Another Serious Case Before the May a Murderous Intent.

other large levee this morning.

The first called was Harry Vane, a German sailor, who was charged with disorderly conduct in a house near Paddy's Hollow, from which he broke and ran, when Officer E. S. Griffith pursued and caught him and escorted him to the Guard House. The prisoner was remand ed until the Mayor had time to consider the case and make some further inquiries

Edward McFarland, alias Pot Hooks, a little bow-legged boot black, well known shout these parts, was arraigned for disorderly conduct. Having been locked up all night the Mayor allowed him to depart

Julia Ford and Mary Eliza Lively, both old acquaintances of the Mayor in his official capacity, were arraigned for an affray in the neighborhood of that delecta. ble spot which our readers may have seen some account of before in these columns, known as Paddy's Hollow. The two dusky hued damsels were convicted of disorderly conduct and told to relieve themselves of $5 apiece and deposit the same with the Clerk or go below for ten days, The next case called was C. Z Costin.

years of age, with a gash upon his nose. one upon his throat and still another upon his left wrist, was called to the witness stand, and testified in effect, that himself and Costin had been together the night previous, and had gone to barroom on Market street and taken something to drink, and after walking about a little while, repaired to the Rock Spring Hotel where Bolton was stopping, and both retired to the same room together for the purpose of going to bed. That after he had undressed and was in bed, the light extinguished and the door locked, Costin and himself commenced discussing the merits of a horse trade which witness had made with Costin's brother some time ago, and that in a few moments, while lying in bed, Costin CITY HALL-ONE WEEK jumped on him and commenced cutting him with a knife, inflicting the wounds,

Mr. Robert Lee, the proprietor of the hotel, was then called and testified that Bolton and Costin came into his hotel The Register submitted his report of last night together, both friendly and agreed to take the same room and bed, but did not know anything about the disturbance until the pelice came in,

Officer Wadkins testified that about that upon going into the hotel and informing the clerk, he was told that in all probability Costin, who had been drinking, wanted to get out and get more whiskey. Officer Wadkins then went out and into an alley by the hotel from whence he could distinctly hear a man breathing hard as though he was struggling for breath. Went immediataly back into the hotel with officer Meyer, and open the door and saw the defendant, Costin, astride of Bolton in the bed. Immediately arrested Costin and took him out of the room when he remarked "If

Mr. R. C. Johnson, a guest of the hotel, testified that he was sleeping in the adjoining room and heard the sculling, and the cry of Lee!
