In the Old Market.

Butchers took possession of two stalls in the old market house this morning and were soon followed by a couple of hawksters. They were notified by the Clerk of the Market that they must not sell their meats in that building. The butchers, we believe, have concluded to make a test case of it and continue to sell.

Just before going to press we learn that Mr. J. E. Melton, one of the members of the Butcher's Company, has been arrested and placed under bond for his appearance on Monday and that a guard has been placed over the old market to prevent its being occupied by any one. The case excites much interest.

Speaking at Whiteville.

Col. McKee will address the people of Columbus at Whiteville on Monday, the 20th inst, by special invitation. In our notice of this appointment, on Thursday last, we were made to say that this address would be delivered on Wednesday; this was an error of the printer which we failed to correct in the proof. Monday, the 20th inst, is the time, and don't you forget it!

Building Flats.

Messrs. Colville & Co. are now engaged in building flats for the government works at Charleston and Savannah, under a contract with the government. An official who was here some days ago examined one of the flats they made and pronounced it the best made of the kind the government has received. They are now at work on four large flats for Charleston which will be removed by a government tug as fast as completed. There are 80,000 feet of lumber in each flat. Under the contract the first is to be made in twenty days and the second is to be ready within ten days thereafter.

You can buy No. 1 Cooking and Heating Stoves at almost any price at JACOBI Hardware Depot.

Col. McKee's Speech.

We regret exceedingly our inability to attend the Democratic meeting last night, the more so, since we have heard to-day from those whose good fortune it was to be present, what a profound and able effort the distinguished gentleman who addressed the Democracy of this city on that occasion, made for his hearers. From gentlemen who are competent judges, we learn that Col. McKee, if possible excelled any effort of the kind he has ever made here before. The speech, we are told, was a powerful arraignment of Garfield and the Republican party before a jury consisting of the people, for the many high crimes and misdemeanors of which that party and its leaders have been guilty in the past fifteen years.

The facts and the testimony of the unfaithfulness of the Republican leaders headed by Garfield, were gathered from the records of the past, and placed before the people in such an indisputable light that any fair minded man, no matter what his politics, had been sitting in judgment upon the case would have been compelled to pronounce them all guilty of violations of the law, violations of the sacred trusts which had been confided to them, and utterly unworthy of the confidence of the people. The succinct and comprehensive manner in which these facts were stated, together with the forcible eloquence of the learned speaker, carried conviction with them in every instance.

Col. McKee was presented to the audience by Col. Roger Moore, in a very happy and appropriate manner.

My life was saved by Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.—E. B. Lakdy, Selma, Ala.

Whoa, January!

We all remember the trick mule Dan. Castello had with him in his circus here a year or two after the war, when he performed in the vacant lot on the north side of Princess street, between Front and Second, but few of us ever expected to hear of that mule again in any other capacity than as a trick mule. It seems that the animal is still alive—and kicking—as the following, which we clip from the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph & Messenger, will attest:

We saw him in front of the Court House on Saturday last, him whose halcyon days of youth and glory are forever ended—'January!'

It will be remembered that when Ames' circus disbanded near this place years ago, there was turned loose upon the cold charities of the world, for the small sum of about twenty dollars, 'January,' whose proud pleasure it had been to appear before the public in the closing act for many months. His season before the footlights had been a brilliant one, and he condescended to merge himself into an ordinary draught animal only after a long and well contested fight, in which he had nothing to gain and everything to lose. Nor did he ever subside completely into an ordinary, well behaved mule, but from time to time entered manly and indignant protests against his position.

On Saturday last, January stood amid the gathered throng which hemmed in the polls. He had been reduced that day to the painful humiliation of drawing a load of potatoes to the city, and had fallen asleep at his post. Time wore on.—Dreams enshrouded him. He was no longer poor and old and humiliated, but saw himself as of yore, the spoiled darling of the arena. A shout arose around him and in the excitement he pitched and rolled and kicked; but alas, the strong arms of the shafts embraced him, and the oaken dash-board received his heels with perfect indifference. He awoke to find himself a prisoner, and a hooting crowd laughing at his discomfiture. Laying his ears back he let drive once more with all the energy of despair and disgust, then dropped back into 1880 and old age again—conquered.

MR. EDITOR—Please allow me to come to your rescue after being dealt with so severely by 'Vidi'. As there has been a good deal of talk and hard feeling entertained by the members of the yacht club, I beg leave to make a short statement in vindication of those who so unjustly (as claimed by the Ripple's friends), deprived the said yacht of her prize on Wednesday last. The rules of the club, which were in the hands of the judges, require the regatta to be made in two-and-a-half hours. They unanimously decided that the regatta commenced with the starting of the first boat, and as no yacht came in within the required time, that it was no race, but agreed to leave it to the Regatta Committee who have, I understand, misconstrued a resolution passed by the club June 26th, 1878, and given the flag to the Ripple. On 25th of June, 1878, a race took place on the river in which the Rosa alone made the regatta in the required time, the second boat (Ripple) being some 20 minutes behind. This question was then raised whether or not it was a regatta as only one boat had made the time. A meeting was called the next day and the club decided it to be a regatta because one yacht had made the time. No one thought of the running time of the boats and the resolution was never offered or adopted with any such view, but simply to decide whether it required one or more yachts to make the time from the starting of the first to constitute a regatta.

Respectfully &c.,
VEND.
