JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Prop.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1870.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT WILMINGTON, N. C., AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

POLITICAL PIETY.

All the law, all the order, all the immaculate goodness and purity, and all the piety have been claimed by a large portion of the people of the North as belonging exclusively to that blessed section, and that all other parts of the United States, and especially the South, are inhabited by a set of outside barbarians and heathen.

For many years the clergy of the North, of the Republican political faith, have been in the habit of discussing political affairs in the pulpit, on Sundays. The custom, we know, has not been universal, but it has become altogether too common to advance the spiritual welfare of the listeners.

O Lord and Almighty Father, with thou in thine infinite mercy and goodness regard favorably the loyal people of these United States and shower upon them thy unalloyed blessings that they may praise thee, but send thy hot damnation upon the Southern Ku Klux and the Northern Democrats, for they are constantly sowing strife and discord among thy children.

THE MAINE ALARM.

The men of Maine are excited. Their blood is at fever heat, and the wild alarm of a threatened war is heard throughout the length and breadth of that frozen State. There will be no fight, however; of that we may rest assured.

Notwithstanding the big talk and the loud talk, the marshaling of forces here and there, the ring of ramrods and the garrisoning of the fort, the State House, we do not believe that the Democrats and Greenbackers have for one moment had a serious idea of forcing a conflict.

If the combined Democrats and Greenbackers in Maine are wrong they certainly are wrong with a reason and they are wrong too in a majority. There is much method in their madness. The meagre reports sent South are evidently of Republican origin; to read them and rely upon them, one would think that the Fusionists are a mere handful of men, a mob who are determined to set law and order and justice at defiance—whereas, on the contrary, they are backed and sustained by a majority of the people of Maine, among whom will be found representatives of the wealth and intelligence of that State.

DRIVING THE UTES TO WAR.

A new device for breaking the truce in Colorado and forcing the Utes out upon the war path, says the New York Sun, is now tried. On Saturday last, Chief Douglas, applying for rations at the Los Pinos Agency, was refused by Major Sherman, now in charge there.

Only the other day Mr. Carl Schurz, in speaking of his treatment of the Utes, used this language: "It has never been held by the Department of the Interior that an individual member of the Ute nation committed a crime, the whole nation should be held responsible and punished in retribution."

Nevertheless, in now cutting off the food of the White River Utes and leaving them to starve, Mr. Schurz risks a war or invites one; in forcing the innocent to hunger as well as the guilty, he does the injustice which he declared it his duty to avoid; in unjustly and inhumanly constraining a provision of the Ute treaty, requiring the surrender of offenders, as releasing the Government from its duty to supply food, he punishes the whole tribe for the act of a few.

But this device, which has caused deep discontent among both the Uncompagned and White River Utes, is only the latest of a long series of efforts to push the Utes to the wall. Half their grievances have not yet been heard to the House Investigating Committee, in enough has been made known to show that the original provocations to outbreak came from Mr. Schurz's own men.

Hitherto the official aim has been to fasten public attention exclusively on the conduct of the Indians after they went to war, and so to divert it from the causes that drove them to war.

Gen. Adams, one of Mr. Schurz's own commissioners, tells the House Committee that Meeker was overbearing with the Utes; that he drove them twelve miles from the agency, around which their camp used to be; that he removed them again, because he wanted to plough on the lands they occupied; that he threatened them with punishment by the soldiers, which was the cause of their taking up arms.

Mr. Leelsays the Indian Bureau failed to send the supplies of food and the farm tools due under the treaty. Gen. Fish shows that bureau neglect forced the Utes to travel 175 miles to Rawlins for food, and that their needed at White River stayed at Rawlins until it rotted. There is plenty of such evidence before the Committee; yet much of it had been made known to the Indian Bureau by Meeker's predecessor, Mr. E. H. Danforth, as long ago as 1876. This is the language of Mr. Danforth's report:

"The annuities and supplies furnished these Indians amount to, at a liberal estimate, not over one-half that required for their support. None of the annuity goods and but part of their supplies have reached this agency during the year. Goods purchased in August last year been lying at the railroad depot, 175 miles away, since November last, a period of over nine months. Flour purchased the last of June is still at Rawlins; no clothing, blankets, implements, or utensils of any kind have been issued at this agency for nearly two years; no flour, except once, fifteen pounds to a family, since May."

Then will follow that spoliation of the Ute lands, which is the end and object of all these performances.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan 23, 1880.

There were first twice as many votes in the House yesterday against disturbing the currency as in favor of disturbing it. The vote was on the bill of Mr. Buckner, requiring National banks to keep half their reserve in coin. This vote gives the seal of certainty to the House determination to let the currency alone.

However, there is a gratifying uniformity of opinion in Congress that a bond at less than four per cent. can be sold at par.

There have been several propositions submitted during the session, for the reduction or abatement of duties on articles imported, notably on salt and iron. It is not probable any of them will pass.

Senator Beck's speech in opposition to the Bayard-Greenback resolution receives high praise on all sides.

Mr. Laird, Greenback representative from Maine, says the best lawyers in that State hold the present Republican Legislature to be without authority, and that the officers elected by it will not, if they can help it, perform any act which will enable the other side to commence proceedings in a case to be brought finally to the United States Supreme Court.

If I were to select any Republican connected with this administration about whom to say a good word, it would be Assistant Secretary Hawley, of the Treasury Department. He seems to be having a boom for his party nomination for Governor of Illinois.

MOONSHINE.

A man who quit keeping a diary, because he never could find any big dog to write in, was the lucky day run over by a cart, broken out of a dog trade, blackguarded by a fish-wife and drawn on a jury. He will resume the diary.—Boston Post.

A little boy of 4 was sleeping with his brother, when his mother said: "Why, Tommy, you are lying right in the middle of the bed; what will poor Harry do?" "Well, ma," he replied, "Harry's got both sides."

After family prayer, a few evenings since, a little Quixote boy asked: "Mamma, how can God hear folks pray when he's so far away?" Before the lady could frame a suitable reply, a sunny-faced little miss of five summers vehemently said: "I'll jes' bet he's dot telephons a ruminin' to every place!"—Boston Courier.

A story is told of a dour preacher in the South who took his text in Psalms (vii), "Awake, psaltery and harp." He read it peevish and harp and expounded his time and energy on the psaltery, describing its size and flowers and fruit, and how it was cultivated, and was used solely to hang harps on. Unfortunately, he said, it could not be raised in this country!

"Figaro" has a new version of the fable of the dog who saw his visage reflected in the brook, which is more applicable to modern life than the original A. dog, carrying a stolen beefsteak in his mouth, comes to a limed stream, which reflects surrounding objects as clearly as a mirror. Perceiving the reflected image of himself, he thinks of seeing the piece of meat it holds, which he supposes to be real, but concludes that it would be more prudent first to devour his own piece. Then he looks again in the stream. The reflected dog has nothing in his teeth, and expresses the satisfaction of a contented stomach. "Hi!" says the dog, "that fellow had the same idea I had!" And he runs away laughing.

Father is Getting Well.

My daughter says, "How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters." He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable, and we are so glad that he used your Bitters.—A lady of Rochester, N. Y.
