VIEWS AND REVIEWS.

It is estimated that 100,000 persons have signed the temperance pledge in New England since December 1, 1877.
In Great Barrington, Massachusetts, out of a population of 4,820, 2,100 have put on the blue ribbon; in Springfield 4,600 out of 26,713; in Adams, 3,600 out of 12,- 090.

Commencing August 14th, the World's Conference of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held in Geneva, Switzerland, and excursions are being organized in this country to the Conference, which will also embrace a seven weeks' tour of Europe. The excursionists will sail by the Anchor Line steamers July 13th.

Mark Hopkins, the Treasurer and brains of the Central Pacific Railroad, who died childless, leaving fifteen millions, wore shabby clothes, dug his own garden, picked up bits of old iron when he saw them, worked until two o'clock in the morning, wrote more on a page than most business men put on sheets, and paid $5 a month rent. His adopted son Tim is at college.

A scheme for connecting the Prussian capital with the sea by means of a navigable canal provided with locks so as to enable vessels to ascend to the higher level is pronounced feasible by the Polytechnic society of Berlin. Berlin is situated about 105-feet above the level of the Baltic, which is about equal to that of the German Ocean.

As showing the cost of labor in Europe, the rate of wages paid on certain railroad works of the same class was: In Portugal, $1.45 a week; in Ireland, $2.20; in France, $2.90, and in England $5.30.
Nevertheless, it was found that over the whole works the same amount of earth had been moved for the same amount of money.

Italy has two cities, Florence and Naples, which are practically bankrupt. The former was ruined by the removal of the Court of the Italian King to Rome. In the latter the municipal officers being unable to give an account of their stewardship, attempted to bribe the press, but failed through the firmness of the Prefect, who has appealed to the central government for assistance against them.

According to official returns 2,256,860 of the inhabitants of Belgium speak French, 2,650,800 Flemish, 38,070 German, 340,770 French and Flemish, 22,- 700 French and German, 1,790 Flemish and German, 5,490 French, Flemish and German, and 2,070 are deaf and dumb.
It is now proposed to the Chamber that every Belgian subject shall have the right of having all public business, correspondence, &c., done for him in the language which he understands.

The mining and manufacturing of the phosphate rock in South Carolina has become one of the leading and most important interests of the State. From small beginnings, the shipment and manufacture has risen in nine years to the large amount of 199,986 tons in 1877-78, of which 115,965 were shipped to foreign ports, 64,486 tons coastwise, and 18,635 tons were consumed by home manufacturers.

Dublin has a bad reputation for drunkenness, but it must be conceded that if its greatest brewer and distiller derive their vast wealth from sources which do harm, they are unexampled among men in this line of business for munificence. Sir B.
Guinness's magnificent restoration of St.
Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, has been surpassed by Mr. Rice, the distiller, who has spent $1,000,000 on the complete restoration of Christ Church, the other Protestant cathedral in that city.

The French Minister of Commerce and Agriculture persists year after year in publishing statistics showing certain facts in the champagne trade. The statistics for 1877 give a total of 16,400,000 bottles of this wine exported directly from that country. Now, admitting that Germany exports half this amount of champagne—which is to grossly exaggerate the case—we should have a total of about 23,000,000 bottles provided for the consumption of the whole world! In the face of these figures dealers would have us believe that the champagne sold in this country is imported from France.

Some boys in Markland, Mich., started a show in a cellar. The admission was two cents. The performance ranged from recitations to somersaults, and a feature was marksmanship of the kind that killed Volante. A ten-year-old boy held an apple on his head for a larger boy to shoot at; but the attempt was a failure. Just as the marksman took aim, the target-boy felt the apple slipping off, reached up to catch it, and had a bullet hole put neatly through his hand. The wounded lad's mother made a raid on the show, and closed it.

POLITICAL DEGENERACY--ITS CONSEQUENCES AND REMEDIES.

The last sixteen years of our national existence has developed a condition of such marked and rapidly increasing moral degeneracy among public men, and especially among those of the Republican party, that it is becoming daily a question of vital importance to the stability of our Republic how the public servants of the whole people may be compelled to devote themselves to the true interests of their constituency as well as to the general welfare of the nation.

The dark and aggressive passions of the human heart since the late war seem to have found their most complete development in the breasts of Senators and Representatives of our National Legislature. Even the Chief Executive, as may be instanced in the case of ex-President Grant, has descended from his lofty seat in the watch tower of his country's liberties, to lend himself, a willing instrument, in furthering the plots of political tricksters, and in promoting the oppressions of a large section of the Union, whose rights were secured by the very constitution which he had sworn to support. And this same President has set the example of boldly and shamelessly interposing his official power to screen criminals duly convicted of crimes that should have consigned them to a life of shame and ignominy. And yet this same peculiar party is training him by an extended tour of the Old World for a resumption of the reins of government in 1880.
That, by strengthening the salient points of his national character which are alone of absolute power and an utter disregard of the rights of others will render him a more pliant instrument in overthrowing the liberties of the American people. But these are not the only, nor even the worst, features of the moral degeneracy referred to. The department of our government to which we have been taught from childhood to look for purity of action—that department, the administration of whose duties has from the very inception of our government been entrusted to those public servants most distinguished for political wisdom, statesmanship, and purity of character, one which by its original constitution was made independent in its action, in order the better to secure it against even the suspicion of party bias, has within a recent period largely lent itself to the concentration of one of the most stupendous frauds that has ever been perpetrated under the form of law, and by which the very existence of our national life has been jeopardized. And today, and for all time to come, for the events here spoken of have passed into history, those venerable graybeards, who to serve the best of party have willingly prostrated the powers of their time-honored offices, will be known by all true and patriotic men as the legitimate offspring of a corrupt political organization, and their names shall descend to posterity as synonyms of judicial renality and corruption.
These preliminary remarks bring us to the consideration of the last act of the leaders of this party of "great moral ideas." We refer to the manifesto recently addressed to the voters of the United States by the "Republican Congressional Committee," called forth by the passage of the "Potter Resolution" in the House of Representatives, ordering an investigation of the election frauds, alleged to have been committed in Florida and Louisiana, on the occasion of the last Presidential election, and which resulted in depressing Mr. Tilden, the duly elected President, of his seat. The composition of the "Electoral Commission" and the assumed patriotic motives of its projectors are too fresh in the memory of our people to need more than a passing notice. The representatives of the democracy, with a confidence unshaken in the purity of the Judiciary, gave in their assent to the proposed compromise only to learn, when too late, that they were the victims of a previously concocted scheme to deprive them of the President of their choice under the form of law.

With a forbearance unparalleled in the history of the world they submitted to this stupendous fraud, but under a most solemn protest which, be it said to their honor, will descend to posterity as a complete vindication of their honesty of purpose, and as a reflection of the stigma which shall follow the names of those men who have prostituted their talents and offices, as representatives of the American people, for the purpose of subverting the very foundations of our republican system. And what are the key notes of this manifesto to the American people? Just what we should have expected from the hypocritical cant of political tricksters. These men, like Joseph's brethren, have carried their sin so long without exposure, that now when an honest and fair investigation of the real facts of their alleged frauds is proposed, they become at once terror stricken and immediately fly behind breast works reared by the ever ready ingenuity of their native hypocrisy. We of the South are too familiar with the hackneyed arguments which these "union shriekers" are ever wont to use when they desire to draw forth the sympathy of their Northern constituency. Their vile slanders which have for sixteen years arrayed the North and West in deadly hate against their brethren of the South are again brought forward for ready use, so soon as the true men of the nation lift their voices for an honest and truthful exhibit of the facts which underlie their maladministration. It is the terror of the guilty felon who pictures every matinee meeting as an officer of justice.

The first paragraph of this partisan appeal to the voters of the United States contains the gist of the whole document and discloses as clearly as noon day the lurking terror which has been roused in the guilty hearts of these men, by the possibility of exposure from a fair and impartial examination into the facts of their misdeeds.
For what honest man ever yet feared a full and complete scrutiny into his conduct, whether public or private? It is only the violator of law that fears the argus eye of the law. But hear the voice of corruption and judge how much of sincerity there is in the hearts from which the effusion of pretended patriotism emanates. It begins thus:
"The Democratic House of Representatives has, by a party vote, adopted a resolution which, under the pretext of an investigation, is to lay the foundation for a revolutionary expulsion of the President from his office."

What a tender and magnanimous interest is here suddenly manifested for the President, against whom, but a very short period since, these men could not find epithets in the whole vocabulary of their hate sufficiently pointed to convey their detestation of his so-called policy. And yet, when it is proposed to ascertain if his former friends had put him there honestly, they lose all care for themselves in their anxiety to shield him. It is more than likely that Mr. Hayes appreciates such disinterestedness. But the eye of justice is not directed towards Mr. Hayes, only so far as he has through the power of his official patronage domiciled upon the nation any of the instigators of the great crime committed against the sovereign will of the American people, which it is the purpose of Mr. Potter's resolution shall be known in all its details, and which the guilty consciences of those who lent themselves to the consummation, and now seek, through the basest fabrications, urged on by their fears, and addressed to the American people to avert. The haze which these incendiary appeals to the passions of their Northern constituency have been wont to raise and by which the truth has been so long obscured, no longer rises in obedience to the magic wand of the practical juggler. Returning reason begins to assert her sway, and the day is not distant when the American people shall, with a unanimity never before known, teach her rulers that they are but public servants, chosen by the people, not to foment discord between one section and another—not to erect barriers of hate and jealousy, that shall tend only to jeopardize the stability of our country, but to harmonize the conflicting elements—and to legislate for the common good of the whole. The man who stands upon the floor of our national Legislature, not impressed by a sense of such desires and aims, is an enemy to good government and is no longer worthy to enjoy the honor of representative of a people whose destiny, under Providence, is to work out the great problem of good government. This is one of the ends to which the proposed investigation shall contribute, and as such should have no terrors, except to the guilty.

(Washington Post)

As a matter of interest, we reduce in a sentence the opinions of different state executives on the fraud investigation resolutions, as extorted by the reporters of the Boston Herald:

Governor Connor, of Maine, thinks the movement revolutionary.

Governor Rice, of Massachusetts, does not believe anything new will be discovered.

Governor Prescott, of New Hampshire, thinks it will fail.

Governor Van Zandt, of Rhode Island is sure Tilden is at the bottom of it, and that it will hurt the Democrats.

Governor Robinson, of New York, believes the movement meets with the approval of all fair-minded men.

Governor Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, regards it simply as a means of manufacturing political capital for use this fall.

Governor Cochran, of Delaware, thinks there should be a full and fair investigation, but does not believe the Democrats contemplate disturbing Hayes.

Governor Matthews, of West Virginia, deprecates the movement, and does not think the Democrats will gain anything by it.

Governor Hampton, of South Carolina, regards it as unwise, but thinks if it be clearly proven that Hayes was a party to the frauds, he should be unseated.

Governor Drew, of Florida, thinks the country and the party can only be vindicated by a rigid investigation.

Governor Houston, of Alabama, considers it unwise and senseless.

Governor Hubbard, of Connecticut, de-precates inconsiderate action, but thinks the investigation is demanded by the country.

Governor Porter, of Tennessee, says the people want the truth, and will not be satisfied short of the fullest investigation.

Governor Williams, of Indiana, thinks the decision of the Electoral Commission should be submitted to; but had he been in Hayes' place he would have resigned long ago.

Governor Callom, of Illinois, considers the movement likely to elect either Grant or Blaine in 1880.

Governor Pillsbury, of Minnesota, believes it will be as futile in its results as it will be hurtful to the party that originated it.

Governor Routt, of Colorado, thinks the sentiment of the country opposed to it.

Governor Gear, of Iowa, is shocked at the idea of unseating Mr. Hayes, and will sustain him to the last man and the last dollar.

Governor Garber, of Nebraska, considers it merely a scheme to make political capital.

Governor Irwin, of California, is in favor of a searching inquiry, but does not consider the agitation of Hayes' title politic at this time.

Official Vote for Governor in 1876.
We annex the official vote for Governor cast in November, 1876. This statement will be found very convenient and useful for reference. The representation in State,
