DAILY REVIEW

CAROLINA.
Wisdom Superior Court is in session this week.
Corn sold by the cargo in Newbern on Saturday at 65 cents.
The frost of last week did but little or no damage to the growing fruit in Wayne.
Large shipments of green peas and strawberries are made daily from Goldsboro.
A Concert is proposed to be given soon for the benefit of the Methodist Church in Goldsboro.
The Goldsboro Messenger says: The term of Court just closed, it is estimated, will cost the county about $2,000, to say nothing of the enormous jail fees. The Grand Jury alone costs $342, and the trial jurors perhaps twice this amount. The insolvent fee bills will bring this up to very near $2,000, more or less.
The Goldsboro Messenger says: The Spring term of Wayne Superior Court closed its labors on Saturday, almost the entire two weeks having been consumed in the trial of criminal cases. A dozen able-bodied negro men leave here Tuesday morning for Raleigh to aid in completing the Western Railroads.
The Goldsboro Messenger says: The Schultz-Edwards breach of promise muddle is at last off the court house docket, greatly to the relief of the court, the lawyers and the entire community. The coup de grace in the case was reached on Saturday when it was dismissed at the instance of the parties interested. We learn that Mr. Edwards paid Miss Schultz $450 to heal the breach.
The Newbern Nut Shell says: The wreckers who captured the abandoned schooner Huper, loaded with hay, shortly after the terrible storm which visited our coast, will bring the vessel and that portion of the cargo which has not already been disposed of in small lots, to this city this week. There are some twelve persons interested, who will realize about $1,500 each from the capture.
The Monitor Express says: One of the most cold-blooded murders which it has ever been our lot to hear of, was perpetrated in Anson county on last Thursday morning. The particulars as we get them are as follows: George Carpenter, a young man, son of Mr. Thomas Carpenter, who lived near Lanesboro, about eighteen miles from this place, on Thursday morning last deliberately loaded his double-barreled gun with buck shot, went to the field where Mr. Nehemiah Permenter with his father and sister were at work, and calling him to the fence emptied both loads into his body, inflicting wounds from which he died in a very short time. Carpenter immediately fled. Mr. Permenter was a young man about 25 years of age; he was a poor man and illiterate, but by hard work and economy was getting a very good start in the world. He leaves a wife and one child to mourn his loss. Carpenter was a man of good family, and was thought to be inefficient.
The Goldsboro Messenger says: Two cowardly and most outrageous attempts at assassination were made on Mr. Wm. Bonitz, last week, within a few days. On Wednesday night at about 11 o'clock, as he was going through his garden from his place of business to his dwelling house, some cowardly scoundrel climbed the fence and fired at him, but fortunately the ball merely passed through his coat, doing no other damage. Again on Friday night a stone the bottle was thrown at him as he stepped for a moment out of his door on the side walk. The bottle was thrown with desperate force by some villain ambushed behind a tree near the railroad, but happily merely glanced his head and did no other damage but smashing the window. It was raining at the time and the night was very dark. Nothing was seen of the would-be assassin and only his foot-steps were heard as he took to his heels to avoid the powder and lead that were promptly dispatched after him by Mr. Bonitz, and others who happened to be in the billiard saloon at the time. As usual the police were not to be found. We trust, however, that the exertions made by Mr. Bonitz to ferret out the guilty one will meet with success. There is no doubt that it is one of the same gang of burglars, three of whom were sent to the penitentiary last week for 10 years each, and who would have been hung but for the clemency extended them by Mr. Bonitz.
The People Want Proof.
There is no medicine prescribed by physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and superior virtue of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for severe Coughs, Colds settled on the breast, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs. A proof of that fact is that any person afflicted, can get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular sized at 75 cents. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing every one that use it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it.
THE PRESENT SUPERIORITY of the age over the past is largely determined by the excellence and cheapness of articles of daily use. Among these must be preferred such a household boon as DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER, which is the ruling favorite with the public. The cans are always full weight, the powder itself pure, strong and perfect in its adaptations to use.

A. SHRIER.—Collars by the bucket full—25 cents.
Butchers meats continue high.
Bonnets no longer match suits.
Wall paper on Japanese figure and patterns is popular.
Many of the new bonnets look like walking flower gardens.
A few very fine fresh-water trout are brought to market now.
Mr. J. F. Garrell is expected to take charge of the Poor House on the first of June.
A valuable letter, mailed at the post office to-day, required eleven dollars and twenty cents postage.
If yesterday's rain extended to the head waters of the Cape Fear, we may look for another freshet in a few days.
There were several parties to the Sound to-day, and the carrying capacities of Capt. Southerland's stables were put to the test.
The pyramid of flowers at Capt Lippitts store will be raffled off this evening or to-morrow morning. Those who purpose taking chances should secure them at once.
The Pic-Nic To-Morrow.
The indications are that the weather will be fine to-morrow and the picnic to be given then at the Wilmington Gardens promises to be a lively one. Dancing will commence at 3 o'clock. Tickets may be had of the Committee. Messrs W. H. Gerken C. F. VonKanpiner and John Werner.
The Whiting Rifles.
A specimen of the uniform of the Whiting Rifles is now on exhibition in Mr. Heinsberger's window, on Market street. It is of gray cloth trimmed with black and gold facing, the coat being double breasted and cut as a dress coat. The cap is of black with gold braid and a small white feather. This is the design for the privates.
Truly Magnificent.
One of the most magnificent displays of flowers ever seen in this city is now on exhibition at Capt J. W. Lippitt's store, corner Front and Princess streets, where it is to be raffled to-day for the benefit of the Smithville sufferers. It is a huge pyramid of sweets all of which were culled from the hot house of Mr. F. A. Newbury, at Magnolia, and by his lady, Mrs. Annie Woolvin Newbury, by whom the donation is made. The pyramid is expected to bring $25.
Dr. Wood's Lecture.
We publish on the fourth page of this issue a carefully prepared synopsis of the admirable lecture delivered by Dr. Thos. F. Wood, last evening, before the Historical and Scientific Society. The paper was most carefully prepared and is the result of close and minute examinations of the subjects. It is on a subject which has never before been handled in an address and the information which it contains relative to the plants peculiar to this section is not only interesting but valuable in the extreme.
County Commissioners.
The regular monthly meeting of the Board of County Commissioners was held last evening, present Mr. Wagner, the Chairman; and Commissioners Worth, Grainger, Nixen and Holmes.
The following were drawn as the regular venire of jurors for the June term of the Criminal Court of New Hanover county, as follows:
Isham McClammy, W. H. M. Koch, Thomas J. Herring, Chas. F. W. Bissinger, Julius Fernberger, W. A. Cumming, John E. Sylvia, M. M. Katz, Frank Toomer, Robert G. Rankin, Alonzo Hewlett, J. H. Borneman, W. B. Binford, Joseph Davis, J. F. Stoller, B. F. Mitchell, James W. Green, Geo. W. Green, John J. Hewlett, H. B. Willis, Henry W. Bryant, Preston Cumming, Seth Walton, Stephen A. Craig, J. T. Edens, Wm. McLaurin, James Elder, F. M. Beasley, O. G. Parsley, Jr., James Jarman.
E. E. Green came before the Board and qualified as County Examiner.
The Board then adjourned.

The Thermometer.
From the United States Signal Office at this place we obtain the following report of the thermometer, as taken this morning at 7:31 o'clock:
Augusta, 66; Charleston, 69; Galveston 65; Jacksonville, 70; Mobile, 61; Montgomery, 57; New Orleans, 67; Norfolk, 52; Savannah, 63; Wilmington, 55.
For Memorial Day.
The President of the Memorial Association request us to state that the school room of Misses Burr and James, in the rear of St. James' Church, will be headquarters on Thursday, the 10th. Members and friends of the Association are urgently requested to meet at the above named place at 9 o'clock Thursday to prepare the decorations.
The Managers of the Association hope that all interested in this Memorial celebration will contribute as many flowers as possible, and ask that they be sent in early on Memorial Day.
Shade Trees.
A few pretty shade trees placed where they ought to be, would in due time become a source of comfort and beauty worth very much to the inmates of the household. But do not place them too near the dwelling. Let the sunshine strike your house for several hours both morning and evening. It is necessary to health. Place the trees so that the shadow, when the trees have acquired their size, shall just reach the walls of the dwelling in the hottest part of the day, which will prevent radiation, and keep the atmosphere around the house cool.

The Fifth Day of May, 1864.
Saturday last, the 5th of May, was the anniversary of the second battle of the Wilderness, fought on the 5th day of May 1864, when Grant crossed the Rappahannock at United States Ford and encountered for the first time the army of Northern Virginia under its beloved commander and idol—the noble Lee. It was after this first engagement when Grant found that he had no easy road to travel to reach the Confederate Capital, that he telegraphed to Washington the famous dispatch, "I intend to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," and it did take all summer, and the winter too, and near on to another summer, before he found himself in glorious old Richmond.
But the summer had not half gone, when after the second battle of Cold Harbor, in June, 1864, Ulysses found to his utter dismay, that General Lee had killed, captured, and placed hors du combat more men for him than he, Lee, had in his entire army, but then what was the difference to Grant, the butcher? all he had to do was to make out his requisition for more men and whiskey, send it to Washington, have it filled, and then place his men in line of battle seven and eight lines deep if necessary, fill their canteens with whiskey, and start them for ward; and thus the bloody work of slaughtering these poor human beings went on, while Grant walked in popular favor over the dead bodies of his brave soldiers.
But Grant did not stick to his original proposition and "fight it out on this line" as he said he would do, he kept sidling on down by his left flank, while Lee kept pace with him, moving by his right, until finally the two armies confronted each other around Petersburg, which position Grant could have gained, had he possessed the proper generalship, by another route, say via City Point or West Point even, with a loss of less than one-third of the men that he sustained. As soon as this mighty modern Ulysses had invested Petersburg, he seemed to settle down to quiet ease, and concluded by a simple method of arithmetic that, as the war had been going on for nearly four years, and our resources were nearly all gone, our ports all blockaded, with only an occasional chance of making an entry, and our reserves all called out, it was simply a matter of time, say so many months, before Lee would have to succumb; or, in other words, that as he had the whole world to draw his troops from, and Lee only the narrow limits of the Confederacy, as a matter of course it only required the time as compared with what 1,000 men could do against 100, and if Lee should kill for Grant every day 1,000 men, Grant in return would certainly kill some of Lee's men, and no matter how few, he would in course of time finally exhaust him, because the Army of Northern Virginia could not be reinforced. And this is about the extent of the generalship displayed by the man to whom the noble and gifted Lee was compelled from sheer exhaustion to surrender.
There was a singular coincidence about these two battles of the Wilderness, fought on nearly the same ground, and within one year and three days of each other. So singular in the results, incidents and accidents, we may say, were these two contested fields, that it seems as if the hand of destiny, fate, and the God of battles even were against the Southern troops. There seemed to be a sort of presentiment of something dreadful, of some impending calamity that permeated the whole army, or at least a considerable portion of it on that eventful day, as they marched in column up the stone road and then filed to the right to take up position in line of battle, scarcely a word was spoken; all seemed as silent as a funeral procession in Gen. Ed. Johnson's Division, for the troops, unlike they were on the previous occasion, knew as well as if it had been told them, exactly what was coming, i. e. they knew that in a very short time they were to meet in deadly conflict, the Army of the Potomac reinforced, strengthened, reorganized, armed and equipped with all the best and most improved guns; and while they had the utmost confidence in their corps commanders and in their grand old Captain Lee, still they could not but recollect how they missed Jackson at Gettysburg, and the full 10,000 comrades they had left upon those bloody heights, and they still believed that things would have been different had Jackson been there.
It was with these melancholy thoughts and evil forebodings, that Gen. Lee's army engaged the enemy on the 5th day of May, 1864. The first day was a victory, the second day came the misfortune that, like the previous Wilderness battle, had such a disastrous effect upon our cause. Longstreet, while in the act of executing a flank movement, which it is confidently believed would have driven Grant back across the Rappahannock that night, was suddenly called to reinforce A. P. Hill, whose line had been broken, and in doing so, Longstreet (the old war-horse, as General Lee used to familiarly term him,) was shot and severely wounded in the shoulder, and this too, sad to relate, by an accident from our own men. General Jenkins, from South Carolina, was killed at the same time and in the same way. Longstreet was disabled from field service for many months, and thus it was that within a little over one year's time, on nearly the same fatal spot, General Lee was deprived, at the most critical period, of the services of his two ablest generals.
Of course it is all mere speculation as to what might have been the final result of this unhappy conflict, but it is our firm opinion, but for the accident which occurred to General Jackson on the 2d of May, 1863, or the one to Longstreet on the 6th of May 1864, the star of the Confederacy would have been shining to-day in the firmament of nations, with a brilliancy equal to the genius and courage displayed by Lee and the band of 8,000 noble heroes that stacked arms on the 9th day of April at Appomattox Court House.
