ISAAC W. KING.—Thanksgiving Dinner.
Only two trifling cases before the City Court to-day.

The woman who doesn't wish she had a seal skin cloak for the winter hasn't been born yet.

The problem of buying a ten-dollar Christmas present with seventy-five cents available cash will presently present itself for the elucidation of the brave young man who is doing his own courting.

The fact that fewer loafers now ornament the street corners, is no proof of a diminution in our adult population. It merely signifies, according to probabilities, that the weather is getting cooler.

No Through Mail.
There were no mails through from the north to-day and will be none to-night. The morning train will be discontinued for a day or two until connection can be again made at Weldon, due notice of which will be given. It is probable that this connection will be made to-morrow and that the through mail matter which is now accumulating at Weldon may be transferred thence or on Thursday at the latest.

Handsomely Barque.
The Br. barque North Carolina, now lying at the wharf of the C. C. R. W., probably attracted more attention than any vessel which sailed into this port. As a model she is said by judges to be as near perfect as is possible. She is remarkably strong built and is one of the best appointed ships we have ever noticed. She is supplied with all the latest improvements; her mast are of iron, as are also her main yard arms; her deck houses are of walnut and the cabin is made of the best mahogany. The North Carolina is built at a cost of nearly sixty thousand dollars, expressly for this trade and when loaded she draws less than 12 feet.

Lamp Explosion.
A white woman who lives near the gas works in the lower part of the city, but whose name our informant could not recall, was severely burned a few days since by the explosion of a lamp. The burns were severest on her right arm and side. Her injuries were attended to when it was found that though severe, they are not necessarily dangerous.

A Broken Thigh.
A colored man by the name of Theodore Allen had his leg crushed by the falling on him of a piece of scantling at one of the mills a day or two since. He received the necessary surgical attendance when it was found that his right thigh bone was broken. This was bandaged and splinted and at last accounts he was doing well.

Opera House.
A very respectable audience assembled at the Opera House last evening to witness the first performance in this city of the Heywood Combination. The entertainment upon the whole was far above mediocrity, and in fact the only drawback to the performance we were able to discover was the singing. With the reputation the Heywoods enjoy we had expected to hear better singing but what was lacking in this respect was made up in others. Their jokes were all new and the entire performance was peculiarly free from anything approaching vulgarity.

The Arnold Brothers are an host in themselves and Miss Siddons gained for herself many friends. Frank West was there and acquitted himself in his usually happy-style which always delights an audience.
; Mr. Cressville, cornet solo, was good though we think he might have been improved on. Upon the whole the troupe is one which is bound to give satisfaction to any audience and we do not hesitate to advise our friends who wish to have a pleasant evening to visit the Heywoods to-night.

"It is Perfectly Splendid."
"There's nothing like it." "Never could use baking powder till I tried yours." "Can't speak too highly of it." "That's what they say of DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER."

Improvements.

The stables of the Street Car Company have been moved from the corner of Seventh and Red Cross streets to Seventeenth and Market streets. Among other improvements on the line we have noticed that the broken perforated seats of the cars have been replaced with new ones, which not only add to the appearance of the cars but to the comfort of the passengers.

One of the Old Timers.
The skull of a human being was picked up upon the road to the Sound, near Tooners mill bridge, about five miles from this city, yesterday, by Justice Wagner, and brought in to the city. It is supposed to be the skull of one of the tribe of an ancestor of Col. S. Bull or Capt. S. Tail. The skull is a very old one and had perhaps been in the ground for two hundred years or more as there were roots growing from the crevices of the front and clinging to the bones.

Striped Silks.
A Parisian caprice, said to be due to Worth, is that of returning to striped silks. Those an inch wide are especially in favor such as a stripe of black satin alternating with a stripe of black gross grain, or else, in contrasting colors for house dresses, as old gold satin striped with garnet or with black velvet, clair de lune with garnet or pale blue stripes with gray separated by threads of cardinal red. A Worth costume of inch-wide stripes of black satin and gross grain has a belted basque with plain satin plastron edged with thread lace, while the postilion back has only a satin piping. The plain silk sleeves are so tight as to need gathers at the elbow, and are slashed across in three places above the wrists to show an inner cuff of the striped silk which extends below the sleeve.

Small Talk.
Never abuse small talk, nobody does unless he be a stranger to its conveniences. Small talk is the small change of life; there is no getting on without it. There are times when 'tis folly to be wise; when 'a little nonsense is very palatable, and when gravity and sedateness ought to be kicked down stairs. A philosopher cuts a poor figure in the ballroom unless he leaves his wisdom at home. Metaphysics is as instructive in the midst of agreeable prattle as a death's head on a festival board. We have met with men who were too lofty for small talk. They would never condescend to play with a ribbon or flirt a fan. They were above such trifling; in other words, they were above making themselves agreeable, above pleasing, and above being pleased. They were all wisdom, all gravity, and all tediousness, which they bestowed upon company with more than Dogberry's generosity. A man who cannot talk has no more business in society than a statue. The world is made up of trifles, and he who can trifle elegantly and gracefully is a valuable acquisition to mankind. He is a Corinthian column in the fabric of society.

The Sampson Fair.
A note from the Secretary of the Sampson county Fair, Mr. O. L. Chesnut, speaks in very sanguine terms as to the prospects. He says that the indications are good for the best fair ever held in that county. The people of Sampson and the adjoining counties seem thoroughly aroused on the subject. The liberal premium list offered by the Society, as well as the very liberal special premiums offered, are already having an excellent effect. One of the principal attractions of the occasion will be the presence of Maj. Burgess, the Principal of the Cape Fear Military Academy, with about fifty cadets. The following is a corrected list of the Marshals as furnished us by Mr. Chesnut:
Col. John Ashford, Chief Marshal.

Mr. Chas. L. Weill, formerly of this city, but now of San Francisco, has returned here on a visit to his family and friends.

This Morning's Fire.

At or about eleven o'clock this morning, the alarm of fire was sounded, caused by the burning of a frame house on the premises of Mr. Sam. Davis, on the corner of Ninth and Market streets. The fire, when discovered, had gained such headway as to be beyond the control of the few who had discovered it, and the general alarm was sounded, which brought out the fire department. Upon reaching the scene of conflagration, we found that the kitchen of the residence of Mr. Davis was enveloped in flames. The steam fire engine Cape Fear being the first to arrive was the first to throw a stream of water on the burning building and did much towards saving the dwelling house. The kitchen was occupied by two or three families of colored people and most of their household effects were destroyed. Delia Young, one of the tenants of the house, at the time of the fire was down town on a shopping expedition and arrived only in time to see her house enveloped in flames. She had left two small children in the house and through fear of their safety fainted, when opposite the residence of Mr. Donald McLae. The poor woman was carried into an adjoining house and such assistance as was near by, rendered her. A daughter of Mr. Davis was overcome by the excitement and lost her consciousness, and was removed to an adjoining building. One of the members of the fire department was overcome by the heat and he was also removed, and assistance rendered him.

The property belongs to L. Voller but we have not been able to find out the amount of insurance on the building. Mr. Davis' loss through breakage of furniture was about one hundred dollars on which there is no insurance.

The horses belonging to the Little Giant steam engine were in use by the city authorities and happened to be down at Kidder's mill when the first alarm was given. Notwithstanding this fact however, the above named steamer threw the second stream of water, and we do not think that more than five minutes could have elapsed after her arrival on the ground before she had a stream on the fire. It was the quickest work we ever saw.

In a short time all three steam engines, the Cape Fear, Little Giant and Adrian were there at work in the order named. The Hook and Ladder Company as usual were also promptly on hand and worked with the zeal that has always characterized the members of that splendid organization.

Lippincott's Magazine.

Lippincott's Magazine for December opens with an interesting and richly illustrated article on Sicily, by Alfred T. Bacon. "Captured by Cossacks," is the title of another illustrated paper detailing the adventures of a French officer who served under Davoust in 1813. The new serial, "For Percival," also illustrated, continues to form one of the most attractive features of the Magazine.
An article which cannot fail to attract much attention and excite a lively interest is one containing the reminiscences of a venerable lady ("M. T.") belonging to the highest circles of Washington society, who was the guest of Madison, an inmate of the White House during the presidency of Jackson, and an intimate friend of Washington Irving, John P. Kennedy, and other celebrities. The paper, which is full of lively descriptions and amusing anecdotes, is entitled "Days of My Youth."
T. S. Perry, the well-known Boston critic, discusses Ouida's Novels, and explains the causes of their immense popularity, despite their glaring faults and the censures of reviewers. William Owens writes entertainingly on the "Folk-Lore of the Southern Negroes," and Olive Logan gives an account of "English Domestic and their Ways." There is a story of French Internationalism, "A Portrait," by Ita Aniol Prokop. Mrs. R. H. Davis' powerful novelette, and Will Wallace Harney's tale of Southern manners, "A Kentucky Duel," are both concluded. Among the poems, "Selim," by Annie Porter, deserves notice; and the "Gossip," besides much other lively and agreeable reading, has a description of the departure of the Imperial Guards, by a Moscow correspondent.

This number concludes the twentieth volume and the tenth year of the issue of this magazine. The conductors announce attractive features for the new year, and promise that no effort will be spared to maintain and increase its popularity.

Unmailable Letters.

The following is a list of unmailable letters remaining in the city Postoffice:
Alex MacRae, Shoe Heel, Robeson county, N. C.; Mrs. Phillis Wards, Sumerville, S. C.; Mrs. Catharine Honrine.

Church Excursion.

We have been informed that there will be an excursion from Columbia to this city on Saturday next of the pastor and members, numbering about two thousand, of the different colored Methodist churches of Columbia. The excursion is gotten up for the purpose of raising money to build another church in Columbia.

The River at Weldon.

A gentleman who arrived here last night from Weldon, gives a very graphic account of the floods at that place. The damages have been immense, but so far as known there has been no loss of life. Some of those who lived on a little island just above where the Seaboard bridge was located, were, and still are in danger, the island being entirely submerged and the people residing there having been compelled to take refuge in the trees. A boat succeeded in crossing yesterday, about 11 o'clock, for the purpose of sending a message on to Portsmouth over the wires. In Weldon, the water has invaded the business portion of the town and is within a few feet of the railroad shed. The torrent is roaring like the waves of the ocean during a storm and almost the entire country around Weldon is being covered by water. The plantation of Mr. N. M. Long, embracing about 12,000 acres, is entirely under water and it is supposed that nearly all of the crops on it will be lost. The embankment of the Petersburg Road, 15 to 18 feet high, which runs along the Roanoke river for a mile, was broken through on Sunday night about 12 o'clock and the "noise of the madness of the waves" is described as having been terrific.
