The watermelon supply is on the wane.
Shrimps are about playing out for the season.

Oysters are being brought into market for sale but are rather milky.

Nor. barque Lyn, Wold, from this port, arrived on Tuesday at London.

For bar steel, iron and carriage goods go to JACOB'S Hardware Depot.

Sw. barque Lydia, Norden, sailed on Wednesday from London for this port.

Nor. barque Christine, Jensen, from this port, arrived at Antwerp on Tuesday.

The fish market is well supplied with mullets, which sell from five to ten cents per bunch.

The new market house, which will be an ornament to the city, is being rapidly pushed forward.

Not one word further, either by mail or telegraph, relative to the Dr. barque North Carolina.

The date for the September regatta by the squadron of the Carolina Yacht Club has not been fixed upon as yet.

Grand Sire E. W. Williams, of the order of Good Samaritans of America, will deliver an address at Saint Maria's Hall this evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. J. R. Melton's beef market, on Second street, is undergoing many improvements. He contemplates having a very neat and attractive stall in a short time.

A watermelon over two feet in length and weighing nearly 50 pounds goes out to-morrow on the Regulator. It comes from Charlotte and is directed to a party in New York.

Yesterday's Raleigh Observer says: Thos. H. McKoy, Esq., is in the city. Everybody is praising him for his gallantry, and his intrepid courage in saving the inmates of the Atlantic Hotel.

The Charlotte Observer suggests that Wilmington have a merchants' excursion, and the Statesville Loudmark thinks that, with the proper exertion, Wilmington could build up a large trade with Western Carolina.

The Ger. barque Marie remains in the same position. Capt. Penton has the contract for taking out the anchors and not for getting her off, as we were informed yesterday. The contract for this latter has not yet been awarded.

The American eagle owned by a gentleman of this city, stalks about the streets with as lordly a strut as my Lord Roscoe Linck, until some passer-by gives him a tap with a whip, when he skulks off as Conk-Linck did before Ex-Senator Sprague.

There is room enough in a corner of every traveler's writing desk to carry the tourists' friend—Dr. Bull's Baltimore Pills. Price 25 cents.

A Good Crop of Watermelons.
There is no scarcity of watermelons in this market at present. One small schooner load, with 1,100 on board, arrived here from Federal Point this morning; in addition to the many cart loads that are brought in daily from the country.

Rain in Robeson.
Capt. Wm. Smith, of the C. C. Railway, informs us that the shower which looked so threateningly yesterday noon, in this city, was very heavy on the line of the railroad this side of Lumberton. It was, however, unaccompanied by much wind.

You can get the best White Lead, Paints and Oils, and lowest prices at JACOB'S Hardware Depot.

The Grand Excursion.

The grand excursion will be well patronized, judging by the number of tickets that are being sold by steamer from Portsmouth. The trip by the Palace Steamer—Old Dominion line—is being generally chosen. Those tickets are now being sold and delivered by Mr. P. Heinsberger. To-morrow afternoon he will have tickets by Baltimore and Philadelphia to New York.

A Tribute to Maj. Engelhard.

The following handsome tribute to the memory of Maj. Joseph A. Engelhard was rendered on Wednesday at the meeting of the Press Association in Goldsboro. It is the report of a special committee consisting of Capt. S. A. Ashe, of the Raleigh Observer, Mr. C. F. C. Deake, of the Roan Mountain Republican, and Henry A. London, Jr., Esq., of the Chatham Record. Capt. Ashe reported as follows:

Joseph Adolphus Engelhard was born at Monticello, Mississippi, on the 27th day of September, 1832, and died at Raleigh, North Carolina, on February, 15th, 1879. His days of boyhood were passed first in Mississippi, and then at New Albany, in Indiana, where he was prepared for college, and whence he came to Chapel Hill in 1850.

He graduated with distinction in the class of 1854 with Col. Wm. L. Saunders, Wm. E. Anderson, R. B. Saunders, R. H. Battle, Jr., and others who have achieved fame and honors in their various pursuits in life.

By his associations at Chapel Hill he became warmly attached to North Carolina and to our North Carolina people. He studied law first at Harvard, then returned to his Alma Mater, and under the supervision of Hon. Wm. H. Battle, continued his preparations for entering the bar, which was his chosen profession. Desiring, however, to be armed cap-a-pie, he preferred to pursue a further course under Judge Fowle before applying for his license. He was admitted to the bar in 1856, and at once located at Tarboro, where he remained until the beginning of hostilities in 1861.

On the 26th of September, 1855, he married Miss Margaret Eliza Cotten, daughter of John W. Cotten, Esq., of Raleigh, by whom he had two daughters and two sons, who, together with Mrs. Engelhard, survive him.

In May, 1861, he entered the service of North Carolina as Captain and Quartermaster of the 33d Regiment. In the following April he was promoted to Brigade Quartermaster of Gen. Branch's Brigade; and in December, 1862, he was transferred as Adjutant General to Pender's Brigade, accepting a reduced rank to get in the field.

In May, 1863, on Pender's promotion to a Major-General he became Adjutant to Pender's Division, at Edwards Wilcox's Division, which office he continued to fill until the final surrender at Appomattox.

His military services were gratefully appreciated by his commanding officers, and in particular was he distinguished for conspicuous gallantry on the terrible field of Gettysburg, where he had his horse killed under him, and where he entered the enemy's works, leading the right of that division of our troops. To him the honor was accorded of writing the official report of the heroic achievements of the division on these three days of sanguinary conflict. In 1865, the convass for the convention coming on, Major Engelhard took the stump and fairly launched his bark on the political seas of the Old North State. On the assembling of the Legislature in 1865, he was elected Secretary of the Senate, to which position he was re-elected in 1867. In December, 1865, he had purchased an interest in the Wilmington Journal and from that date Wilmington became his home and place of residence. He continued the editor of that paper until 1876, in the summer of which year he was nominated for Secretary of State, to which office he was elected in the following November. He remained in that office until his death.

At the inception of this Association he played an important part and perhaps contributed more to its formation than any other person connected with the Press. He was our first President, and continued in office for several terms, and no one ever exhibited greater zeal for its successful operation than himself. Such is the brief biography of our deceased brother who has only preceded us a few short days in the journey along the dark and lonely way. Apparently in the full flush of ruddy health he was cut down by an sudden blow and passed away forever.

Of our deceased brother we may well say, the grave has taken from us no nobler victim—for no greater heart, no more determined spirit, no more manly man has gone hence than him whom we delighted to call our friend and whose loss we now so deeply mourn. In life, Maj. Engelhard was an earnest worker. He seems to have early recognized that capacity to perform is of but slight advantage unless sustained by habits of constant industry. In whatever field of labor we may choose to view him, we find him successful—not moderately, but eminently; and this success which so marks his career all through life, is directly traceable to his persistent attention to the matter in hand. As a journalist he achieved high fame. It is a laborious profession; but he was by education and habits well qualified to answer its strictest requirements. His success in that difficult role is acknowledged by all—for but few papers in North Carolina ever had a stronger personal following or greater influence than the WILMINGTON JOURNAL when conducted by Joseph A. Engelhard. Here he realized a proper conception of an editorial career. He was a tribune of the people. No one dared approach him with any sinister proposition. On no occasion did he ever depart from that line of action which he believed led to the attainment of those objects which constituted the happiness and promoted the welfare of the people of North Carolina.

"He would have scorned to prostitute his high position of the leading editor of his beloved State to the advancement of any enterprise or the promotion of any object which could in any manner impede his people in their progress to material independence, from out of the ruin and disaster that had overtaken them.

To him, a free, untrammelled, and unshackled Press was committed, and he ever kept his precious charge like a gallant knight and chivalrous gentleman.

His journalistic course was unstained by any servile subservience to ambitious men, and untarnished by the dishonor of sacrificing public interests to secure personal ends. Born a freeman, born a gentleman, ennobled by a long career among men of honor, amid the carnage of battle and in the presence of death, he would have regarded it the most shameful of personal dishonors to have surrendered his precious character of freeman and gentleman and to have prostituted at once himself and his press by advocating any measure that did not have for its object the advancement of North Carolina.

His people appreciated his high worth and great services, and when he first sought office at their hands bestowed upon him the position of Secretary of State, then ranked among the most desirable of political offices, because of its emoluments and important duties. These duties he discharged to the utmost satisfaction. There never was a more faithful and efficient officer within our borders than Joseph A. Engelhard. Others may have equaled him, but in official excellence certainly none ever excelled him.

His character was sound and symmetrical. Faithful in friendships, indulgent, kind, loving at home, honorable among men, and distinguished no less for a fine and discriminating judgment than by a determined and forceful activity, he was indeed an honor to our profession, an honor to Carolina and an honor to mankind. His loss we mourn; his memory we will cherish; his virtues we will emulate, and his many excellencies we will bear in loving remembrance, so that we may, perhaps, learn from his example how best to illustrate, ennoble and adorn the high profession to which we are called.

We submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in the death of Joseph A. Engelhard this Association has lost an esteemed member, the profession of journalism an honored name, the State government an efficient, faithful and incorruptible officer, and the people of North Carolina a worthy citizen ardently devoted to their interests, jealous of their honor and full of zeal for the advancement of their happiness and welfare.

Resolved, That we sympathize deeply, with his bereaved family in their distress and sore affliction, and that the Secretary of this Association be directed to send a copy of these resolutions to Mrs. Engelhard.

Resolved, That the press of the State be requested to print these resolutions.

Wilmington, N. C.

With this simple caption Major Creecy, of the Elizabeth City Economist, goes for our people most unequivocally—in fact, we may say, regardless of consequences. But he does it as he does everything—very handsomely—and we know that he will pardon us for reproducing here his remarks. Need we say with how much delight we would all hail an intimate commercial intercourse with the good people of his section, and how fervently we hope that such a thing may yet come to pass? Here is Major Creecy's handsome reference to our city and people:

No town in North Carolina or elsewhere has exhibited more business energy and enterprise than Wilmington. It has always been most liberal in its contributions to all works designed to develop the slumbering resources of the State. When in the infancy of progress, its subscription to its first railroad exceeded the value of its real estate. It was a bold execution of the dictates of a wise forecast. This was in its infancy, before it became one of the recognized places of commercial importance. Now that its commercial importance has become established and its foreign and domestic trade has placed it in the front rank of seaboard cities the same active and enterprising spirit characterizes its people. It watches its interests. It is jealous of its trade. And it is, if we see aright, bearing off the palm from active competitors in and out of the State.

At present, the Albemarle section has no trade connection with Wilmington, except during the corn trade of the winter, and strangely enough, that trade has not produced other connection; but the day, we are sure, is not distant, when we shall be brought by iron bands in intimate daily relations, and when Wilmington and Edenton, Elizabeth City, Plymouth and the other Albemarle towns will be connected by rail and inland water routes and become united by business and social ties.

The Crops.

Mr. Winton, proprietor of the Dining Saloon at the Front street depot, informs us that the crops in the vicinity of Wilson, where he has a plantation, were never in a better nor more prosperous condition than at present. The only danger now is that too much rain may injure the cotton. His own crop will be the best he has ever made, if the season continues favorable.

In the Mails.

An amphibious animal, ycleped a 'terrapin' by the polite but a 'tar'pin' by those who doled in the article, was found this morning in the mail from the South. It is alive and still kicking and awaits a claimant. The owner will please come out of his shell and make himself known and call for his property.

City Court.

Alderman Bowlen, Mayor pro tem, presiding.

Charles Hill was before the Mayor pro tem this morning, in obedience to an order issued to the Chief of Police yesterday, and after an examination of one or two witnesses was told to go and sin no more.

One case of drunkenness and disorderly conduct was continued until Tuesday. This finished the business and the Court adjourned.

The best Windows, Doors and Blinds and Lowest Prices can be got at JACOB'S Hardware Depot.

New Steamer Launched.

The steamer John Dawson was launched at Point Caswell on yesterday. She is 78 feet long by 18 feet wide and 4 feet deep. She was built and is owned by Capt. R. P. Paddison and David Sherman, Esq., and will be ready for use by the middle of October. The John Dawson was built for speed and strength and will be run in connection with the steamer Isis on the Black River. She will be supplied with two twelve inch cylinders and was named in honor of our townsman, Hon. Jno. Dawson.

That Alligator.

It seems that the alligator which has for some time past "roosted" under the wharf of the New York Steamship Line, was mortally wounded by Mr. Smallbones when he shot at him the other day. The body rose the next day just in front of the wharf and drifted some distance down the river where it was discovered and secured by Mr. Burnett, a fisherman. Mr. Smallbones has the skeleton of the head as a trophy of the event. The 'gator was between five and six feet in length and is said to be a young one.

Window Glass of all sizes at JACOB'S Hardware Depot.

Shipments of Pine Straw.

The shipment of pine straw from this port to New York, heretofore mentioned by us, is assuming very considerable proportions. The steamship Berector took out 122 bales on her last trip and the Regulator will carry out 50 bales. Application was made for freight room for 100 but 50 was all she could take of the lot.

This straw is brought here loose and is baled in the city. It is green and is what is known as "long-leaf pine." The bales are heavy and weigh from 700 to 800 pounds.

More of the Storm.

During the recent gale, the schooner Lorenzo, Capt. Russell, was lying at anchor in New River. The violence of the storm was such that she dragged her anchor and, unfortunately, it became fouled under the schooner and knocked holes in her bottom, so that she sunk. The vessel is badly damaged, as is also the cargo. She was sunk in shoal water, not far from the shore, and will probably be raised and repaired. The Captain, writing from Swansboro, states that all the small craft caught in the storm south of Cape Hatteras are capsized. We are under obligations to the officers of the Signal Service in this city for the courtesy of the above information.

The Texas Traveler at Beaufort.

The Beaufort refugees are beginning to tell some of the funny incidents in connection with the recent serious disaster as their scare wears off. The "Texas Traveler" slept through most of the storm and was "aroused by a piece of the plastering of the wall falling on him. He felt the house shaking and hopping out of bed grabbed the first thing which came to hand and which afterwards proved to be a dress spike tail coat. He threw it around him as he ran down the steps and soon was standing around in the crowd. It was discovered that the coat was all of outer clothing he had on and the description of the figure he cut in his "claw-hammer" coat and white unmentionables is enough to relax the risibles of an Egyptian mummy.

The curbstone brokers in eatables rule the city and block up the sidewalks with their garbage boxes and barrels.

PLEASE NOTICE.

We will be glad to receive communications from our friends on any and all subjects of general interest but:

The name of the writer must always be furnished to the Editor.

Communications must be written on only one side of the paper.

Magistrate's Court.

Jno. Smith, colored, was arraigned before Justice Hall this morning for assault and battery upon the person of Lydia Cole, colored. Found guilty and ordered to pay one penny and costs.

The same defendant was arraigned before the same Justice upon a peace warrant and ordered to pay costs of the case and furnish bond of $50 to keep the peace for three months.

Lydia Cole, colored, plaintiff in the foregoing cases was arrested upon the affidavit of Jno. Smith, defendant in the same cases, charged with assault and battery upon the aforesaid Jno. Smith and arraigned before Justice Hall. The defendant was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of one penny and the costs.

Before J. C. Hill, J. P., Bristol Banuerman, colored, was tried for assault and battery, found guilty and committed to jail in default of payment of fine and costs.
