THE LAND HE HAS GONE TO.

Beautiful Words By the Late Robert J. Burdette.

I watch the sunset as I look out over the rim of the blue Pacific. and there is no mystery beyond the horizon line, because 1 know what is over there. I have been there. I have journeyed in those lands. Over there where the sun is just sinking is Japan. That star is rising over China. In that direction lie the Philippines. I know all that. Well, there is another land that I look toward as I watch the sunset. I have never seen it. I have never seen any one who has been there, but it has a more abiding reality than any of these lands which I know. This land beyond the sunset-this land of immortality, this fair and blessed country of the soul-why, this heaven of ours is the one thing in the world which I know with absolute, unshaken, unchangeable certainty. This I know with a knowledge that is never shadowed by a passing cloud of doubt. I may not always be certain about this world; my geographical location may sometimes become confused, but the world-that I know. And as the afternoon sun sinks lower, faith shines more clearly and hope, lifting her voice in a higher key, sings the voice of fruition. My work is about ended, I think. The best of it I have done poorly; any of it I might have done better, but I have done it. And in a fairer land, with finer material and a better working light, I will do better work.

FREE AND EASY.

A youth from the backwoods section had been invited to a dance and was frankly horrified at the up-to-date ways of the young women. His partner, after spending half of one dance in agony over his awkwardness, suggested that they sit out the other half and led him to the verando. There she drew out a gold cigarette case and remarked:

"Of course, you don't mind girls moking."

But the young man was deternined to be just as modern as she. "Lady," he retorted earnestly, 'I don't give a hoot if you chaw.'

SOUVENIR.

A returned soldier found a pretty looking card in France and brought it home to have his wife hang in the parlor. It read :

"Ici on parle Français." "What's the idea?" she demanded. "That means 'French spoken here' and you know you

"Well, I'll be darned!" ejaculated the ex-soldier disgustedly. The guy that sold it to me said it meant 'God oless our home.' "

WHY JIMMY BALKED.

Mrs. Jones was at a loss at first to understand why her son, Jimmy, aged ten, was unable to endure the society of his Aunt Clara.

"Why, my son," said the mother, finally, "she is always so nice to you-always patting you on the

"Yes," said Jimmy, "with her knuckles."

THE SUMMONS.

BY NANCY BYRD TURNER.

I want to go back to a place my heart remembers, ! Where slow Time loiters along however it will-Blue Junes and gray Novembers.

There spring returns with the music of whippoorwills calling And sudden violets where a slope is green And smoke adrift on a south wind spicy and keen

When the slow, damp dusk is falling. There autumn comes with a click of frost in the night, And a hickory log and a lump of lightwood pine Flame on the hearth and set the gloom ashine With a riot of ruddy light.

An unkept, ragged old guardian wall incloses An arbor purple with grapes and a lone pear tree And borders of mignonette and savory And ranks of crimson roses.

There's a stream near by, where mellow-bugs dart and skip, That chuckles aloud and talks in cheery tones And brims a cool deep basin among the stones Where dusty feet can dip.

The doors stand wide in the tranquil house on the hill, And the wind walks down the hall and stirs a curtain-The wind or spirit, never I could be certain-And the rooms are sweet and still.

Ripe acorns rain on the roof, a fairy din, And wake me deep in the nightime over and over; At many a dawn a cow gets into the clover And rings the sunrise in.

A curly path through a field, a sagging rail, A hole in a hedge, a mark on a sassafras tree; The way that my boyhood went is blazed for me

In signs that cannot fail. Nothing will hush this crying, whether or no! My heart is fain for the miracle it remembers. The beauty of old sweet Aprils and Septembers;

I cannot choose but go. The long highways of the world are seven times seven; Though a man should travel them all from shore to shore And yet at the last find one old trail no more, He has missed the road to heaven.

I will turn my back on the noisy markets of men. O roses, wait in the sun by the garden wall; O Angel, touch the curtains in the hall-I am coming home again !

ORIGINALITY.

THAT ODD BOY.

Do Not Disparage the Boy Who Seems Dull.

Do not discourage that boy of yours because he is odd, because he does not get the highest grade, because his card shows he is dull-Why, that may be one of the signs that he is great, but not in the line exactly of the books crammed into his hands for him to cram into his head. Recall that Beecher said that he got more discipline out of inventing excuses why he could not get his lessons in mathematics than he ever did from the books.

Longfellow has expressed our thought

Perhaps there lives some dreary boy, untaught In schools, some graduate of the field or street, Who shall become a master of the An admiral sailing the high seas of thought Fearless and first, and steering with his fleet For lands not yet laid down in any chart. Do not disparage the boy who seems dull. It may be his way. One of the things of which our colleges boast is one of the things of which they ought to be most ashamed: namely, they will send a student home if his remarks on examination are not up to percentages. Forsooth. That is something to shame a school. Let the student get what he can assimilate. He will get a lot out of association and effort and encouragement. Why brand him as a fool because certain studies do not wedge themselves into his brain just exactly as in the texts? Education should be democratic. Some would gear it simply to the intellectual aristocrats. Moreover, read again those lines of Longfellow. They have often come true.

Make 10 lbs. of Soap and Save $1.00

THE cleansing power in any soap or cleanser you buy is lye. Soap is tallow (grease) mixed with lye and water. You can make it yourself and save a great deal of money. It will suit your needs better, for you can make just the kind of soap you want, either hard or soft.

Simply take 5½ pounds of clean grease (lard or tallow) free from salt. Melt it down. Then set aside

Take a large can of Red Seal Lye and dissolve it in 3½ pints of cold water. Bring this to about Summer heat and pour it slowly into the melted grease. Stir until the mixture becomes uniformly thick and pour into a mould. Cover up and set in a warm place until next day. Then you can cut it into pieces and you'll have 10 lbs. of the finest cleansing soap you ever used —and will have saved about $1.00.

Isn't that well worth while? You bet it is! And then just remember these other fine uses for Red Seal It is a water softener, saving a great deal of soap. It kills all disagreeable odors, purifies and disinfects at the same time. Dissolve a spoonful of it in a quart of water and you have a wonderful cleaning solution for helping lighten your work in washing dishes, doors, floors, woodwork—everything about the house. A little of it sifted into the sink cleans out the pines and property than from baconing out the pipes and prevents them from becoming

But make sure the lye you buy is Red Seal Lye. This pure lye is granulated and packed in cans that are easy and convenient to use. Always ask your storekeeper for, and be sure to get, the old reliable Red Seal Granulated Lye.
