BY THOMAS CARROLL HOWARD.

Yesterday's gone-it was only a dream; Of the past there is naught but remembrance To-morrow's a vision thrown on Hope's screen. A will-o'-the-wisp, a mere semblance.

Why mourn and grieve over yesterday's ills And paint memory's picture with sorrow? Why worry and fret-for worrying kills-Over things that won't happen to-morrow?

Yesterday's gone-it has never returned-Peace to its ashes, and calm: To-morrow no human has ever discerned, Still hope, trust, and faith are its balm.

This moment is all that I have as my own, To use well, or waste, as I may; But I know that my future depends alone Of the way that I live to-day.

This moment my past and my future I form; I may make them whatever I choose By the deeds and the acts that I now perform, By the words and the thoughts that I use.

So I fear not the future nor mourn o'er the past For I do all I'm able to-day, Living each present moment as though 'twere the last; Perhaps it is! Who knows? Who shall say?

HOLLER OUT "AMEN."

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

When trouble falls around you, and the sky is lookin' dim, If you cannot feel like raisin' of a halleluis hymn, Just pull yourself together in the happy way-an' then, When the other feller sings it, you jes' holler out, "Amen !"

It's hard to do, I reckon-with the mist around your eyes, An' not a star a-shinin' in the midnight of the skies ! But-think: The light is somewhere on the hills of Life-and then. When the other feller's singin' you jes' holler out, "Amen!"

Trouble jes' can't stand it-that halleluia hymn! It ripples out a rainbow all the stormy way along! You listen to the music--- if you cannot sing --- an' then, Jes' thank some brother fer the tune, an' holler out, "Amen!"

THE SPEECH OF TRUE FAITH.

A traveler who believed himself to be the sole survivor of a shipwreck on a cannibal isle hid for three days in terror of his life. Finally, driven out by hunger, he discovered a thin wisp of smoke rising from a point inland. Crawling there cautiously on his hands and anees, he arrived just in time to hear a raucous voice demand : "Why the h-l did the you play

The country lad frowned thought- if we made any genuine effort.

"Well, now, seeing as you've asked me, the fastest I ever ran was one time last summer. You see, fellows, 'twas like this. I took my gun one morning and started any more than stepped out of the house before I saw a woodchuck sitting by his hole on a hillside.

So I fired at him. "But I'd heard tell that a woodchuck might drop back into his hole when you hit him. So, having that in mind, I threw down my gun as soon as I'd shot and started for the woodchuck. Well, fellows. I'd have got him, but just as stooped over to grab him by the hind legs, the shot I'd fired hit me in the back."

A DOOR OPENED.

Behold I Have Set Before Thee an Open Door.

Before the bank three or four persons are waiting for the great doors to be unlocked. How heavy and strong they are! You might dash yourself to pieces against them and they would not give so much as the traction of an inch.

A clock begins to strike. At the ninth stroke a clerk appears behind the door and on the inside of the heavy plate-glass window hangs a card bearing the words, "The Bank Is Open." Then he turns a key in the lock of the doors and, drawing it out again, returns to his work. The people outside press up the steps. The foremost person puts his shoulder against one of the leaves of the door. It swings slowly back, and the people enter the open door -- opened, not by the shoulder of the man without, but by the key of the man

As I passed on down the street I thought of the sign hanging there in the window, announcing that the bank was open. The doors indeed were shut, but the bank was not. Anyone with business there was free to enter. He could push confidently against the closed doors, for he knows that the clerk always turns the key at nine o'clock, and that the turning of the key opens the bank.

The doors of opportunity are much like the doors of the bank. The Master holds the key to every door. He urges us to go forward to service and accomplishment, though again and again the doors appear to us to be closed. But really they are not shut against us. Christ has said, "Behold, I have before thee an open door." He does not mean that He has removed every obstacle from our path. He does mean that He has turned the key in the lock and that what we could not do before we now can do. The door is opened, but we must approach it in faith and set our shoulder to the task of push-

How many times we come to doors of opportunity and, finding them apparently closed, have turned away discouraged; whereas "How fast is that?" asked the if we had only had faith and courage we should have found that the door would swing open before us

PERILS OF TIMIDITY.

Very good people, and groups of people are of very little use in the world because they are too timid to show enterprise in order to carry out their aims. If they have no aims the case it is far worse. A good use of this meeting would be to raise the questions: Exactly what do we wish to accomplish in this community? Have we any plans? Are we accomplishing anything? Are we standing in the light of others because we are too shy to take a risk? We must reckon here with differences and individuals of communities.

Chronic Catarrh.

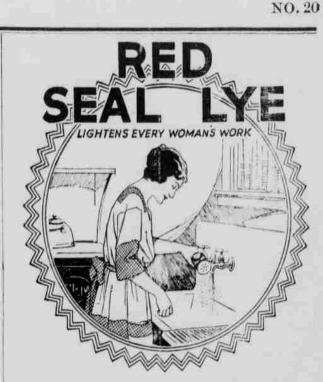

Our manner of living makes us very susceptible to colds and a succession of colds causes chronic catarrh a loathsome disease with which it is estimated that ninety-five per cent. of our adult population are afflicted. If you would avoid chronic catarrh you must avoid colds or having contracted a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible Cham-berlain's Cough Remedy is highly rec-ommended as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

To play the role of the critic is about the easiest thing we know. It requires neither grace nor brains to turn this trick. And it seems so funny that those whom we criticise are usually head and shoulders above us. Jealousy, envy, malice and criticism generally consort in Murphy, that you boast of two the same territory. Judas was a first-class critic. Even the disciples assumed the role of relentless criticism, but our Lord refused to condemn the poor unfortunate woman. Real piety removes the critic so far from home that his act becomes self-condemnatory.

A Grateful Letter.

A Grateful Letter.

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North, of Naples, N. Y., that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colie and Diarrhoes. Remedy. "Two years ago last summer she says "Our boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor, and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colie and Diarrhoes. Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and be began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."
