Antoine Aurelie Tournens, the Perieng notary, whose strange fate it was to be for some years King of the warl ke Araucanians of South America, died a few weeks ago in a French hospita'. He landed in Araucania utterly ignorant of the language, and must have had some very extraordimary method in his madness if, as the Chilian Government averred, he was a lugatic, to have obtained the influence that he undoubtedly did obtain over so fine a race as the Araucanians. He found them fighting among themselves, and persuaded them to reanquish intertribal contests and make common cause against Chili. This led to his being captured by the Chilians in 1802. The Government of Chili let im teturn to France, where the validity of his Kingship was recogmized in a law court. He returned to Araucania in 1869-70, but was back in France in 1871, and subsequently fell into such poverty that he sought a place as lamplighter.
