Ward Meetings.
There was a good attendance of voters at the different Ward meetings last night, held for the purpose of completing the programme for the celebration on Tuesday. Each club received instructions, etc., and when they wheeled into line on Tuesday night bearing their torches and transparencies there will, indeed, be an immense turnout.
Surveying Long Creek.
A note from a friend at Long Creek tells us that a U. S. Engineer, with a surveying party, arrived at that place on Wednesday for the purpose of making a survey of the creek preparatory to cleaning it out, under an appropriation from the general government. In the report it was printed Town Creek instead of Long Creek, and we called attention at a time to the manifest error.
Point Caswell Delegation.
The steamer John Dawson expects to bring down a large delegation of citizens from Point Caswell and that neighborhood to attend the grand demonstration here next Tuesday night. The steamer will leave Point Caswell about noon and arrive here about 5 o'clock. She will leave Wilmington the next morning at 8 o'clock on the return trip, thus affording ample opportunity for those who may desire to do so to spend the night here and return home early the next day.
Full Metal and Walnut Show Cases, all styles and sizes, at ALTAFFER, PRICE & Co's.
Beautiful Transparency.
The beautiful transparency spoken of by us yesterday, which is being prepared by Mr. C. E. Burr for the Grand Ratification Meeting on Tuesday night, 24th inst., has been purchased by Mr. P. Heinsberger, Chairman of the Committee on Pyrotechnics and Transparencies. The transparency is very handsome, though it is not quite so large as the one executed by Mr. Burr for the last Presidential campaign and which was suspended across Market street.

The Doomed Man.
The time set for the execution of Stephen Richardson, who was convicted of murder at the last term of the Criminal Court, is fast coming to an end. The condemned man is confined in the middle cell, on the second floor, the same one from which the burglar, George Myers, apparently escaped about two months ago and is closely watched by an armed guard who tramps backward and forward in front of the prisoner's cell all night long. Richardson asserts that old man Phinney and his daughter, Hannah Miller, had tied on him during the trial and that their evidence was damaging to his case. He seems to think more about the evidence of Phinney and Miller than about what is to become of his soul when ushered into eternity.
He has been visited by Revs. Jos. P. King, Cornelius Sampson and J. G. Frye, and prays frequently during the day. His thoughts do not seem to wander in the paths that almost any one thinks they should. He does not seem at all resigned to his fate or prepared for it, and seems unable to forget or forgive the State's witnesses. His physical condition has undergone a great change. He has lost about twenty pounds in weight since his conviction. He is said to sleep well at nights, but of this no one can tell. His appetite is not good although he partakes of his rations when brought to him. He expressed a desire a few days ago to make his will but as yet his lawyer has not drawn up the document.

Postal Matters.
The practice of permitting postal employees to change the address upon misdirected letters and other mail matter, has been found to be a hindrance rather than a help in the forwarding of matter to its destination, and it is accordingly strictly forbidden under new regulations.
This prohibition has compelled the Department to make a decided position upon a question which has for a long time occupied its attention, and which, pending the decision of the Department, has been left to the discretion of the Postmaster and railway postal clerks, and that is, whether matter not addressed to a post office can be considered mailable.
Upon the advice of the General Superintendent of the Railroad Mail Service, the Postmaster-General has decided that matter not addressed to any post office cannot be forwarded in the mails, but must be returned to the sender, if known for better direction, or else sent to the dead letter office. There are now over forty-two thousand post offices, and from the data in the Post Office Department it is estimated that the number of places having local names, but not post offices, to which matter is sometimes directed, is at least three times the number of post offices, or 126,000.
Postal employees are required to know the location of the post offices in the States for which they work or distribute mails, but it is impossible for them to know the direction in which matter not addressed to post offices should be sent.
Heretofore they have been permitted to 'guess' at the destination of such matter, but the results have convinced the Department that in a matter of so much importance as distribution and dispatch of mail matter, nothing should be guessed at. It is easier for the public to address their mail matter to a post office than it is for the Department to ascertain where matter not addressed to a post office should be sent, and it is to the interest of the public that this new regulation should be strictly enforced, because it will be easier to trace missing letters, if none are admitted to the mails not properly addressed. Fewer losses will occur if postal employees are prohibited from 'guessing' at the destination of matter not addressed to post offices. In order to prevent any embarrassment to the public, it is desired that inquiry should be made at the post office, should there be any doubt in taking this important step towards perfecting the postal service, the Department hopes to receive the cooperation and support of the public. Any information desired will be cheerfully given by calling at the post office.
On June 26, 1880, there were 42,125 post offices in operation in the United States, or an increase of 1,609 since December 1, 1879, or an increase of 74 from December 1, 1870.

The City Hall furnished us no items to-day.
At 3 o'clock this afternoon the thermometer in this office stood at 89 degrees.
The General Committee and the Committees from the different wards are working for a big time on the 24th instant.
Last night was both as lovely and pleasant as we have seen it in this locality in many years. Promenading couples were abroad on all of the streets.
See a woman on horseback in another column, riding near Speer's Vineyards, with a bunch of Grapes from which Speer's Port Grape Wine is made, that is so highly esteemed by the medical profession for the use of invalids, weakly persons and the aged. Sold by Druggists.
Quite a party of ladies and gentlemen, some of them passengers on the steamer A. P. Hart last night, from Fayetteville, went down the river on the Passport this morning to get a whiff of sea breeze.
A Great Enterprise.
The Hop Bitters Manufacturing Company is one of Rochester's greatest business enterprises. Their Hop Bitters have reached a sale beyond all precedent, having from their intrinsic value found their way into almost every household in the land.—Graphic.
A Suggestion.
We respectfully suggest, at the suggestion of a prominent commission house in this city, that the Produce Exchange agree to a general suspension of business on the wharf on Tuesday next, the 24th inst., from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until the next day. This, it is thought, will enable the Committee of Arrangements who have in charge the programme for the ratification meeting, to commence the order of the day, in the way of speaking, by 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and by so doing give all of the distinguished speakers who may honor us with their presence on that occasion a large audience and a fine opportunity to display their oratorical powers.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D.
I had a serious disease of the lungs, and was for a time confined to my bed and under the care of a physician. His prescriptions did not help me. I grew worse, coughing very severely. I commenced taking your Medical Discovery, which helped me greatly. I have taken several bottles, and am restored to good health.
Yours respectfully,
JUDITH BURNETT.

have laid in a supply for the use of their customers of the largest and finest in this market, which they are retailing at cost, and warranted superior to the article supplied Dr. Tanner by the Georgians. When Tanner finished his Watermelon, he resumed the use of Bread and Butter, Ham and Mustard, Bacon and Cabbage, Fish, Flesh and Vegetables, in all the wonderful variety provided by nature, and seemingly ordained by providence as necessary to the maintenance of human life, and no where more abundantly supplied than on the Retail shelves of
