WILMINGTON, N. C.

REVIEWAL.

McKee, it is said, is negotiating to dispose of his stock in the St. Louis Globe. His power in the party where formerly he was a local autocrat is broken; the expenses of his defense were $40,000 and it cost much more to get a pardon; and he feels very keenly the attacks to which his paper is constantly subjected.

Once more the European telegrams begin to hint that peace is possible. The fact is, chill penury represses the noble rage of Russia. Times are too hard for the expensive luxury of war, and the Turk is about getting an under-hold of Russia by the pacification of her revolted provinces. The Sultan has outgeneraled the powers in diplomacy.

Mr. Henn, the conductor who was in charge of the train wrecked at Ashtabula, returned to his duty the other day. As his train neared the new bridge he grew so agitated that he grasped a seat nervously for support, and as it passed over the bridge said, "Thank God I'm over, and now I'm not afraid to go over it a thousand times."

President Grant seems to think that the present is a very fit time for the resumption of specie payments. In a recent conversation, the President stated that the condition of trade and the monetary relations of the United States at home and abroad had reached that point which would warrant an immediate resumption of specie payments. He said that he had observed for some months a tendency in the financial status of the country towards specie payments, and he had watched it closely with a view at the timely moment of suggesting measures which would lead to this much desired result.

There is one clause in the message of Gov. Robinson, of New York, which men of a certain class will hardly like. He recommends that a law be passed with severe penalties against betting, in any form, upon elections holding, very wisely that the persons betting have strong motives to corrupt and bribe voters. The suggestion is understood to aim particularly at pool selling, which of late years has been considered a genteel sort of gambling. The morals of New York city would be greatly improved under such a law, if its provisions were strictly enforced.

The Herald, opposing the selection of Mr. Garfield as one of the members of the presidential commission, asks: "How can this man swear with a clear conscience that he will 'impartially' examine and consider all questions submitted to the commission? His mind is already so fully made up that it cannot be changed. He would not be permitted to serve as a juror in a twenty-five dollar suit in any State of the Union nor in any part of the world where justice is uprightly administered if he was fresh from a similar denunciation of the case of one of the litigants."

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says: The Democrats are much better pleased to have Morton on the commission than Conkling. Morton has not pretended to practice law for many years, and his attempts at the display of legal knowledge have for a long time been the subject of much amusement among all his associates. It is well said that among the judicial minds which he will now meet in the electoral tribunal he will be no more than a cypher, for his sledge-hammer dogmatism cannot pass current there as it does in the political arena.

Susan Shrock had the reputation in Princeton, Ky., of being a wonderfully trustworthy fortune teller. She was not an old hag, according to custom, but rather young and pretty. She predicted that C. Lewis Hollingsworth would meet death at the hands of unknown men on the highway, and that his horse would return home alone, and that his body would never be found. A few days ago he started on horseback a journey, and soon the horse came back riderless. His wife was grief stricken until she learned that Susan had also disappeared, and that her husband had taken his best clothes and all the money he could accumulate. Now she is searching for his body, but she expects to find it alive near by Susan.

There is said to have been a great revival of Masonry of late years in England. It is attributed in a great measure to the election of the Prince of Wales as Grand Master in 1875. The number of lodges under the English Constitution alone is now little short of 1,600, comprising well-nigh 600,000 members, to say nothing of Masons "unattached" while in Scotland and Ireland nearly 1,000 regularly constituted lodges are reckoned, and hardly a week passes without a new one being consecrated in some part of the United Kingdom. During the last two years the desire to become a Mason has amounted to a positive mania, and at the present moment it has been computed that nearly one out of every four or five men of the upper and middle classes is a Mason.

THE WAY OF IT.

A Washington special to the Cincinnati Enquirer says that as a matter of fact the statement attributed to Ferry, that the debate in the Senate indicated that Senators were of the opinion that the tribunal could not go behind the returns, is contrary to the truth, as Edmunds, just before the vote in the Senate was taken, to test the sense of the Senators, offered an amendment to authorize the tribunal to go behind them, which was voted down. The object was to settle the point whether the Senate could instruct it in any particular, and the expression was evoked that it should not. Edmunds voted, of course, against his own amendment, which he offered only as an evidence to afford the tribunal the information that the bill left all such questions open to their own construction.

GOLD FLUCTUATIONS.

The Philadelphia Press gives the fluctuations in gold for fourteen years. The advance began June, 1862, when from two or three per cent. above currency, it rose in July to 119. After reaching 172 in 1863, it declined in the same year to 123. The upward tendency again began, and in July, 1864, it touched the unprecedented figure of 285. The end of the civil war was followed for the most part by a decline. In 1868, however, it was rated higher than in 1867, and on Black Friday, 1869, it ran up to 162½, a figure not reached since. Through 1870 and 1871 its course was steadily downward, but in 1872 there was a temporary rise above 115, succeeded in the same year by a fall to 105½. The present quotations are almost as low as in 1862.

WELLS AND HIS CONSPIRATORS.

There have been recent developments in Washington City, "rich, rare and racy." Hon. Ex-Gov. Wells had, it seemed, a Secretary by the name of Littlefield, who was perhaps as big a rascal as Wells himself, lacking only opportunity. Before the House Committee at Washington this man Littlefield swore that he deliberately altered and falsified the Louisiana election returns under the direction of Wells, some of the original returns having then been burned and others given to Littlefield to destroy. One of these which he promised to destroy, he took to a Mr. Sparring, his uncle, a Republican citizen, who had voted for the Hayes electors, whose sense of justice was so shocked that he took measures for having the fraud investigated. He induced Littlefield to make with him a long journey to Springfield, Ill.; taking the document by which the charge of fraud, and all the circumstances were frankly explained to ex-Governor Palmer, of that State. It is through this channel that the House committee has been furnished with the clew and materials for the investigation whose results are so startling. Nothing ever equalled the surprise and consternation of Wells and his confederates when they found that the committee was in possession of damning documents which they thought destroyed, and had got hold of witnesses who knew all the facts.

But Littlefield is not the only one who is willing now to turn State's evidence. Picket and Maddox, two of Wells' accomplices have come to the front at the invitation of the Committee and each has a story to tell for himself. Maddox swears that he negotiated, under instructions from Wells, first with Republicans and then with Democrats, endeavoring to sell the vote of the State for one million dollars, or at least, for this sum of money to so alter the returns as to count in the candidate who might pay the money, and it is said that these men can produce documentary evidence to attest the truth of what they tell. If so, as the New York Herald of Thursday, says:

The astounding testimony of the last two days, and especially that part of it given yesterday, explodes all the chances of Mr. Hayes to be the next President unless the credibility of the witnesses can be overturned. The evidence taken yesterday by the House Committee on Privileges and Elections will excite even deeper interest than the proceedings of the Electoral Commission, because the evidence, unless successfully impugned, will compel the commission to reject the action of a returning board steeped in villainy and perjury. No body of honest men, clothed with authority to decide, could make themselves accomplices after the fact of such rascalities as have been sworn to since the beginning of this week. Not even Mr. Morton and Mr. Garfield will vote in the commission to count Louisiana for Hayes if the credit of the witnesses as Hayes cannot be declared elected without the votes of all the disputed States he will have no chance at all unless this fatal testimony from Louisiana can be demolished.

APPLETON'S
AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA
NEW REVISED EDITION.
Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new types and illustrated with several thousand Engravings and Maps.
The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA, was completed in 1873, which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editor and publisher to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.
Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.
The movement of political affairs have kept pace with the discoveries of science and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars, and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.
Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorer of Africa.
The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought, and important changes maintained of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, and which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.
In preparing this new edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the lowest possible rates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most remarkable events in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress, political and historical events.
The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources, carrying it on to a successful termination.
None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming, in fact, a new Cyclopaedia, with a new title, and a new compiler, its predecessor, but with a far greater preliminary expenditure, and with such improved methods in its composition as have suggested longer experience and enlarged knowledge.
The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have been added at the expense of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and to explain the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for pains have been spared to insure the artistic excellence of the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopaedia, and worthy of its high character.
This work is sold to subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in six or seven octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
Price and Style of Binding.
In extra cloth, per vol. $5.00; In Library Leather, per vol. $6.00; In Half Turkey Morocco, per vol. $7.00; In Half Russia, extra gilt edges, per vol. $10.00; In Full Russia, per vol. 10.00.
Thirteen volumes now ready. Succeeding volumes, when completed, will be issued once in two months. Specimen pages of the AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA, showing type, illustrations, etc., will be sent gratis, on application.
