[ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT WILMINGTON, N. C., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.]

VIEWS AND REVIEWS.

It is stated that the French Jesuits are making important purchases in Spain of old convents and houses, in view of their expulsion from France.

The crematory at Washington, Pa. has regular fixed rate of charge—$25 per adult, a reasonable reduction being made to families or clubs of ten.

Mary Power Lator, one of the distributors of the Herald's Irish fund; telegraphs that that fund is now providing daily with a full, wholesome meal 15,345 children.

It is said that the three literary societies connected with the University of Indiana, at Bloomington, have decided to invite Hon. Jefferson Davis to deliver the annual address before them.

No fewer than nineteen different sanitary detachments, composed of doctors and nurses, have been set to work in the Russian province of Kharkoff to combat the ravages of diphtheria, which is increasing.

The Russian Government has delivered to the Porte its bill of expenses for the maintenance of Turkish prisoners during the last war. The sum to be reimbursed amounts to $4,700,000. Immediate payment is asked; whence the money is to come no one knows.

Prince Bismarck has been forced to resolve to give up drinking his much-loved beer. His weight has so alarmingly increased that he has reluctantly followed the urgent advice of his physicians, who have long tried to dissuade him from the excessive use of malt liquor.

Oshkosh, Wisconsin, has the largest match factory in the world. It cut up 2,000,000 feet of logs into matches, and used $300,000 worth of revenue stamps during 1879. Besides, it manufactured one-fourth of all the merchant work, sash, blinds and doors made in the United States.

There are 1480 Jesuits in France. Paris and its suburbs contain 123 Jesuit communities and the Jesuit colleges throughout France number 27. If the recent edict be insisted upon, it is thought that, under dispensation, the fathers will drop their habit and remain as secular priests.

Prince Leopold, Queen Victoria's youngest son, is about to visit this country. He is a young man of marriageable years, and there is sure to be a flutter in American society immediately upon his arrival. It must be borne in mind, however, that he is a youth not only of courtly manners, but of irreproachable morals, and not likely to be caught in any questionable ambuscade.

Last November an old merchant, on sending his nephew to study law at Paris, presented him with an old copy of the code, with the remark, 'I will come to see you in March and if you have been diligent I will make you a handsome present.' At the appointed time the old gentleman was on hand. 'Well, my boy,' said he, 'have you worked hard?' 'Oh, yes,' answered the nephew confidently. 'In that case you have already got your reward.' 'I don't know what you mean, uncle.' 'Hand me the code, my boy.' He opens the volume, and between the first two leaves finds a five hundred franc note, which he had intended for his nephew, but which he put into his own pocket.

Mrs. Lydia Dickinson, the widow of ex-Senator Daniel S. Dickinson, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel G. Courtney, in New York, Thursday, at the age of 77 years. Mrs. Dickinson was a notable figure in the society of New York and Washington during her husband's life time. When she married Senator Dickinson he was a gawky young countryman of 22, much below her in social position. She had recognized her lover's excellent qualities, and as his wife devoted herself to bringing them out. In after life Senator Dickinson never tired of saying that but for his wife he would not have become, as he was, a lawyer, State Senator, Lieut.-Governor, Judge and United States Senator. In person Mrs. Dickinson was tall and slender, with dark blue eyes, dark brown hair and gentle manners.

Grateful Women.

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is most universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.

NO YELLOW FEVER YET. We are glad to state that the report, which appeared in the press of patches yesterday, that yellow fever, of a malignant type, had made its appearance in New Orleans and Memphis, is without any foundation in fact. Dr. Joseph Jones, President of the Board of Health, in the former city, has written a letter to the National Board of Health in which he states that no case of yellow fever has been reported to the State Board of Health thus far during the present year. We are gratified at the intelligence and hope that the cities of the South may be spared the terrible affliction which visited them last year.

THE TILDEN-KELLY WAR.

The Democratic party in New York seem to be mixed up in an everlasting quarrel, with no prospect that the breach can be healed. On the contrary, the more that attempts are made by those who desire to work for the good of the party and the country to bring about a pacification of the troubles between the conflicting elements in the Empire State, the more obstinately antagonistic do the two parties become. The Tilden wing of the party, notwithstanding the disaster which attended their course of conduct in the last State election, by which the Democracy sustained a disreputable defeat, continue with persistent determination to urge him for the nomination at Cincinnati. The Tammany wing of the party, of which John Kelley is the acknowledged leader and guiding spirit, is bitterly and irreconcilably opposed to Tilden, and as its previous acts have conclusively shown, will oppose every step which may tend to advance Mr. Tilden's interests, even to giving the State, and consequently the Presidency, to the Republicans.

This condition of things is a source of infinite delight to the statewarts, who look upon the situation in that State with the most complacent satisfaction. They see in this war of the Democratic factions a most decisive victory for themselves, and they only hope that the implacable animosity of Kelly may not be appeased, nor the persistent efforts of Tilden fail of success in securing the nomination. They see in this jarring discord the only sure and certain means of defeat to the Democracy, and victory for themselves in the Presidential race.

The fact that this war of factions in the State of New York is menacing the Democracy of the country with ignominious defeat is miserable to contemplate. It ought to be, can, and must be, suppressed. The Democrats throughout the entire country are so vitally interested in this conflict that they ought to take the matter in hand at once and let the belligerents know that their quarrel shall not be allowed to endanger the prospects of the party. It is an imperative duty, which Democrats owe to themselves and to the country, to protect the interests of the party from the disaster which this war of factions threatens, and that can only be successfully accomplished by completely ignoring the claims of either Tilden or Kelly. Let Tilden be made to stand aside, where he ought to be, merely as an individual in the party, and select some candidate, without any reference to him or John Kelly, upon whom the party as a national organization could heartily and earnestly unite, and there would be no doubt as to the result. Mr. Tilden is now the load which the Democratic party has to carry, and the sooner he is jettisoned the better.

THE CLOSING SCENES.

In speaking of the final incidents and proceedings relative to the army appropriation bill in the House of Representatives, the reporter for the New York World gives the following graphic account:

"Thursday's scenes were reenacted in the House to-day. The Democrats continued their exasperating silence and left the Republicans to rant over the free elections amendment to the army bill. The fears which were entertained that the Republicans would resort to filibustering rather than permit any limitations to be put on general debate proved unfounded, for they were unusually docile at the beginning of the session to-day, and at the end of the call of States and Territories, which lasted about an hour, it was unanimously agreed that all general debate should be closed at 4:30. All of the time was again yielded to the Republicans and for three hours they fought the air and pranced about in the fury of debate with no opposition. The Democrats were heartlessly tantalizing all this time, and while the 'bloody-shirt' orators were doing their best they added insults to injury by quietly and with every appearance of innocence stealing off to their cloak rooms and away. The debate was rather more desultory than on Saturday. The leading Republicans, appreciating the situation, discreetly refrained from participation in it, and so the less consequential were left to do all the talking. Among these were Messrs. Price, Butterworth, Bayne, Baizham, Cowgill, Dunsell, Cullenden, Lapham and Hazleton, the only two of whom who voted against the rider last year being Messrs. Bayne and Cowgill. The others, with the exception of Messrs. Cullenden and Lapham, who are recorded as not voting, all voted last year in favor of the identical clause which they now so much oppose. It is said that when Garfield heard that his Republican colleagues were trying to prolong the debate until his return to Washington, he immediately notified them that it would be preferable to him that they should dispose of the matter at once. He has thus again disappointed his party. When the debate began on Thursday he pushed himself to the front and acted as though he intended to lead against the so-called rider. His attention, however, was kindly directed by the Democrats to his speech and vote of last year on the same subject, and on Friday he was observed to spend over an hour in carefully examining the Congressional Record of the last session. He found that not only had he voted for it, but that he had in the strongest terms advocated the passage of the army bill, with the harmless amendment which has recently been attached to such huge proportions. The great leader thereupon made haste to fly the town, even at the risk of being accused of desertion in the hour of trial. Mr. Conger had prepared a fierce speech against the rider, and was down near the top of the list of those who were to speak; but he suddenly discovered that he too had voted for it last year, and subsided without delivering himself. Today Conger looked unusually sour, but he said not a word. His disordered condition was attributed to the fact that he had just learned this morning that Mr. Garfield had left word with Mr. Randolph Tucker that the latter might vote for the passage of the army bill with the rider, as he, Garfield, would vote for it if he were here in time. This information, it is said, caused several Republican members to pocket their speeches and to submit meekly to the inevitable.

At 4:30 general debate ended. The Republicans then proposed Robeson's and several other amendments, all of which were voted down by constantly diminishing yeas. An amendment offered by Mr. Keifer to add to the clause prohibiting the use of troops the words "except as authorized by the Constitution of the United States," was intended to embarrass the Democrats. The latter perceived that it was mere catch, and Mr. Blackburn offered to vote for it if Mr. Keifer would modify it so that it would read: "Except as authorized and provided for by the Constitution of the United States." Mr. Keifer refused to accept the suggestion, whereupon Mr. Field, a Republican member from Massachusetts, made the point that Mr. Keifer's amendment amounted to nothing, for the reason that the power vested by the Constitution in the Executive could not be changed or restricted by a simple act of Congress. The Democrats took the same view of the matter, and in order to prevent complications that could come of misrepresentation of the law, voted down the Keifer proposition by more than a party majority. Subsequently, after all the Republican amendments had been voted down, an amendment of Mr. Hurd, of Ohio, was agreed to, which in substance embodied the Keifer amendment but in more definite terms. It provided that nothing contained in the pending bill should be construed to prevent the use of troops to protect any of the States against domestic violence, or the application of the Legislature of the State, or of the Executive when the Legislature could not be convened. Sooner than this bill was agreed to in Committee of the Whole and reported to the House. The previous question was then ordered and the House adjourned. There remains nothing more to be done but to call the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill which would have been done to-day but for the lateness of the hour. The bill will be disposed of to-morrow.

Perhaps it was sentiment that actuated a Nevada editor when he wrote of a dead orator: 'Death has turned off his gas.' If he had written in sarcasm he would have put it: 'The King of Terrors has stopped his wind mill.'

Tommy had always been accustomed to say his prayers under his mother's direction, but one night he was left to attend to it himself. When his mother saw him next morning, he said, 'Mamma, I guess I'll say my prayers by myself after this. Profit, $1,200

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit."
