

The Daily Review

JOS. T. JAMES, Ed. and Prop. WILMINGTON, N. C. FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1879. VIEWS AND REVIEW.

The Rev. A. J. Faust has retired from the Protestant Episcopal Church at Washington, and become a Roman Catholic.

The smallest living in the Church of England is that of Shipton, near Ludlow, in the diocese of Hereford, which is valued at £3 per annum.

A religious Bavarian journal declares that Szegedin was the Sodom and Gomorrah of Hungary and says that the flood was retribution.

A French municipal committee has recommended the rechristening of fourteen streets named after members of the Bonaparte family or their prominent supporters.

Lieut. Zubovics, the heroic officer who saved over 100 persons from drowning during the inundation of Szegedin, is dying from illness brought on by over exertion on that occasion.

Mr. Burchard, director of the mint, has decided to purchase 50,000 ounces of silver bullion per week for coinage at New Orleans. The capacity of the mint in that city is $300,000 a month.

An elephant died recently in Calcutta which is said to have been ridden by Warren Hastings when Governor-General of India, a hundred years ago. He may, probably have been 50 years old at that time.

A Baltimore jeweller estimates that Madame Patterson-Bonaparte's diamonds cost $70,000 when they were new, although now they would not sell for more than $20,000. They are to be preserved as relics in the Bonaparte family.

Don Carlos and his wife have arrived at Rome, whence they will proceed to visit Archduchess Beatrice, his mother and the Comte de Chambord. The Pope has consented personally to confirm the pretender's children, whom he has brought for that purpose to Rome.

The Vicksburg Commercial says: The steamer John B. Maule, on her last trip down, brought more than thirty of these sufferers (Kansas refugees) from the false promises which had been held out to them, and we learn there are large numbers who are ready to come as soon as arrangements can be made for their transportation.

Gray, who shot at Booth in Chicago, gives his critical opinions of actors to whoever will listen. He says that Booth is far from being an artist, that McCullough may become a good tragedian in time, that Davenport is only third rate, and that Barrett is tolerable. He could himself exceed any of these, and intends to go on the stage as Hamlet when he gets out of jail.

Some of the country doctors in England are employing bicycles instead of horses as a means of locomotion. The bicycles used by them are of iron, the rim of the wheel is covered with rubber, and they can move over tolerably rough roads and up quite steep grades, making from eight to ten miles or more in an hour. There are many places in this country where a doctor could advantageously keep this vehicle instead of a horse, especially in view of the hard times and the competition among the disciples of Esculapius.

That interesting young gentleman, Jesse Pomeroy, who brought himself into notoriety a couple of years ago by hacking children to death with his little knife, has been trying to escape from the penitentiary. By some unexplained means he came into the possession of a portion of a case knife, the edge and point of which were provided with teeth like a saw. He had sawn one of the iron bars asunder at the bottom and nearly so at the top. The cast-iron fittings were also sawed apart and replaced with sawdust and soap, which acted as a cement to keep them in place. In replacing the cast-iron points he failed to restore them in line, and in consequence was detected.

The London Telegraph says of the late Gen. Richard Taylor: 'The Toryism even of Eldon and Castlereagh was far more to his taste than the Liberalism of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Bright; and speaking with the experience and confidence of a cultivated man of the world, who took a warm interest in English horse races, and played a capital rubber of whist, Gen. Taylor enjoyed a social success at the West End which has heretofore been accorded to few Americans. The "Life and Letters" of Mr. Charles Sumner reveal that he was an acceptable guest at the houses of many Englishmen who had gained distinction of politics, law, or literature; but Gen. Taylor was favorite in fashionable coteries, which Mr. Sumner, Mr. Ticknor, and other citizens of the great republic were never privileged to enter.'

GOVERNOR J. E. BROWN AND SENATOR VANCE.

It is related of these two distinguished gentlemen that meeting once on the cars, a long and mutually pleasant conversation ensued, which was only interrupted by the arrival of the train at Atlanta; where they both got off. Before separating, Mr. Vance said, 'Governor, my habit after a long journey is always to take a glass of something to refresh me before commencing business. Will you not join me in the same in the restaurant I see across the street?'

The ex-Governor begged to be excused but was strongly importuned that finally he consented to enter the saloon with his companion.

'What will you take?' inquired the Senator.

'Nothing save a glass of water,' was the Governor's reply.

'Now, my dear friend,' said the brilliant statesman of the old North State, 'I read the bible, but can't find a word recommending water as a beverage, save in one solitary instance, when the rich man being in torment, asked for only a single drop on the tip of Lazarus' finger.'

But it is not stated that sturdy 'old Joey' yielded even to such biblical logic. We wager he did not—Macchi Telegraph.

We have heard the above anecdote of Senator Vance related, though in a somewhat different form. Several years ago one of the editorial staff of the Review, while traveling on the cars in one of our Southern States, became acquainted with ex-Senator Miller, of Georgia who, in the course of a very pleasant conversation, related an anecdote of Senator Vance very similar to that which we have copied above.

The story is a good one, however, in either form, and shows that while our distinguished son was needing refreshment for the recuperation of exhausted human nature, his boundless and inexhaustible fund of humor and wit would flow out in happy streams at every opportunity; that it is a perennial fire, kindled by the flames of Prometheus, which cannot be extinguished.

We have heard a somewhat similar anecdote, in a more extended form, relative to the objections to water as a beverage, related of a clergyman, in the western part of the State, which we have never seen in print, and which we will relate, it being understood that we dissent, on principle, from the opinion of the worthy divine.

A few years ago, Mr. Theodore N. Ramsay, the popular temperance advocate, in a tour of Western North Carolina in behalf of the temperance cause, lectured one night in a small church up among the mountains in a locality where a majority of the people had a moderate fondness for the exhilarating effect produced by the stimulating influence of an occasional taste of their favorite apple or peach brandy. His audience was composed mainly of this class of people, and among them were a few who owned and ran small stills for their own and their neighbors' accommodation. Of course the pastor of the church was present, and an interested listener, as he had a fondness for an occasional glass himself and he wanted to have no disturbing element enter into the membership of his church from whence he was to receive his salary.

Mr. Ramsay is a very energetic speaker and on the night in question entered zealously into the merits of the temperance cause, portraying in graphic language the evils of intemperance and the dangers which menace those who tampered with alcoholic drinks, even by an occasional libation, and closed with an eloquent peroration in a glowing appeal for temperance and temperance principles. To give force and dramatic effect to this language he raised a glass of water which stood on the desk beside him in his hands and holding it up to the gaze of his audience, said: 'Here is the Heaven-distilled dew which God has given to man by which to quench his thirst—pure health-giving water. No poison lurks among its limpid drops. It causes no murder or bloodshed; it brings no ruin or disgrace upon any one; it brings none to beggary and rags; its influence leads no one to vice or crime; it is the blessed beverage given to our first parents in the Garden of Eden ere they had transgressed, and what God, in His wisdom, saw fit and proper for Adam and Eve ought to be good enough for us, their children.'

After the speaker had concluded, the minister arose and, after paying a compliment to Mr. Ramsay, said, 'I read in the Bible that there was once a deluge and the whole face of the earth was covered with water, and the whole human family was drowned except Noah and his family, and they'd been served the same way if he hadn't built him an ark. That's scripture. And after the waters had dried up and Noah lauded from that ark, the first thing he done was to set out a vineyard, and he raised grapes, and he made wine and he got drunk on it onee, and that's scripture. And at the marriage feast, I read that our Blessed Savior turned water, yes, water, into wine, and that's scripture. And the Postle Paul advised Timothy to take a little wine, but that's scripture. But I never heard but one man calling for water, and that was the rich man when he was in hell, where he ought to be, and he didn't want but a single drop to cool his tongue, and that's scripture, too.'

Whether Mr. Ramsay succeeded in organizing a Lodge of Good Templars after such an opposition we are unable to say, but should imagine that his efforts in behalf of total abstinence would be better appreciated in some other locality, where clergymen can attend to the spiritual wants of their people without the aid of a 'toddy.'

IN DEEP DISTRESS.

The Czar of all the Russias is not a man to be envied at this particular juncture. Throughout his entire dominions, and especially at the Capital, St. Petersburg, that worst of troubles is threatened, civil war. The discord is great and the precautions taken against the Nihilists are of such a nature as to induce the belief that there are fears of a repetition of the scenes of the terrible French Revolution. St. Petersburg is one vast barracks and the utmost repressive measures are deemed necessary. The city is under constant guard and the nobility and people alike are not allowed to move from one house to another at night without passports. Troops are kept constantly under arms, and the Emperor and all high dignitaries are surrounded by Cossacks whenever they move abroad.

THE COURSE TO BE PURSUED.

It appears that there is to be no joint caucus, at least not at present, of the Democrats in both Houses of Congress, as to a line of action to be pursued by the party in reference to Mr. Hayes' veto. It seems that committees from both the Senate and the House of Representatives met yesterday in joint session, at which Judge Thurman presided, and at which a line of action was determined upon. All present agreed to a proposition concerning the Army bill, to be reported to separate caucuses of the two Houses this afternoon, which, it is expected, will be adopted by both of them, and thus render a joint caucus on this subject unnecessary. It was decided that the terms of this proposition should not be made public in advance of their submission to the caucus; but, we are told that, 'there are sufficient grounds' for stating that it will recommend the re-passage of the Army Appropriation bill, with the sixth section changed so as to apply only to officers of the army and navy; and not to United States civil officers, thus obviating the principal objection raised by the President against its approval.

The argument by which this recommendation will be supported is, in brief, that the President vetoed the bill because of its alleged abridgement of the powers of civil officers, that in reality this was not the intention, and would not be the effect of the bill as heretofore passed, and that the President having evaded the main issue, he should now be given an opportunity to pass upon a bill which shall present to him the sole question, whether or not the army, or any portion of it, should be used to keep the peace at the polls.

TOUCHING REMARKS.

At the annual meeting of the Augusta Confederate Survivors' Association, the President, Colonel C. C. Jones, Jr., in the course of an admirable address, said: 'While there are still in the community those who, of a right, should associate themselves with us, and whom, as Confederate survivors, we will gladly welcome to the companionship of our society, there is no rising generation whence we can gather recruits. Our right to membership in this organization was begotten in the past, is born of a bond which can never be renewed, and sinks into the grave with each one of us. We transmit our principles, we inculcate our faith, we bequeath our hopes, but that proud distinction, that grand fact, I was a soldier in the armies of the Southern Confederacy cannot be transmitted. A precious thought and a proud consolation while we live, it can only be mentioned in our praise when we are gone. There are none to take our places when the generation that followed Lee and Jackson and their peers shall have crossed the dark river, and, with them, found rest beneath the evergreen trees which beautify the further shore.'

When Wilkie was in the Ecstacy studying those famous pictures which have so long challenged the admiration of all lovers of art, an old Jeronimite said to him: 'I have sat daily in sight of those paintings for nearly four score years; during that time all who were older than myself have passed away. My contemporaries are gone, and many younger than myself are in their graves, and yet the figures upon those canvases remain unchanged. I look at them until I sometimes think they are the realities and we but the shadows.'

of a little life; and then in the generous bosom of this, our mother land, for whose salvation we fought, we will sleep that long and peaceful sleep which knows no waking until the elements shall melt with fervent heat.

Brethren, in the nature of things the duration of this, our cherished Association, is short. Knit by the particular tie which binds us so closely together, let us be faithful to each other, loyal to our organization, devoted to the traditions and the impulses of a Confederate past, and observant of all that is just, pure, and of good report.

The South has had the wrong end of the sheet-gun to their snouider. The negro, rather than be a Democrat or a dead darkey, takes up his bed and walks—Inter-Ocean.

That is just it, only the negro is taking the wrong end of the bed and the Yankee the wrong end of the negro. By the time that the last summer's yellow fever bedding has all disappeared from the South somebody will be wishing that he hadn't shouldered either end of the negro.

The Blessing of Strong Nerves

Is recoverable, not by the use of mineral sedatives, but by a recourse to effectual tonic treatment. Opiates and the like should only be used as auxiliaries, and then as sparingly as possible. Vigorous nerves are quiet ones, and the most direct way to render them so is to reinforce the vital energies. That sterling invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will be found all-sufficient for this purpose, since it removes impediments to thorough digestion, and assimilation of the food, so that the body is insured its due amount of nourishment, and consequently of stamina. Rheumatic tendencies and affections of the kidneys and bladder are also counteracted by the Bitters, which is besides a pleasant medicinal stimulant, infinitely purer than raw excitants of commerce, which react injuriously upon the nervous system.

LIVER

This important organ weighs but about three pounds, and all the blood in a living person about three gallons passes through it at least once every half hour, to have the bile and other impurities strained or filtered from it. It is the natural purgative of the bowels, and if the Liver becomes torpid it is not separate from the blood, but carried through the veins to all parts of the system, and in trying to escape through the pores of the skin, causes it to turn yellow or dirty brown color. The stomach becomes diseased, and Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, Headache, Eructations, Jaundice, Chills, Malarial Fever, Piles, Sickness and Sour Stomach, and general debility follow. The cure of all bilious diseases and Liver complaint is made certain by taking HEPATINE in accordance with directions. Headache is generally cured in twenty minutes, and no disease that arises from the Liver can exist if a fair trial be given. SOLD AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR PILLS BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Price 25 Cts. and $1.00

LIFE IN A BOTTLE.

The Most Valuable Medical Discovery Known to the World—No More Use for Quinine, Calomel or Mineral Poisons—Life for the Blood, Strength for the Nerves, and Health for All.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC. Believing that by cleansing the blood and building up the constitution was the only way of banishing disease and being troubled with weakness of the lungs, catarrh, very much broken down in constitution, &c., and after trying the best physicians and paying out my money for many kinds of medicines advertised without finding a permanent cure, I began doctoring myself, using medicines made from roots and herbs. I fortunately discovered a wonderful Bitter or Blood Cleanser, the first bottle of which gave me a life and vigor, and in time effected a permanent cure. I was free from catarrh, my lungs became strong and sound, being able to stand the most severe cold and exposure, and have gained over thirty pounds in weight. I am confident that I had made a wonderful discovery in medicine. I prepared a quantity of the Root Bitters, and was in the habit of giving them away to sick friends and neighbors. I found the medicine effected the most wonderful cures of all diseases caused from humors or scrofula in the blood, impure blood, Bad Stomach, Weakness, Kidney Disease, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. The news of my discovery in this way spread from one person to another until I found myself called upon to supply patients with medicine far and wide, and several were induced to establish a laboratory for compounding and bottling the Root Bitters in large quantities, and I now devote all my time to this business.

I was at first backward in presenting myself or discovery in this way to the public, not being a patent medicine man and a big capitalist, but I am getting over that. Since I first advertised this medicine I have been crowded with orders from druggists and country dealers, and the hundreds of letters I have received from persons cured, prove the fact that no remedy ever did so much good in so short a time and with so much success as the Root Bitters. In fact, I am convinced that they will soon take the lead of all other medicines in use. Nearly one hundred retail druggists, right here at home in Cleveland, now sell Root Bitters, some of whom have already sold over one thousand bottles.

Root Bitters are strictly a medical preparation, such as was used in the good old days of our forefathers, when people were cured by some simple root or plant, and when calomel and other poisons of the ministers kingdom were unknown.

They act strongly on the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels regular and build up the nervous system. They penetrate every part of the body, searching out every superfluous bone and tissue from the head to the feet, cleansing and strengthening the fountain springs of life, hence they must reach all diseases by purification and nourishment.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, what the disease or ailment is, use Root Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable, use Root Bitters at once. It may save your life.

Thousands of persons in all parts of the country are already using Root Bitters. They have saved many lives of consumptive who had been given up by friends and physicians to die, and have permanently cured many old chronic cases of Catarrh, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Skin Diseases, where all other treatments had failed. It cures all other ailments, such as indigestion, weakness, loss of taste in the mouth, nervousness, and broken down in constitution. You will be cured if you take Root Bitters. Have your humors and pimples on your face or skin? Nothing will give you such good health, strength, and beauty as Root Bitters.

I know that you feel as physicians will cry humbug because my discovery cures so many of their patients, but I care not. It is now my desire and determination to plant my Root Bitters as fast as I can in every corner of all those suffering through, and reach all those who are already using Root Bitters, and take no substitute. It is sold by wholesale and retail druggists and sent by express, or by mail, for $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles $5.00. For certificates of wonderful cures, see my large circular around each bottle of medicine. Read and judge for yourself.

Ask your druggist or merchant for FRED ZIEGLER'S MOON BITTER, the great Blood Cleanser, and take no substitute. It is recommended because it makes a large profit. G. W. BRADSHAW, licensor. 339 Superior St., New York City.
