LOCAL NEWS.

New Advertisements. C. P. REMSEN—Dyeing and Scouring. H. G. SMALLBONES, Sec'y—St. George & St. Andrew's Society.

Wood has dropped a little and is selling now from wharf at 80 to 90 cents a load.

Silence is not always golden, since oysters are always getting in broils and stews.

The annual meeting of the lot owners of Oakdale Cemetery will be held this evening.

The Superior Court for Northampton county convenes on Monday, the 21st inst., Judge McKoy presiding.

The wind blew at a fearful rate from the east last night and we fear that we may hear of some disasters to the shipping.

City Court. One white man, for being drunk and disorderly, was fined $5, or fifteen days imprisonment on bread and water. He was committed.

Women dispute about other matters, but all agree on the merits of DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER as par excellence the best of all. Grocers throughout the country keep it, and find it gives supreme satisfaction. By using it the housewife is sure of delicious bread, rusks, rolls, biscuits, buckwheat cakes and all the delicacies made from flour.

The New Chief Justice. Our information proved correct. His Excellency, the Governor, has tendered the Chief Justiceship to Hon. W. N. II. Smith, who has accepted it and the commission is to be signed, sealed and delivered in due form to-day.

Bellevue Cemetery. During the year just past there were 36 persons buried in Bellevue Cemetery, 20 of whom have been removed. Of the remainder 14 were adults, their ages ranging from 25 to 67 years; 8 were children, who of a were from 1 to 12 years previous to good the oldest of whom was beyond had been of age.

Mr. W. H. Sullivan, of the Evangeline Opera Bouffe Combination, arrived in this city on Saturday and has been busy in preparing the stage and scenery for the performance to-night. Mr. Singleton assures us there will be nothing in the play that the most sensitive could take exception to and we feel justified in saying that the performance is one that your wives or daughters could view with impunity. The troupe arrived this morning and have familiarized themselves with our stage.

A New Enterprise. Mr. F. A. Newbury, formerly of Magnolia, who has recently removed to this city, will transport here his famous Rosewink Gardens and expects to have every thing in apple-pie order by the first of February. He has purchased the beautiful property on the Southside of Market street, between Eighth and Ninth, recently owned by F. M. King, Esq. and it is on the ground attached to this residence that the gardens will be laid out and the green-houses and hot houses built. We welcome Mr. Newbury to our midst and trust that his venture may prove a profitable one.

An Amusing Incident.

Quite an amusing incident happened to one of the gentlemanly conductors of the W., C. & A. R. R., a few nights ago, while on his regular trip from here to Columbia, which we think is worth relating even though it is at the expense of our good and genial friend, Capt. W. It seems that owing to the fast schedule between here and Columbia on the night train very little time is allowed for stoppages at way stations, and on this account women folks have not got much time to dilly-dally by kissing each other and saying good-bye a half dozen times without the danger of part of the crowd, or something belonging to it, being left, as the sequel to this incident we are trying to relate amply proves. On the occasion referred to, the night express mail train arrived at Whiteville, after 9 o'clock, made a short stop and took on several passengers. There were several of the gentler sex waiting to take passage at the depot when the train arrived, and among the passengers who first boarded the cars, as soon as the train stopped, was a man with a baby in his arms. Pretty soon the Conductor sang out: "All aboard!" the bell cord was pulled, the engine blew and away the train sped on its journey Southward.

The Conductor went around as usual, collecting tickets, and when he approached the man with the baby, he was addressed in this wise:

"Look yere, Captain! what am I gwine to do with this baby?" "What are you going to do with what?" replied the Conductor, evidently surprised at the question. "What am I gwine to do with this yer young 'un?" repeated the man with the baby in his arms. "How do I know what you are going to do with it," replied the Conductor, holding out his hand for the passenger's ticket, while in the other hand he held his conductor's punch, in a manner that suggested that the question was one he had nothing to do with, and not at all germane to the subject which he had under consideration at that time. "Well; but," says the man with the baby; "I gits off at the next station and I'll have to leave the chile on the train. 'Yon'll do no such thing," replied the Conductor, beginning to show some interest in the subject. "What have I got to do with the baby? and what will I do with a baby on my train? How came you by the baby? Whose is it? Where did you get it from?" asked the Conductor in quick succession as he began to see trouble ahead in disposing of the baby. "Why," replied the man with the baby, "a woman at Whiteville gin it to me to hold until she could get on the train, just as I was stepping on the car, and supposing she was right behind me, I took the chile and stepped aboard, and pretty soon the train started and that's the last time I've seed the woman. But here's the baby and I'm gwine to get off purty soon, so I'll jest leave it right here."

The Conductor looked puzzled. Just then the whistle from the engine sounded and he approached to the next station.

The baby jumped up and laid preparatory to getting out of the car. The engine whistled, the signal to go ahead was given and the train was soon under full speed. The Conductor returned to his new charge and found it yelling; what to do he did not know. In his despair he picked the child up in his arms and tossed it up and down trying to quiet it; but the child wouldn't hush; it evidently wanted its mammy. The distressed Conductor, who by the way, we forgot to mention, is a single gentleman, tried to recollect some of his old nursery songs, and commenced by humming those he could call to mind to quiet this little suffering piece of humanity, but again our friend failed in his noble effort. He then tried a little baby talk and commenced talking to the little baby somewhat after this wise: "Booby, tooty poor little shing, what de matter wid de yittle precious, dont chi, bess it yittle heart." Again our hero failed in his laudable efforts, and in his despair, at the next station telegraphed to every station on the road in search of the missing mother, but no answer came from the poor little infant's maternal.

The Conductor, however, succeeded in exciting the sympathy of all the operatives at the different stations on the road and numerous were the inquiries that were made of him in regard to the little infant's health until by the time the train reached its destination, it got to be a dangerous question and the telegraph gentlemen that were so solicitous about the young one's welfare had to stand well off when they propounded the question. We are happy to say, however, that the mother was found next day, having been left at Whiteville while hurrying to say good bye to some very dear friends.

We have an important engagement in the country this afternoon, or we would like to see Capt. W. and congratulate him upon his success as a nurse, but we would remind our genial friend Superior Court meets here to-day and that he must not get mad and do anything rash, for the Grand Jury might get hold of it.

Scarlatina. This dreadful disease, sometimes combined with its near relative, diphtheria, stalks remorselessly over some sections of our Eastern counties. It generally chooses its victims from the loveliest and choicest flowers of childhood. This has just been mournfully illustrated in the gloom and sorrow which now sits enthroned in the household of our afflicted friend, Dr. W. T. Ennett, of Pender. A violent form of scarlet fever, combined with that inexorable disease, diphtheria, has just taken from him another of his children. This was a bright and lovely daughter, Bettie, four and a half years of age, who was sick fifteen days. A large number of kind and noble hearts beat in sympathy and sorrow for the heart-stricken father and mother whose grief is the more poignant, that this is the third brilliant and promising child taken from their almost idolatrous affection within the last few years by the hand of disease. One infant, of all the beautiful flowers that emitted light and joy to their once happy home, is all that is left for their clustering affections to concentrate upon. May the God of Mercies temper the wind to the shorn lamb.

"Early, transient, elated as morning dew, She sparkled, was exhaled, and went to Heaven."

Evangeline. Rice's Combination, which is to show to-night, comes to us highly endorsed and udging from the criticisms we have read we feel assured that the troupe is one deserving of patronage. Of them a temporary says:

The Evangeline of last night was not the one by Longfellow, but the one by Goodwin. Longfellow is a poet; Goodwin is the ex-pitcher of the Harvard Base Ball Club. What the piece lacks therefore in poetry, it gains in movement.

"Evangeline" is a purely American production. It could have been written nowhere else. "Evangeline" to be understood must be seen. Those who last night failed to see it have missed the best play which has been on the Lafayette boards, if a play on words can be so called. The house was full and the play also of good hits and genuine bouffe. Indeed, it is a pure article of the latter without a taint of vulgarity or a repulsive feature. The character of the Lone Fisherman is unique. He appears in every scene and never utters a word. This talent for silence can scarcely be called distinctively American.

Miss Webster's "Evangeline" was pretty, piquant and graceful. Her name might appear at the head of the bills without doing violence to the proprieties. Gabriel was described as an angel on earth, which opinion was verified by La Blanche, the lawyer, who saw him (her) "take a horn."

The duet "Go not, Happy Day," by Evangeline and Gabriel, was the vocal gem of the evening, but not by any means so full of pretty acting as the "kissing song." La Blanche, the slyster lawyer, was supposed to be a villain, but he could never make an audience believe it. He is the soul of the comedy—excepting always the "Lone Fisherman." Captain Dietrich's make-up as Ben Butler was happy in the extreme. The "Heifer Dance" was a artistic as it was novel. The boys were not satisfied with a single representation, but would heifer dance again in response to a hearty encore.

What the play goes wants is to be pleased. Evangeline gives all its adjectives claims. Every person in the house last night was more highly entertained than he expected to be. Evangeline is a great success.

Opera House. Janauschek's impersonation of Lady Macbeth at the Opera House on Saturday night before a large, refined and appreciative audience was greeted with great applause. Janauschek has been justly called the Queen of Tragedy and her impersonation of Lady Macbeth, one of the most superb of Shakespeare's many superb characters, was simply indescribable. To be appreciated, she must be seen. She was well supported and there were none present but will long remember the unusual and delightful entertainment accorded them.

Fish and oysters are almost curiosities in this market, so scarce have they become of late.

An Improvement.

The city authorities are having a flagstone crossing made on Market street, between Front and Second. It begins just in front of Mr. T. H. Howey's shoe store and will connect with the curbing on the South side of the street in front of Mr. M. Katz's dry goods house. It will be a great convenience and is something which has been long desired.

Arrested.

On Saturday night as officer A. Elping was making his rounds on Nutt street, near the freight depot of the W. & W. and W., C. & A. Railroad, he was requested by James Keegan, a white man who keeps a grocery on the street above mentioned, to go and quell a disturbance which was going on in his back room. The officer of the law complied with the request and walked in, but as soon as he entered the back room he says that he was set upon by a crowd of colored men, and women, his policemen's badge torn off and himself pretty roughly handled. In the mean time Keegan remained perfectly quiet and passive and offered the policeman no assistance whatever, and when called upon by the officer for a piece of rope to tie one of the malefactors whom he had managed to throw down, the fellow very quietly threw him a piece of paper twine. In consequence of the crowd being too many for one man; they all managed to escape, but four have been arrested since, and are now lodged in the guard house. James Henry McNeill was arrested and locked up last night, and three women who bare the names of Dorcas, Caroline and Susan Frank, were arrested in Ramoth alley, near the railroad this morning and carried to the guard house. The trial comes off to-morrow morning.
