WILMINGTON, N. C.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1878.

FOR CONGRESS:

ALFRED M. WADSWELL OF NEW HANOVER.

VIEWES AND REVIEWES.

The widow of Daniel Webster, now quite aged and in feeble health, is sojourning at New Rochelle, N. Y.

Gen. Joseph A. Wheeler, of Confederate cavalry fame, is a candidate for the United States Senate from Alabama.

Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr, of Rutland, Vt., has received the personal thanks of King Alfonso of Spain, for her conduct on the late Queen Mercedes.

Brother Kimball had hard luck trying to raise an $8,000 debt of the Swampscott (Mass.) Baptist church; he raised $400 after working beyond midnight.

Capt. Britten of the Clarence Bicycle Club rode from London to Bath and back, 212 miles, in twenty-three hours and fifty-five minutes, including halts for refreshment.

Russian officers have taken soundings in the great Siberian lake Baikal, which show a depth of 2,940 meters, whereas the deepest sounding in the Mediterranean is only 2,158.

In Mesnil-Sevin France, resides an old man in whose house it has been the custom, for the past thirty years, for all couples married in the village to pass their wedding night.

The second Adventists, who are not without hope of seeing their peculiar ideas realized in the sweet by-and-by, meet to compare notes next month. A large delegation from abroad is expected.

Cotton mills are becoming numerous in India, more particularly in Bombay, and it seems probable that with improved machinery, cheap labor and the saving on freight they will be able to compete successfully with English goods.

Mme. Christine Nilsson, who is now in Paris, has consented to appear in a series of concerts in England, receiving therefor at the rate of $1,000 a night. It is now generally understood that Mme. Nilsson lost heavily by failures in Chicago.

"This tunnel is one mile long, and the train will be four minutes passing through it," shouted a lying brakeman of the Central Pacific Railroad; and when the train dashed into daylight in just four seconds, the sight of a fellow kissing his girl was revealed.

A Virginia woman offers to sell her husband by auction, and apply the proceeds to the liquidation of the State debt. "I can recommend him to purchasers," she adds, "as a man possessing all the qualities a woman capable of controlling him could desire."

William E. Johnson was a clerk in the Bank of Saline, Mo. He went to Scotland, where he spent all his money, and wrote the bank's cashier for help to get back. Money was sent him. One of his first acts on his return was to steal $3,000 from the bank. He has fled.

Florence Nightingale, now 60, is confined to her room in London by illness. Gen. Sherman's wife is seriously sick in Newport. Ex-Gov. Dingley of Maine is about to sail for Europe on account of broken health. Dr. Durfee of Williams College has had a second stroke of paralysis.

The new Jewish synagogue in Boston, formerly the property of the Church street Methodist Episcopal Church, was dedicated on Sunday last, with imposing ceremonies, in the presence of a very large audience. The services included a prayer for the afflicted South, and a large collection was taken up, one-half of which went to the yellow fever sufferers. The ark and chairs of the synagogue are made of olive wood from the Mount of Olives.

A New York letter says: "Young Bennett is in town most of the time now, and devotes himself to the literal management of the Herald. He reaches the office early, and holds a perpetual levee till he leaves for the day. He suggests topics, directs special contributions, looks at bills, draws checks, and absolutely holds the reins. This is so contrary to the general belief that I put it as news. For instance, every morning a copy of the Herald is marked with the name of the writer of every article. If in the city it is laid on his table. If out of town—Newport, Buffalo, Paris or London—it is mailed to him. It is, of course, to his interest to do this; but how many men are there with millions of revenue who would or could descend to the details of even a valuable property like the Herald?"

THE HARDEST YET.

Of the many hard hits which the strutting peacock, surmamed Conkling, has had at the hands of the press since his famous tilt at Saratoga, in the Republican Convention, held there last week, the following from the Washington Post is the hardest. It is well worth reading and we therefore reproduce it here. The Post calls it "Conkling's Fizzle," and goes for him thusly:

After weary waiting of gestation and mighty convulsions of parturition Mr. Conkling has brought forth the long-promised, much-vaunted and breathlessly expected greatest effort of his life. He has sulked and pouted at Hayes, coquetted and intrigued with the Democrats. During an eight months' session of Congress he has stalked about the Senate Chamber, wrapped in the solitude of his own grievances, muffled in the mantle of his own vanity, an enigma to his friends and an object of curiosity to his opponents—grand; gloomy and peculiar. He has played the part of a Theristes, seated upon the throne of Jove, and some have mistaken the sound of the scurrilous mutterings which proceeded from the Olympian clouds for the thunder of the great-browed monarch himself. But now the illusion has vanished. Mr. Conkling has opened his mouth and is himself again. He is the same old distiller of intellectual froth, the same mighty utterer of little things that he used to be when he sung the inebriated glories of Grant in Senatorial hexameters, and lent his magnificent torso as a screen for Grant's pets to carry on their debauchery in the shade of. In all the turgid farrago which rolled from his lips in an elephantiasis of rhetoric at Saratoga day before yesterday, there is not a single thought to indicate that the man's mind has been disciplined by events; not a single postulate to show that he has learned anything new or forgotten anything old. He stands now where he has always stood, a physical and intellectual giant, dwarfed to fit the shoes and clothes of the merest partisan baby crying for more pap. With all his tremendous pretensions and all his portentous mutterings, he hasn't the independence or the courage of even ungrammatical Jack Logan, feeble old Howe, or block-headed Don Cameron. Having exhausted the vocabulary for a year and a half in private denunciation of Hayes and his fraudulent Cabinet, having in the impenetrable shade of executive session strode the Senate floor, tearing passion into tatters in a way that would have shamed Edwin Forrest, and turned the liver of the late McKean Buchanan pea-green with envy, he now subsides in the veriest sucking dove of the caucus, and coos the Radical convention as sweetly as if his friends had not been kicked out of the custom-house and himself ignored with the double stings of hatred and contempt. In the recent past honest men have shown sympathy for Roscoe Conkling, not because they liked his record, or hailed the promise of his character, but because he represented a personal antagonism to Hayes, which has been mistaken for a generic antipathy to fraud. There has been a tendency to welcome any ally in the cause of making fraud odious and hideous, and Mr. Conkling has this tendency to thank for the undeserved respect which has of late been accorded to him. But now, when the time has come for substantive action; when he stood at the choosing-point and his future trembled in the balance, hung upon the frame of a sentence as upon the casting of a die, this supposititious mailed knight turns tail like a courser clad in tin armor and masquerading in the role of Sir Owin. There is no mistaking the meaning of this sickly collapse, no dodging the significance of the little wool which comes of the great cry of Conkling's laborious sea-tig. It means that the man feels the deadly miasm of defeat stealing through his system and is unnerved and prostrated by it. It signifies that in the presence of real difficulty and substantial danger the semblance of courage which grew out of arrogance without check and egotism without restraint, oozes out of his finger's ends and evaporates from his shrinking skin, leaving him nothing but a great big partisan booby shivering and shaking in the keen east wind from Maine.

Henceforth Mr. Conkling will always be found at his proper level. He will be set down in the books—if he doesn't fall out of the sight of history altogether—as one of that class of public men of which American politics is so prolific; men in whose make-up a homeopathic grain of statesmanship is triturated to extinction in a deluge of wordy froth, weak pretension and dishwatery profession of great design with neither will nor power to execute. Stalwart Radicalism has named him its Achilles, but he turns out to be the veriest hiccoughing Helet of his party. The vast mob of mean little men which Hayes, in his exigency of "special cases," could not find room for on the pay-roll because they had not happened to have any opportunity to commit perjury or forgery for him, have hailed Conkling as their leader and chosen him as their exponent; hoping that when he did speak he would set their shrill squeaks of disappointment to the grand and gloomy music of his own egotism and make Hayes tremble at the imposing sound. But when his accents came they were the shrillest of impotent squeaks and the most ridiculous of fizz and sputter. Fit leader of a decaying party; fit head of a hungry and disappointed mob without brains to plan heroic revenge, and without courage to wreak it! Defeat has marked him for its own, and in defeat his own white is the signal of his disgrace. Three months of Senatorial posturing remain to him. Wrap his wooden buckler and a tin sword, and let him masquerade it out for the eminent colored patriots in the side gallery, and winning from the tender fancy of budding schoolgirls a bread-and-butter flavored admiration in the place of the respect he has forfeited from grown persons. And if, in after years, it is deemed worth while to perpetuate his memory in the statuary of the Capitol, let him be set up in India rubber, hollow, and pumped full of wind scented with night blooming cereus, to stand as the type of the small politicians swollen to mock greatness by conceit, itself the product of still bigger men with less elastic hides.

Potter, the man who has been wheeling a barrow across the Continent, has reached California. He has been dead-headed at saloons and hotels on the way, has traveled leisurely, and is satisfied with the enterprise; but he, says it was a long time between drinks in the mountain region.

The doctors who survive their exposures and labors amid the yellow fever will have at their command closer and more useful observations of the disease than have previously been made. Pathological examinations have shown important lesions at the base of the brain; a "box-wood" or completely tight liver; degenerated kidneys and an enormously large spleen, as characteristics of the disease in every instance. The doctors engaged in this special work have prepared elaborate reports, both technical and general, and it is to be hoped have furnished a broad basis of facts for study and explanations.

Damascus has been ruined by the opening of the Suez canal. The overland trade, both Oriental and European, by caravan with Bagdad and the Persian gulf, has been diverted to the water ways. House rent has declined thirty and fifty per cent., and large numbers of empty shops and houses in every part of the city indicate the general decline. The streets are filled with beggars, both Moslem and Christian, and that, too, in a city where, eighteen months ago, a beggar was a rarity. The more elevated districts of Lebanon, which formerly contributed the principal portion of the mendicants during the winter months, have this year sent double the number to swell the amount of local indigence. The far-famed eye of the East is now dull and lustreless.

BOILED DOWN.

Boys under sixteen caught smoking in Coblenz are arrested.

Newspapers are used in many schools in the West instead of reading books.

The British Consul in Pekin puts the deaths from famine in China at 7,000,000. The province of Shansi alone lost 5,000,000.

Emperors are nervous nowadays. A man was arrested in Vienna for attempting to throw a harmless bundle into the imperial carriage.

"I have somewhere pawned my wedding ring for drink," is an advertisement in a German paper. "The holder will please send me his address."

Valentine Baker Pasha now holds the command of eighty battalions in the Turkish army.

The Emperor of Germany still carries his right arm in a sling.

The Italian newspapers publish a letter from Garibaldi to the young men of Genoa, calling on them to prepare for war with Austria.

MOONSHINE.

The late worm escapes the early bird.

Those whom the gods love eat cucumbers.

When is a man not a man? When he's abed.

There is a great difference between the clock on the mantel and the Watch on the Rhine.

Brass is more prized in Africa than gold. A Chicago drummer would bring $950 by dead weight.

It was not a plumber who wrote the famous line: "This spigot none."

Men are perverse. Dr. Carver, who should be an expert outer, excels as a shooter.

Two things that go off in a hurry—an arrow dismissed from a bow, and a bean dismissed by a belle.

When Emerson recklessly wrote, "Every natural action is graceful," had he ever seen an angry woman throw a stone at a cow?

In reply to the question, "Will the coming man be a?" the Norristown Herald affirms that he generally is when he first comes.

A Word of Warning to Counterfeitters.

The wide-spread fame of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters causes a necessity on our part to remind, from time to time, whom it may concern, of the fact that imitating said articles is a punishable offence, and we now give this word of caution, that we will most assuredly have all those persons engaged in retelling our second-hand bottles, selling by the gallon or barrel, or in any manner whatsoever palming off on the public a spurious article purporting to be our preparation, punished to the full extent of the law. Penalty for counterfeiting, or dealing in counterfeit trade mark goods, as set forth in a law recently passed by Congress: "Fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment not more than two years, or both such fine and imprisonment." We never fail to convict. NOTICE TO DEALERS AND PURCHASERS. Hostetter's Bitters are never, under any circumstances, sold in bulk, BUT ALWAYS IN BOTTLES, with a finely engraved U. S. Internal Revenue (special proprietary) Stamp covering the cork of each bottle, fastened to both sides of the neck of same. All Bitters purporting to be Hostetter's, without this stamp, are counterfeit.

Female School FOR Young Ladies and Children. Misses Burr & James, Principals. Mrs. M. S. Cushing, Musical Instructress.

THE FOURTEENTH Annual Session of this school will commence on Thursday, October 3d, at the School House on Market Street in the rear of St. James' Church. After long experience in the art of training the young, and careful study of the work, the Principals believe that they offer superior advantages for a refined education, at very moderate charges. Young children judiciously taught. Object teaching with daily textbook instruction a specialty, and while the inquisitive mind of childhood is amused with designing, modelling, &c., after the Kindergarten system, it is also taught "the reason why," the nature and origin of things seen and used in daily life; thus learning becomes pleasure instead of toil. Musical School under the direction of Mrs. M. S. Cushing, who has had long and successful experience in that science, Drawing, Painting in Oil or Water Colors, at moderate rates. Languages at Professor's charges. For further particulars see Principals or Circulars. sept 10
