Last night's fine rain extended well up the river.

But one trifling case before the City Court to-day.

The water in the river is low now and steamboatmen are praying for rain in the interior.

Col. S. L. Fremont arrived here yesterday from Savannah on a short visit to North Carolina.

The ladies of St. Paul's Episcopal Church will give an excursion on the Passport on the Fourth.

The regular annual picnic of the scholars of Misses Burr & James' school will be given at Hilton to-morrow.

The Empire House in this city, formerly known as the Manning House, suspended operations and closed its doors yesterday.

The Raleigh papers announce that the Buffalo Bill Troupe are heading that way. Would be glad to have them come down and pay us a visit.

We are glad to know that the membership of the Whiting Rifles is increasing. At their meeting last night several applications were received.

A large number, among them the scholars of Misses Burr & James' school, went down on the Passport to-day on the family excursion given by Prof. Agostini.

Mr. E. S. Latimer, of this city, a recent licentiate of the Supreme Court, of this State, was sworn in by Judge Seymour this morning and admitted to practice at the bar.

We understand that the regular Fourth of July excursion of the Young Catholic Friends Society will be given this year on the steamer Waccamaw, which will be put in excellent order for the occasion.

There is a family living in this city who are the happy possessors of 11 dogs, 5 cats, 5 hogs, 3 goats, 1 horse, about 25 head of poultry and a talking crow. Their cup of bliss should certainly be full to overflowing. The above is a true bill.

The editorial staff of the REVIEW thank Messrs. Brown & Roddick for a card of the new celluloid cravats which are now so much the rage. They are white and washable, and look as though they would wear forever, if not a few days longer.

A bright and beautiful child shows in its very expression that its babyhood was not associated with Opium, lozials, etc.—for the continued use of Opium is antagonistic to health. That valuable and highly recommended remedy for the disorders of babyhood, Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, is absolutely free from Morphia and all other dangerous agents, and can be safely employed at all times. Price 25 cents.

Indications.

WAR DEPARTMENT. Office of the Chief Signal Officer. Washington, D. C., June 13, 1879.

For the South Atlantic States higher pressure, lower or stationary temperature northerly to easterly winds, partly cloudy weather and possibly occasional rains are probable.

"Among the Breakers" is to be presented to-night by the Thalian Amateurs at the Tileston Upper Room and we think that there will be a large attendance on the occasion. As we have already stated, the piece is a very pretty one and we are satisfied that it will be brought out in a very creditable manner. It has been thoroughly rehearsed. The Cornet Concert Club will add a pleasant feature to the occasion by the rendition of some of their most delightful music.

1 stillery Burned.

A subscriber at Rosedale writes to inform us of the destruction by fire, near that place, early this morning, of a turpentine distillery owned and operated by Messrs. Woody & Currie, of this city. The wood work, the contents of the still and 14 barrels of rosin were burned. There was a considerable amount of naval stores on the yard which were saved. The loss will not exceed $150, on which there was no insurance.

ADJOURNED MEETING OF THE BAR.

The Late Col. W. S. Devane.

Pursuant to adjournment the members of the Bar assembled in the Court House this afternoon at 4 o'clock to receive the report of the Committee on Resolutions relative to the death of their late lamented brother, Col. Wm. S. Devane. At 4:30 o'clock, Col. B. R. Moore arose and moved that in the absence of Judge French, the regular Chairman, the Hon. D. L. Russell be called to the chair. Judge Russell upon assuming the chair announced the readiness of the meeting to receive the report of the Committee on Resolutions. Hon. Edward Cantwell, Chairman of the Committee, then arose and reported the following resolutions:

The committee appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the Wilmington bar in regard to the life and character of the late William S. Devane, beg leave to report the following, viz:

IN MEMORIAM.

William Stewart Devane was born in the county of New Hanover, on the 24th day of March, 1828. Adopting the profession of the law, he was a student under the late Chief Justice Pearson for two years at Richmond Hill, in the county of Yadkin, and was admitted to the bar in the year 1853. He immediately entered upon the practice of his profession, and formed a partnership with Almond A. McKoy, now one of the Superior Court Judges of the State. This firm enjoyed the emoluments and honors of a successful and lucrative practice, until it was dissolved, about April 1861, at which time Col. Devane went into the service of the Confederate States. His intrepidity, his fidelity to the cause for which he took up arms, and his entire record as an efficient soldier and devoted patriot during four weary years of war is a part of the history of his native State.

In 1866 Col. Devane removed to Wilmington, where he spent the remainder of his life engaged in the practice of the law, in partnership with his brother, Duncan J. Devane. In the year 1868, when political strife was at its height, he was chosen by his party as its standard bearer in the contest for the position of Judge of the Fourth Judicial District, having as his opponent the Hon. D. L. Russell, who was the nominee of the adverse party for the same position.

Col. Devane's character as a citizen was such as to cause him to be respected and beloved by all who knew him, but none knew him so well as the members of the Bar who were thrown into professional contact with him, and it was in his bearing towards his brethren of the Bar that his heart and head evidenced those brilliant qualities which made him one of the great favorites of the circuit.

The above is an imperfect outline of the services which Col. Devane has rendered the State of North Carolina and the people of the South. His intrepid courage, both as a soldier and a citizen, his charming social qualities, his generous heart, endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

We, the members of the Wilmington Bar, do therefore resolve:

1. That we deplore the death of our brother, the late Col. W. S. Devane, and request the Hon. A. S. Seymour, Judge, now riding the Third Judicial District, to cause this memorial to be spread upon the minutes of the Superior Court of New Hanover county.

2. That we tender to the family of the deceased, our heartfelt sympathies in their sad bereavement.

3. That one copy of the above preamble and resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and another to each of the city papers with a request for their publication.

EDWARD CANTWELL,
D. L. RUSSELL,
D. B. CUTLER,
B. R. MOORE,
A. G. RICARD,
Committee.

Judge Cantwell then moved the acceptance of the resolutions in the following eloquent words:

Gentlemen of the Bar:

I am requested to ask your acceptance of these resolutions, and also to add to them a few remarks of my own. I do so with the greatest satisfaction, because between the late Col. Devane and myself there existed a great many of those sympathies which attract men of the same profession to each other. I admired his talents and industry, I was proud of the dauntless courage he displayed on the battlefield, and I loved him because he loved me, and was a man of integrity and full of the most generous impulses. His days were shortened and his life sacrificed at last in a great cause and in the just defense of the honor and liberties of his own people.

The people of North Carolina are usually considered to be a phlegmatic and unemotional people. Compared with their neighbors on the North and the South, in whose veins predominate a more mercantile element, they are phlegmatic and unemotional. It is, however, a mistake to suppose that this reserve proceeds from any defective appreciation of distinguished merit, or that sort of so-called modesty which the French denominate marquis honte, or false shame. To my mind, no State, of ancient or modern times, exhibits a prouder appreciation of her own history, or estimates with keener self-approval or self-reproach, the character and the services of her sons. I may even, indeed, say there is no community in the world where a good name is more valuable as an immediate jewel of the soul, and its absence entails more constant and lasting disgrace.

The source of these peculiarities is to be found in a single, secret and very prevalent quality called conscientiousness. Applied to public men and to public affairs it means the sense of Public Duty and the resolution to perform it, however perilous, inglorious, distasteful or unremunerative. It is an old-fashioned virtue which not the sordidness of the times and the temptations of adversity have extinguished.

If I have correctly learned the character of our deceased brother, it was precisely in these qualities that he excelled. Yes, yes, he was rich.

"In spite of all the blows of fate;
In spite of poverty and years
Heroic owner of a grand estate;
Better than any broad domain;
A life, a conscience free from stain.

There were other men at this bar, and there are here to-day (other men who possess more learning than he displayed. There were other men whose voice and tones yet seem to charm the ears and to linger in their walls, captivating the audience by the resistless spell, the divine result and achievement of their natural and acquired faculties. But I doubt whether any one had a greater control over the hearts and the intelligence of the people of Wilmington. And I think it adds very much to the credit of the community in which for so many years he occupied a distinguished position, that from the first to the last of his residence, the public judgment which these resolutions are intended to declare was, in his case, never for a moment suspended. He died as he lived without a cloud upon the integrity of his motives or any divided sentiment upon the integrity of his actions. There are few men with whom I am acquainted, and as actively connected with public affairs and the same ambition for public employments, of whom this can be more justly observed.

Mr. Devane came to this city some 13 years ago, a comparative stranger. He established this reputation by his own efforts, and without the patronage of wealth or the aid of established social, organized influence. The world is so unkindly constituted as to be always intolerant of superior merit unless it is mixed up with some frailty, and concealed besides by a natural or cultivated modesty. This man veiled beneath the sensibilities of a woman and the tenderness of a child, the unflinching qualities of the master race from which he sprang. He worshipped the beautiful and the true in all their manifestations; in nature, in poetry, in art, in woman, in children and in flowers, and was rewarded. Their gentle spirits made themselves known to him, although, unknown to others, unseen to other eyes, they revealed themselves to him by every avenue of the senses. As a lawyer he was the defender of the defenceless, the father of the fatherless and the strong arm of the weak. As a soldier he was the defender of his country.

When the hand of power let slip upon our homes the thunderbolts of war and our firesides reflected the lurid flame of battle, when the plow stood idle in the half-furrowed field and the heart of the mother fluttered as she sat alone in the evening's red light by the cradle of her first born, it was his privilege and opportunity to interpose his breast between the objects he loved and the missiles of the foe and he did. Mortal man never wore prouder insignia than were the stars of our dead Confederacy; never beat beneath any human breast they decked a heart of nobler impulses than that of this dead Confederate soldier.

J. I. Macks, Esq., then in a neat and appropriate manner seconded the motion for the adoption of the resolution.

Upon motion of A. T. London, Esq., the Chairman of the meeting was instructed to present the resolutions to the Superior Court, Judge Seymour presiding, with the request that they be spread upon the minutes. Upon motion of Mr. T. W. Strange, the meeting then adjourned.

Judge Seymour then ascended the bench, the court was convened and Hon. D. L. Russell, in accordance with the resolutions of the meeting of the bar, arose and presented the resolutions to the court with the request that they be spread upon the minutes of the court. Judge Russell's speech accompanying the resolutions is withheld for lack of time and space but will appear to-morrow, as will also the remarks of Mr. Macks.

At the conclusion of Judge Russell's remarks His Hon. Judge Seymour in a feeling manner said that the present occupant of this seat had not the pleasure of a very long acquaintance with Col. W. S. Devane, but there was the true ring of metal which could never be mistaken about him and from the recollections of an acquaintance begun in 1877, and continued up to the time of our lamented brother's death, he could endorse all that part of the resolutions which spoke of his kind-hearted, genial and social qualities. The resolutions of the members of the Bar will be spread upon the minutes of Court and as a further mark of respect to the deceased this Court will now adjourn until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

That was a delightful shower of rain which fell last night.

The Life Saving Station.

Messrs. Chas. F. Shoemaker and Montgomery D. Parker, of the Life Service Bureau at Washington, accompanied by Hon. A. M. Waddell, went down the river yesterday on the revenue cutter Colfax for the purpose of examining the localities near Bald Head with the view of locating the site of the proposed life-saving station. From the Cape Fear the party will go to Cape Lookout, on a similar mission, and on the Colfax, as we understand.
