 8 ounce bags.
