The prospect of having the American Union lines in this city at an early day is very encouraging now. The Commission appointed to assess the amounts to be paid to the W. & W. and W. C. & A. Railroads will meet again next Monday, on which day Col. Bridgers is expected to be in the city. Part of the material is now here and once the Committee's report is made and accepted it will not take long to get the wires up and the lines in working order.

When you visit or leave New York City, stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite Grand Central Depot. European plan. Rooms reduced to $1.00 and upwards. Restaurant unsurpassed at moderate prices. Street cars, stages and elevated railroad to all parts of the city.

RATIFIED

The Democracy of the Cape Fear in Line—Ten Thousand Voters on the Streets—The City Alive with Enthusiasm and Ablaze with Far Barrels—Fireworks, Torchtlights and Salvos of Artillery—Jarvis, Leach and McLean Address the Masses.

If the interest and enthusiasm exhibited here in the cause of good government and a thorough reorganization between the different sections of a common country is an index of that felt throughout the entire Union, the Democratic ticket will not only be successful by an immense majority, but Hancock and English will be the recipients of a popular ovation at the polls. There was never such an outpouring of the masses in North Carolina as that which last night greeted our distinguished guests. Not only were the good and true people of the city out in force but large delegations from the country, some even from distant portions of the State, were assembled to testify their appreciation of the magnificent ticket, National, State and Congressional, which has been presented to them. It was the opinion of one of our most distinguished visitors that it was the greatest outpouring of the people known in North Carolina since the war. There were at least ten thousand persons present at the demonstration.

The various ward clubs assembled promptly at the hour designated and a little before 8 o'clock, under the active management of Colonel Jno. J. Hedrick, the Chief Marshal, and his very efficient aide, the procession began to move. The ward organizations were out in force and the display was a magnificent one. The column was nearly a half-mile in length and it was greeted by the applause of the assembled thousands and by beautiful pyrotechnic displays all along the line of march. It was a beautiful sight and the ladies were out in large numbers, adding their presence and their graceful applause to the other attractions of the evening.

The various wards were all well supplied with transparencies, with appropriate mottoes, many of them terse and forceful, which we cannot describe in full for the want of space. The procession was led by the young Democrats of the Hancock, Jarvis and Shackelford Club, with the Cornet Concert Club in front in a wagon drawn by four fine horses and after them came the ward organizations in the order of their numbers. The Pender Democrats were also in line to the number of one hundred or more, led by that staunch Democrat and true hearted man, Capt. Dick Paddison. The Ship of State was a beautiful feature. It was a boat placed on a wagon and drawn by spirited horses, rigged as a ship and with a crew of eight sturdy young Democrats. She was appropriately christened the Constitution. The beautiful banner painted by Mr. C. E. Barr, of which we have spoken previously, and which has been so much admired, was a feature of the occasion which attracted much attention.

The line of march was on Third street to Chestnut, on Chestnut to Front, down Front to Nun, on Nun to Third and up Third to near the corner of Dock, where a large stand had been erected for the speakers.

As soon as the distinguished speakers had ascended the stand and the various organizations had gotten into position F. H. Darby, Esq., Chairman of the County Executive Committee, called the meeting to order and nominated the following gentlemen as officers of the meeting, who were unanimously elected, to wit:

President—Col. Duncan K. McKee.
Vice Presidents—Maj. C. M. Stedman, Col. B. R. Moore, O. G. Parsley, Jr., Geo. W. Williams, H. Brushhill, DuBrutz Outlar, T. B. Kingsbury, P. McInnesberger, A. Adrian, E. Lilly, Col. W. L. Smith, L. H. Bowden, B. G. Worth, Josh T. James.

Secretary—James W. King, J. M. Cronly, of the Star, and T. Calhoun James, of the Review.

Capt. W. S. Norment then moved that a committee of five be appointed to draft suitable resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting.

The motion was unanimously adopted and Capt. W. S. Norment, Mr. J. Thomas H. McKoy, and Messrs. Charles H. Robinson, Marsden Bellamy and B. F.

Mitchell were appointed as said committee.

The Chairman, Col. Duncan K. McKee, then stepped forward and in that remarkable, vivacious, pithy, pungent style which is so characteristic of this eloquent Carolinian introduced to the Democratic audience their standard bearer in this State, His Excellency Thos. J. Jarvis, Governor of the great State of North Carolina. Gov. Jarvis' tall and manly form was then seen to step to the front of the speaker's stand amidst wild cheers and hurrahs from the vast multitude of people in front. The cheers having subsided and quiet being fully restored, the Governor turned to the sea of upturned faces before him and began his speech. He said as he rode along in the procession to-night and saw the pretty streets of Wilmington with its air of prosperity, the fine houses with the beautiful ladies gracing the porticoes and bestowing smiles of approval upon them as they all marched on, it recalled to his mind the first visit he ever paid to Wilmington, when, at the head of a company of brave Carolinians he arrived on a November evening and they were ordered to bivouac in the suburbs of the city, where he made the ground his bed and had for his covering the broad canopy of heaven. The Governor then referred to the Cape Fear section and the commercial and material prosperity of Wilmington in the most complimentary terms. He said that he was aware that there existed a feeling here that he, as Governor of the State, did not feel the same interest in this section that the Governor ought to feel. But, said the Governor, I declare before Him before whom I have to answer for all things, that there is nothing that I can do or could do for the people of this section consistent with my duty as Governor, to the other sections of the State, that I would not gladly perform—that there was no demand that the people of this section would make upon him that he would not give to them readily. The speaker said during his legislative experience of many years there had come many petitions from Wilmington and New Hanover county and he was always their friend, and voted in that way in every instance. The Governor touched briefly upon the sale of the Western North Carolina Railroad, and said he firmly believed that the sale of that road would yet redound to the benefit of Wilmington in some way or other. The Governor said he was not here to present any claims of his own but to present the claims of the Democratic party. His Excellency then referred to his competitor; he said he had winged his flight away from him and had refused to keep up their joint discussions, but, said the Governor, I will tell you some of the questions which I propounded to him during our joint discussions. First he asked Judge Buxton to inform him what principle of the Constitution, State and National, the Republican party had left inviolate and had not trampled under its iron foot? and he had never received a reply to that question.

The Governor made an earnest and eloquent appeal to the old Confederate soldiers who had followed him beneath the starry cross, who had marched with him shoeless and footsore, to meet him at the ballot box on the 21 day of November next and to cast their ballots for the triumph of the Democratic party, which is the party of law and order, the constitution and good government. Governor Jarvis then made an eloquent appeal to his hearers to cast a vote for the noble specimen of a soldier who when the smoke of battle had cleared away and who when the Confederates had laid down their arms and submitted to the arbitrament of the god of war and furled their banner forever, came forward and said, let us return to peace, to prosperity and let the chasm be bridged over. The Governor then closed his speech in an eloquent peroration upon the National ensign, amidst tremendous cheering and hurrahs for Jarvis. Governor Jarvis' speech, notwithstanding he was in bad trim for speaking, being hoarse and very much fatigued, won him lots of friends and made him so many votes to this section.

Tremendous cheers now went up for Vance! Vance! Vance the crowd must and would have, and at last the old "Bete" war-governor moved forward. The cheering which rent the air then as soon as Senator Vance made his appearance was deafening and lasted for several minutes. Governor Vance spoke for about five minutes and then told the crowd he would speak to day, that owing to his affection of the throat he could not possibly speak in the night.

The Committee on resolutions then reported through their Chairman, Capt. W. S. Norment the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, By the people of the Cape Fear section, in mass meeting assembled, that we reaffirm our adherence to the great principles of the Democratic party, as enunciated and set forth in the national platform.

Resolved, 2d, That we most cordially endorse and ratify the action of the Democratic party at Cincinnati in nominating for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States General Winfield Scott Hancock, of Pennsylvania, and Wm. H. English, of Indiana.

Resolved, 3d, That in Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, our National standard bearer, we recognize the profound statesman, true patriot and "superb soldier," one whose past life, both civil and military, is without spot or blemish; and whose election to the Chief Magistracy of this Republic will allay sectional strife, heal the wounds of the past, and secure to all the blessings of constitutional government.

Resolved, 4th, That we hail with pleasure the presence among us to-night of His Excellency Thos. J. Jarvis, Governor of North Carolina.

We welcome him to the Cape Fear section as one of North Carolina's ablest and truest sons; as one who, in the dark days of eighteen hundred and sixty eight and nine, when the Republican party held supremacy in our Legislative halls, and when misrule and ruin were the order of the day, stood like one of the old guard, battling for his State, and for the rights of his people. As our candidate for re-election, we bid him God speed in the noble and effective work he is now doing, and pledge to him and the rest of the State ticket our united and hearty support.

Resolved, 5th, That we pledge to our Congressional nominee, John W. Shackelford, of Onslow, the earnest and undivided support of the Cape Fear Democracy, and commend him to the voters of the Third Congressional District as one eminently worthy of support.

Committee.

Col. B. R. Moore then in a most graceful and appropriate manner introduced General James Madison Leach, as the orator who is known in every town and hamlet throughout North Carolina. General Leach came forward and was greeted with loud applause. He said had he consulted his own feelings or judgment he would not to-night address this vast assemblage of people. But what did it mean, this great outpouring of the people here to-night? It meant a love of country, a devotion to North Carolina and her interests which every true son of this grand old commonwealth should feel inspired with. The speaker then proceeded to review the Republican party both individually and collectively and it ever a party, or the individuals who comprise a party, were skinned both politically and figuratively speaking, the Rads got it at the hands of General James Madison Leach last night. We cannot pretend to report his speech, as time and space both alike forbid our doing so, but General Leach fully sustained his reputation as one of the finest stump orators in the State. It was this same old war horse and campaigner, J. M. Leach, who in 1876, after fighting a good fight for the Democracy of his own Carolina all through the State, crossed over the line and went into South Carolina at the earnest solicitation of the people there, and helped Hampton out of the slough of despond to which the Radical thieves had plunged his State. The General's speech last night was exhaustive; he touched upon every theme and gave Mr. Garrison's old Hail Columbia wrong end foremost, on every tack. General Leach was well received and highly applauded throughout his entire speech.

The next speaker was Mr. D. H. McLean, the talented young gentleman from Harnett, who is district elector on our National ticket. Mr. McLean, as Col. McKee said in his introduction he would do, gave a very agreeable surprise to the audience his oratorical powers are good and his manner as well as the matter of his speech was most excellent. The Democrats of this Congressional district performed a good part when they elected so worthy and competent a gentleman as Dan Hugh McLean for their elector. Mr. McLean said he felt embarrassed in speaking on an occasion like this when he had been preceded by so many distinguished gentlemen and that he would not detain them. We're sorry we cannot give a full report of all this rising young orator said. At the conclusion of Mr. McLean's speech loud calls were made for Ransom and the crowd would not listen to any one else. General Ransom then arose and with that calm, quiet, senatorial dignity so natural to our distinguished Senator, and which so well becomes him, in a few eloquent remarks thanked the crowd for the compliment and the manifestation tion of their esteem and assured them they should hear him to-night. This concluded the speaking at the stand and the crowd adjourned. Subsequently ex-Gov. Vance and Mr. F. H. Busbee, in response to repeated calls in front of the Purcell House, made short speeches.

This morning, at 10 o'clock, the appointed time for Senator Vance to address the people of this city, crowds of people, both ladies and gentlemen, had assembled around the speakers' stand on Third street. Col. McKee in his happiest and wittiest style introduced the distinguished Senator, and then calls for Vance! Vance! came from a thousand Democratic throats, and in response Senator Vance, the most popular man in all of North Carolina, and the idol of North Carolinians everywhere, came forward and commenced to speak. Governor Vance said that it always afforded him great pleasure to appear before the good people of the Cape Fear section, a section which had ever been foremost in every good work in this great commonwealth of North Carolina, and he would be less than human did he fail to appreciate the kind welcome and warm greeting which had been extended to him on this occasion. Senator Vance then proceeded with his argument and traced the course of the Republican party through its whole life and career, both State and National—not forgetting its Credit Mobilier and Do Go or candidate, Garfield, and salt petre Ralph P. Buxton—up to the present time. We had taken copious notes with the hope that we might at least present to our readers some of the vigorous arguments of our distinguished and honored fellow-citizen. But as our paper is not an Indiana rubber one and always maintains the same size we shall have to content ourselves with saying that it was the universal opinion of all who heard Gov. Vance this morning that it was the finest political speech they ever listened to, and we can add our humble tribute and say that we heard Vance during the war talking to the soldiers in Virginia, and at home talking to the citizens, and since the war talking to all classes, but we never heard him equal before the magnificent effort he made here to day.
