Treed. Two white men named Brown, who live at Natmore Post-office, landed at Evans' about thirty miles up the river, on Tuesday, from the steamer Hart, on which they embarked from this city. Their usual landing place is Natmore Creek, but on account of the fresh the steamer could not make land and carried them on to Evans', a landing on the opposite side of the river from their homes. They got a batteau, placed their purchases etc., in it and attempted to cross the river, when the frail craft swamped. They clung to the boat and when it had drifted near a small sapling they swam for and reached it in safety. They climbed up the tree and at once commenced to call for aid. The steamer Murchison had by that time reached Evans', on her downward trip, where she was tied up for the night but Capt. Garrison heard their cries and lannobed his yawl and started to the assistance of the men. It being dark the Brown brothers could not be found and the yawl was carried back to the steamer. They rested in the branches of the tree all night and when the Murchison resumed her trip they succeeded in getting the much needed and coveted assistance. They were again safely landed at Evans' and the steamer proceeded on her voyage. The water at this point is about two miles wide, owing to the freshet, and the last that was seen of the Brown brothers they were skimming over the submerged coral stalks in a stronger and larger boat. This item was prepared for yesterday's issue but was crowded out.

Snakes. Here is a small chapter on snakes. It was prepared by Dr. B., who resides near Buegaw. We have read it with much interest and believe that it will furnish a few moments' pleasant and thoughtful reading for all;

Are there not some very remarkable things connected with the snake, besides the frequent enormous 'snake stories' of the press? Last September, after an absence of two hours, I returned to a beautiful, clear, sandy spot in a road on the river bank to find a rattlesnake lying in the sun, rejoicing in his brilliant, almost sparkling new dress, now for the first time glittering in the sunbeams. In about two feet, in line with the snake, lay his old robe, presenting the ordinary dirty, rusty, almost hideous appearance, so characteristic of that peaceful but dangerous snake, but apparently large enough for two such snakes as the one that had evidently just left it, which was about 4 1/2 feet long, with 12 rattles, but small for his length, and clearly in bad keeping, or had been 'tantering.'

But how did he get out? And has any one ever witnessed the process? This pencil has no answer for the last question. But to the first—and indeed the only remarkable thing is, that he evidently came out 'tail first.' The small, and tail end of the 'shed' lay in a straight unrolled line, unbroken to the very point where it had joined the rattles, while the large or head end was drawn in intususccepted, or invaginated as if the head had held on to the dequimated cuticle as it passed down, for an inch or so, and throwing the portion around the neck in folds. The whole process of 'shedding' had been accomplished in the two hours. No other human tracks were visible, and both snake and 'shed' lay in my former tracks.

The process of dequimating is, I believe, different in other species of snakes. They evidently crawl out head first, and leave their 'shed' behind, entire and unbroken as all who live where there are snakes have often seen, and always in the spring. But in the case of this rattlesnake he neglected the job till Fall, and then, poor fellow, he had to 'claw-fish' out.

Venus is evening star, and hugs the sun too closely to be seen in the early part of the month, setting now about 26 minutes after the sun. But towards the close of the month bright-eyed observers may detect her beaming presence for nearly half an hour after sunset, and next month she will be glorious to behold.

Mars is evening star, and may be seen now, though so far away and so near the sun that he will soon be lost to view. Uranus is evening star, following closely in the path of Mars, trailing with slow steps his winding way among the stars of Leo. A close conjunction occurred between Mars and Uranus on the 1st, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the 2 planets were only 17 minutes of a degree apart, Uranus being that short distance south of Mars. On the 20th there is a close conjunction between Uranus and Venus, the planets being 45 minutes of a degree apart. This phenomenon will afford a fine opportunity to the telescopic student for a study of the contrast in the planetary colors, the delicate tint of Uranus and the inimitable soft golden hue of Venus being beautifully illustrated. Uranus sets now about 8 o'clock, at the end of the month about sunset.

The August moon falls on the 20th. The new moon of the 5th pays her respects in quick succession to four of the planets; to Mercury on the 5th, the day of her birth; to Venus on the 6th, and to Uranus and Mars on the 8th. On the 23rd the moon is near Jupiter, and on the 24th she is near Saturn. Among noteworthy events the first in importance will be the continued study of elemental disturbance in terrestrial territories in connection with sun spots and the grand pull which mighty Jupiter is exerting upon the great centre of life and light. It will be well also to remember that his mass greatly exceeds that of all the other planets combined, and that the difference between his equatorial and polar diameter is 5 000 miles, or more than half of the whole diameter of the globe. Planetary possibilities are nobly illustrated in our big brother with his princely retinue of moons, and his brilliant belts and cloud rifts.

Regatta To-Morrow. To-morrow the regular August regatta of the Carolina Yacht Club will be sailed over the Wrihsville course. The yachts Lizzie, Restless, Flirt and Ripple are the only ones entered for the race. The winning boat will wear the champion flag of the Club.

Democratic Rally in Columbus. There will be a grand rally of the Democrats of Columbus county, at Freeman's Cross Roads, on Saturday next, the 14th inst. The Executive Committee, Messrs. G. B. Robeson, J. W. Binkley and D. C. Allen, extend courteous invitations to the people at large to come out and participate in the meeting. There will be plenty of barbecue etc., and a good time and good speeches are promised every one in attendance.

Timber Rafts. We understand that there are a great many timber rafts in the river above Fayetteville but comparatively very few in the lower part of the river. For several days past they have been arriving in this city and they continue to pour in. Several rafts have been taken by the cross-tills and carried high up into the fields and woods. Others have been broken up and the logs carried pell-mell in every direction. As soon as the river falls sufficiently the rafts above Fayetteville will be brought to this city.

Planets in August. Jupiter is a superb object to every beholder during the August evenings, as he comes beaming above the horizon like a brilliant young moon. He rises now about 9 o'clock; at the end of the month about 8 o'clock. Saturn is morning star, and follows closely in the wake of the more brilliant Jupiter. He is, however, no mean object for observation as he rises to the northwest of his rival, and about a half-hour later. He is increasing in size and clearness of tint, and is well worthy of attention in his present phase. The two planets retain nearly the same position in regard to each other throughout the month.

Mercury is morning star now. He sets a few minutes before 7, nearly with the sun; at the end of the month he rises a few minutes after 4, being, during his course, too near the sun to be favorable for observation.

Venus is evening star, and hugs the sun too closely to be seen in the early part of the month, setting now about 26 minutes after the sun. But towards the close of the month bright-eyed observers may detect her beaming presence for nearly half an hour after sunset, and next month she will be glorious to behold.

Arrived. Capt. Bremers, so well and favorably known in this community, sailed safely in to port with his barque, the Lydia Peschau, this afternoon. Capt. Bremers is all the way from London this time.

Crab Farm. Squire Jno. H. Savage, of Myrtle Grove Sound, is making preparations to run a crab farm at his place during the coming season. He will also pay considerable attention to the raising of soft crabs and will, in a short time, have his pen ready. The plan he has concluded to adopt is the same as is used at the North and that published in the REVIEW some months ago.

Quick Payment. The late Adolph Bear was a member of Cornelius Harnett Council Royal, Arcanum. The benefit on his life was $3,000, made payable to his sister, Miss Carolina Bear. On the 20th of July the proceeds of his death were mailed here and today, the 12th, Mr. J. Hal Boatwright, the Treasurer, received a check for $3,000, payable to Miss Bear, which has been turned over to her. This is what we call quick work and prompt payment.

Criminal Court. The attention of the Court was devoted today in listening to the argument of counsel in the case of Stephen Richardson, on trial for murder. The defendant's counsel, Messrs. Jno. D. Bellamy, Frank L. Fremont, E. S. Martin and W. B. McKoy, led off in the order named and were followed by Mr. Solicitor Moore. At the time of our going to press His Honor, Judge Meares, was charging the jury. The speeches of the counsel for the defence and that of the State's attorney are said to have been very fine.

An astronomical spectacle of unusual interest occurs on the 20th, being the conjunction of Uranus and Venus, those two planets being about forty five minutes of a degree apart.

Virginia Military Institute LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA. Session Opens 1st Sept'r.

THE REPORT of the Special Board of Examiners for 1875 closes thus:— In conclusion, your Committee cannot too highly commend what has seemed to them the marked and distinguishing features of the Institution, the happy combination of the military system of instruction with the departments of science and of literary culture, and the more ennobling culture of the heart and soul. Nowhere else have we seen this combination so complete and perfect. We cannot speak of it too highly. It is such a system as fits a pupil for life and for death. Under its guidance he is sure to tread safely the path of duty, virtue and honor.
