"Texas Jack," whose real name was J. B. Omohundro, a famous scout of the plains, died at Leadville, Col., last Monday. He will be remembered by many of our readers as having accompanied Buffalo Bill on his first appearance here some three years ago and as his "right bow" on the stage.

Those who suffer from nervous irritations, itching uneasiness, and the discomfort that follows from an enfeebled and disordered state of the system, should take AYER'S SASSAPARILLA and cleanse the blood. Purge out the lurking distemper that undermines the health and constitutional vigor will return.

That $100 Counterfeit.

If the $100 counterfeits on the National Exchange Bank of Baltimore should come around this way they may be detected by the following points: In the genuine bills there is a black dot under the letter 's' in the abbreviated word 'cashier,' while in the counterfeit there is none. Further, the letter 'j' in 'July' strikes the shading of the 'u' in 'National' in the counterfeit note, while in the genuine they are the thirty-second of an inch apart. In the heart-shaped figures in the left end of the panel containing the word 'Baltimore' eight lines appear in the spurious note whereas only seven are in the genuine. The border of the genuine note containing the word and figures 'hundred' is square-jointed at the corners and poorly executed, while in the other note a joint is seen and the workmanship is smooth. As a sure test for all genuine $100 bank notes place a straight-edge at the bottom of the words 'with the U. S. Treasurer at Washington,' and showing the edge to extend to the figure of liberty, it will strike the lips of the figure, while applied to a counterfeit it strikes the base of the chin.

Personal.

Col. L. L. Polk, lately Commissioner of Agriculture in this State, which position, it will be remembered, he resigned a few weeks ago, called to see us today. He is now connected with the Raleigh News and is traveling in the interests of that paper.

Mr. Morton, District Superintendent of the American Union line, is in the city to-day, and favored us with a visit. He tells us that if the injunction sued out against his company, spoken of elsewhere, is decided in favor of them, a strong force will be at once put to work erecting the lines, and that they will certainly open an office here by the first of September. They are now at Petersburg and it will not take them very long to reach Wilmington. Skilled workmen will be put on, and the poles to be erected are of chestnut wood, which is said to be more durable than any other. We were very much interested in Mr. Morton's description of a little instrument, the right of which is vested in his company, which is to be put up in the office or residence of every subscriber, whereby, simply by turning a crank, a message may be instantly summoned from headquarters for the purpose of carrying up a telegram for transmission.

Closing Exercises of St. James' Seminary, Misses Burr & James, Principals.

The closing exercises of the institution, or perhaps it would be proper to say the Soiree, by the pupils of this Seminary came off last evening. As is usual on all such occasions the rooms were crowded and everybody seemed delighted and happy. And they had reason to feel so for the entertainment was certainly one of a very high order of merit, reflecting great credit not only upon the pupils but upon the accomplished principals whose creative touch, and whose remarkable skill in forming beautiful combinations have given them such a high reputation, not only here at home but in other portions of the State also.

The exercises commenced with a salutary address by Miss Beattie Ledford which was exceedingly appropriate, eloquently expressed and gracefully delivered. She bore a banner with that strange device, Excelsior, which is also the motto of the school, indicative of that high standard of perfection which has been the determination of the management to attain. This was followed by a sentimental trio on the piano by Misses Anderson, Barlow and Murray and was well executed; then came a Recitative, the Death of Little Nell, by Miss Annie Meares. The song, 'Grandfather's Chair' by Misses Wood, Barlow and Hardwick, was beautifully rendered and loudly applauded. The instrumental solo by Miss Lulu Agostini displayed great skill and brilliancy of touch for so youthful a performer, and the same is applicable to Misses Heinsberger, Barlow and Plummer.

We must confess to a weakness for ballad music and therefore were delighted with the simple Scotch song by Miss Athalia Lippitt. She sang it well, indeed, charmingly, and we felt the better for hearing it. The 'Two Cousins,' by Misses French and Von Glahn, was not by any means the least attractive piece that was rendered; on the contrary, it received as it deserved the warmest encomiums on all sides. But the most amusing and certainly the most admirably executed piece upon the programme was the 'Death of Cock Robin,' by little Jimmy Watson and other little ones. It was so true to nature, and the little fellow seemed so heart broken at the death of poor 'Robin' that he could scarcely make the enquiries so familiar to us in nursery rhyme as to the manner of his death for the sobs that almost choked his utterance. We hesitate not to say that our sympathies were much excited and we almost wished that we were a child again to mingle our tears with his. By request of the audience the beautiful song 'Drifting with the Tide,' closed the first part of the performance.

The prizes were then distributed by Mr. Thomas W. Strange. Mr. Strange was very happy in his preparatory remarks, and alluded with much feeling to the fact that nearly twenty years ago he had mounted the first round of the ladder of knowledge under the tutelage of the lady principals of this school, in whose presence he now stood. His address though necessarily brief, was well conceived and well expressed and delivered.

The Excelsior Medal, the highest prize of the school, and most difficult to attain, was awarded to Miss Johanna Quince. In the first class Miss Kate Barlow received the prize, Miss Mary VanOrsdell in the third class, Miss Lucy Moore in the fourth, Miss Augusta McPherson in the fifth, Miss Sallie Griffin in the sixth, Master Charlie Grainger in the seventh, and Master Sanford Birdsey in the eighth. In composition, Miss Ledford and Miss Quince were awarded prizes.

After a most thorough preparatory examination Miss Ledford and Miss Barlow received their diplomas as graduates of the institution, and right here we must congratulate those young ladies at having so successfully passed through so trying an ordeal.

The second part was equally as entertaining as the first but our limits forbid an extended notice. Where all did so well it were invidious perhaps to particularize, but we cannot refrain from commending in the warmest terms the recitation, the 'Maniac,' by Miss Hinton. She certainly displayed elocutionary powers of a very high order in one so young. She had a very difficult part to sustain, and did it well. A very pleasing incident near the close of the performance was the appearance upon the stage of ten of the more youthful pupils, each bearing a bouquet of flowers and forming a certain number of letters in the alphabet which upon being joined together formed the sentence 'Come unto Me.' It was a happy thought and happily expressed. The valedictory was spoken by Miss Ledford and was alike creditable to her head and heart, and the exercises terminated with a medley chorus by the school which brought down the house and sent everybody home in the best possible humor.

One word now in conclusion. For reasons which will be readily understood by the public we have heretofore, in all of our notices of this school, contented ourselves with a simple statement of its general merit, but we cannot let this occasion pass (even if we lay ourselves open to the charge of violating some of the proprieties by doing so) without giving expression to our opinion of the admirable manner in which it is conducted. The standard of scholarship is high, the discipline firm yet gentle. The lady principals are known to be thoroughly competent and their heart is in their work. It is scarcely necessary to speak of the department of music in connection with the school. The simple fact that Mrs. Cushing presides there is a sufficient guaranty of faithfulness in the discharge of duty and of success on the part of the pupil. We do not know when we have passed a more enjoyable evening than at the Soiree last night, nor do we know which to admire most, the ability shown by the accomplished principals in all the arrangements of the occasion or the skill and accuracy displayed by the pupils in carrying out their instructions. It was an entertainment at which we doubt not every one felt that 'it was good to be there.'

News From Smithville.

Capt. Robert Lockwood, the late commander of the ill-fated steamship Champion, bound from Charleston for New York, which collided with the sailing ship Octavo, off the Capes of Delaware, some five or six months ago, was on a visit yesterday to his old home at Smithville, where he received a most cordial welcome. Captain Lockwood made his entry over the bar and into the bay at Smithville, in command of a U. S. Lighthouse supply ship, yesterday with a coast survey party on board under Col. Hayne, of the U. S. Service. We learn from a gentleman just up from Smithville that the object of the surveying party is to make a survey of the Fryling Pan Shoals, to sound for a solid rock foundation with a view of supplanting the Fryling Pan Lighthouse with a Lighthouse on the shoals.

Capt. Lockwood, we are glad to know, was in the enjoyment of excellent health and expects shortly to take charge of another large steamship now in course of construction, which is to ply between Charleston and New York.

Is It Correct?

Some one has furnished our neighbor of the Star with a list of the pastors of Front Street M. E. Church, for the past thirty years. In it 'Dr. Deems is placed at 1857 and 1858 and Rev. Thos. W. Guthrie at 1861 and 1862. Is this entirely correct? And was not Dr. Deems here in 1861 and 1862? We distinctly remember hearing him preach here on more than one occasion during the first year of the war. We are satisfied, too, that Dr. Deems' family was at that time residing in Wilmington and his eldest son, Theodore, an accomplished youth who afterwards died in hospital, first entered the service from this city.

Rev. T. B. Ricard should also, we think, have a place somewhere in the list. We write merely as we remember and from an interest in the subject. If the gentleman who furnished the information to our neighbor has it from the record, then we subside.

The Storm—Thunder and Lightning

This section was visited last evening with heavy gusts of wind and later in the night with a heavy rain accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning, followed by sharp peals of thunder; quantities of rain fell from midnight until about 6 or 7 o'clock this morning, and the parched earth eagerly drank in the cooling drops as rapidly as they reached the ground. The atmosphere was considerably cooler during the night but the temperature of the early morning air was close and sultry.

On Wrightsville Sound the lightning and thunder was even more sharp and severe than here, and at Capt. Chas. D. Myers' summer residence on Wrightsville the branches of a hickory tree in the yard were shivered, but without damage to the trunk of the tree. The flash of the lightning, we are told, resembled a ball of fire in the air and the discharge of the electricity sounded like the report of a cannon, while the sulphurous odors of the air suggested a climate of which the ghost of Hamlet's father gives a better description than we can ever hope to be able to narrate—at least from experience.

Master Charlie, Capt. Myers' eldest son, a lad of some ten or twelve summers, was knocked to the ground while out on the turnpike some fifty yards from his father's house, but we are happy to state sustained no serious injuries. At this writing, past the meridian time of day the clouds are still dark and lowering, and we apprehend that we will not wait for rain now for some time to come.

An Interesting Suit.

A very important hearing, one of much interest to our people, is to be heard in Chambers to-morrow before Judge McKoy. The Wilmington & Weldon R. R. and the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta R. R., are the parties applying for the injunction and the American Union Telegraph Co., are the defendants. It is for the purpose of restraining the American Union from erecting their lines along the railroad route. This is the basis of the suit, and it is the same obstruction which the American Union is daily contending against. The railroad companies are compelled to become the plaintiffs in the suit, because of the agreement in force between them and the Western Union, which is, of course, the party most interested in securing an injunction. The Western Union Company, it is said, pay the railroad lines throughout the country $14 per mile per annum, which amount is about absorbed by the companies in the use of the lines. The difficulty with the American Union is that the telegraphic wires should be put up at the same rental paid by the Western Union, are yet not willing to absorb the amount in dispatches, as they do by contract with the Western Union.

The case, as we have said, will be heard to-morrow before Judge McKoy. Hon. George Davis and Messrs. Stedman & Latimer appear for the roads and Messrs. Russell & Ricard for the American Union.

Probable Fatal Affray.

A soldier, one of the garrison at Smithville, was assaulted on the evening of the 27th inst., at a house of ill fame in that town, by two colored men named respectively Sam Kelly and Joe Myers, with possibly fatal results. The colored men tried to gain admittance to the house, which we learn is kept by a former denizen of Paddy's Hollow, but were refused and the door fastened against them. They then burst open the door and struck the soldier, whom they found there, with a piece of slab, which knocked him down and cut a deep gash in his head. They then bit him so badly upon the hand that amputation became necessary and at the last reports we have been able to receive it was feared that tetanus would set in. The assassins escaped and were in this city yesterday. We were unable to obtain the name of the soldier, but at the very latest reports he was but just alive.

The Work of Colporteurs.
We learn from Captain W. J. Potter that the work of colporteurs of the American Tract Society is being successfully prosecuted in the Bahama Islands by a young man who is a native of the Islands and who has been commissioned, upon Captain Potter's recommendation, as a regular colporteur by the Tract Society. Captain Potter represents the field in that locality as a good one for such work, and speaks quite hopefully of the successful operations of those who have undertaken the good work. Captain P. expects to return to the Islands upon this winter and labor in the same cause until the lateness of the season compels his return once more to the shores of America.

DIED.
JOHNSON—In Duplin county, on the night of the 29th inst., at 1 o'clock, RACHEL, wife of Wiley T. Johnson, daughter of the late Thos. C. Craft, aged 37 years. The remains will arrive here to-night and the funeral notice will appear in to-morrow's Star.
