A fine assortment of Coffins and Caskets constantly on hand. Furniture Repaired, Cleaned and Varished. Orders by telegraph or mail promptly filled.

The King's Mountain celebration closed yesterday. It was a very successful affair. The proceedings as published in the Charlotte Observer are very interesting but too lengthy for us to copy.

There seems to be no doubt now that Grant did speak of Hancock as Dr. Fowler charged. In fact Grant does not deny it. There is a big howl about it and Gen. Grant's position is not an enviable one. Gen. Hancock will reply as soon as he can receive positive assurances that Grant did malign him, as has been reported.

Specials to the Augusta Chronicle, from all sections in Georgia, indicate Colquitt's election by 40,000 to 50,000 majority. The colored vote was largely for him everywhere. The full State ticket is elected, Renfro, the present Treasurer, and independent candidate, getting a good vote in some places. The Republicans make some gains in the General Assembly, and the majority of the next Legislature is conjectured to be in favor of Senator Jos. E. Brown's re-election. The election was quiet.

It is best to look the inevitable in the face and see what it is like.

Merely because a man has a scolding wife it is no sign he should liquor.

Some people's affections are like Joseph's gourd—they wither in a night.

Where is that crowd going? To Rosenthal's, to buy boots and shoes.

Mr. J. G. Voss, the well-known shoemaker, who has resided at Smithville for the past year or two has returned to Wilmington.

An infallible remedy for Fever and Ague is AYER'S AGUE CURE. Wholly vegetable and containing no quinine, it is harmless and sure.

Col. J. G. Burr, of this city, was in Raleigh yesterday in attendance on the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Insane Asylum, of which he is a member.

A great benefit has been secured to the poor by the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, for it now takes only 25 cents to cure a cough, when formerly Doctor bills alone amounted to dollars.

Mr. J. M. Robinson has returned from the North with a very handsome stock of hats, caps and furnishing goods. He says that he bought largely and is opening now a much more extensive stock than he has ever shown before.

Dancing lessons given free at Rosenthal's. Pump sole boots and shoes for the ball room.

Mr. A. Shrier expects to open his handsome new shoe store to-morrow. We don't know whether he is to "we" anything but we do know that he has a good stock and a beautiful store as all who drops in to see him to-morrow will find out.

Rice birds are about played out. No so with those Scotch soles at Rosenthal's. They last for ever.

Two Business Men.

Mr. John Judge, recently representing Messrs. Chess, Carley & Co., in this city, has removed to Charleston and has established himself there as a broker and general agent for the sale of naval stores, cotton, rice, &c. We wish him success in his new venture.

The management of Messrs. Chess, Carley & Co.'s affairs in this city has been placed in the hands of Mr. N. F. Thompson, who has been with the firm ever since they began business here. Mr. Thompson has been appointed Manager of the Wilmington Department. He has recently returned from a short visit to St. Louis where the necessary arrangements for conducting the business here were perfected. He is a good business man and a gentleman of extensive experience and excellent judgment and we trust that he will do well.

Dr. Wood on Analyses of Water.

Analyses of water made at the Laboratory of the Agricultural Department Station for the North Carolina Board of Health, of waters from Wilmington, as below designated:

Greenfield Pond, at the Mill, 4.7 grains per gallon of total solids; 1.6 grains per gallon of chlorine; .34 parts per million of free ammonia; .30 parts per million of albuminoid ammonia.

Greenfield Pond, one mile from the Mill, 4.6 grains per gallon of total solids; 1.65 grains per gallon of chlorine; .24 parts per million of free ammonia; .26 parts per million of albuminoid ammonia.

Smith's Creek, at the Bridge, 6.7 grains per gallon of total solids; 1.7 grains per gallon of chlorine; .05 parts per million of free ammonia; .30 parts per million of albuminoid ammonia.

Smith's Creek, at Hilton, 7.7 grains per gallon of total solids; 1.8 grains per gallon of chlorine; .16 parts per million of free ammonia; .36 parts per million of albuminoid ammonia.

According to the above analyses of the water of Smith's Creek, a marked difference is observed in the results, as compared with my last report. The difference is probably due to the season of the year in which the specimens were collected for analysis. The previous analyses were of water collected in the Spring, showing a considerably smaller portion of solid ingredients, &c., viz:

Specimen 8—5.7 grains solids per gallon; 1.2 grains chlorine per gallon; .08 parts per million ammonia; .18 parts per million of albuminoid ammonia.

Specimen 9—0 grains solids per gallon; 1.3 grains chlorine per gallon; .08 parts per million free ammonia; .20 parts per million albuminoid ammonia.

The chlorine present is in very small portions, clearly indicating that the free and albuminoid ammonia are products of the decomposition of vegetable matter, rather than of animal matter. The increase of vegetable decomposition in the fall satisfactorily accounts for the increase of ammonia, as well as of solid matter.

Now as to the analysis of the water in Greenfield Pond there are also the like differences to be noted, as compared with Prof. Kerr's analyses given in my last report. I am not aware at what season his specimen was collected, and cannot say why Prof. Kerr's analysis gives "2.68 solids," (not clearly stated in his report as to ratio) and in the present report to be in both of our specimens in excess of 4.0 grains per gallon.

These variations are noticed as regards all waters, of which analyses are made public. The water companies in several cities of Great Britain make careful periodical reports of the chemical analyses and they are regularly given to the public.

One has just come to my notice. The Loch Katrine water, which is supplied to the city of Glasgow, shows the following: Total solid impurity (in parts per 100,000) 2.90; organic carbon, 0.174; organic nitrogen, .014; ammonia, 0.00; nitric nitrogen, 0.007; total combined nitrogen, 0.021; chlorine, 0.65; hardness 1.65. The statement of the analysis is rather different after the method here adopted, but it shows the Loch Katrine water to have far less impurities than our specimens. Or, to speak more accurately: Take the best specimen in our list, which is the water of Greenfield Pond, one mile above the mill. We have in this specimen 4.6 grains solid matter to the gallon, that is, in 61,430 parts by weight of water we have 4.6 parts of solids. In the Loch Katrine water, through, the adjective "harmful" is prefixed to "solid constituents," intimating that the harmless parts are not estimated and this idea is confirmed as we notice that the "hardness" of the water is estimated separately at 1.65. This hardness is due to lime, and in our analyses the lime is estimated in the total of solid constituents. If the 1.65 lime be added to the "solid impurities" it would give a proportion bearing a closer relation to our specimen, viz: 4.60 parts solid to 100,000 parts of water. Since my statements have unintentionally drawn me into making a comparison, it is proper to state I have placed the waters of a pond net at all prepared as a water supply, in contrast with a beautiful lake upon which large sums of money have been expended to make its water pure.

At some future time, with your permission, I will give the standard methods of determining "hardness" of water, and at the proper time compare the sources of our national water supply.

OPERA HOUSE

"Davy Crockett."

A large and apparently delighted audience greeted Mr. Frank Mayo in the role of Davy Crockett on his first appearance in this city at the Opera House last night. The play, which is intended to portray a backwoodsman's life and character to some extent, is without merit. The interest is all centered in the two chief characters of the piece, Davy Crockett and Eleanor Vaughn, for without them the piece would have been equal to what the play of Hamlet might be with the character of the moody prince left out. From the name of the play one would be led to suppose that we might witness some of the historic scenes connected with the life of the remarkable man who figured so conspicuously in the far Southwest, some thirty five years ago, and who perished at last at the bloody battle of the Alamo. But none of the heroic incidents in the life of the great Davy Crockett are brought out in the piece; it is simply and solely as above stated, a glimpse of a backwoods life, and as such Mr. Mayo sustained the part of Davy Crockett in a manner true to nature and played well. He was ably assisted in the performance of the piece by Miss Weaver in the character of Eleanor Vaughn, who was first his playmate, then his lady love, and finally after much trouble and tribulation, and some exciting scenes, his wife. Mrs. Sanford as Dame Crockett, the widowed mother of Davy, was good. The other characters were tolerably well sustained. The performance was frequently applauded and once during the play Mr. Mayo and Miss Weaver were called before the curtain.

Mr. Nath'l Jacobi having been appointed agent for the Atlas Plow, parties in want of this celebrated Plow can now have their orders filled at JACOB'S Hardware Depot, No. 10 S. Front st.

Hon. W. M. Robbins.

We acknowledge the courtesy of a call from Hon. W. M. Robbins, the distinguished gentleman who represented so ably and so well the Seventh District in Congress a few years ago. During his career in the lower House of our national legislature, Major Robbins made many able and important speeches, and was always listened to with respectful attention by the members of each side of the House. But the reputation which he won for himself as a Member of Congress is as nothing compared to the self-sacrificing conduct which has characterized all of this gentleman's actions in his devotion to the best interests of his party during the past four years. The people of the Seventh District and of North Carolina will be recreant to their duty if they fail to remember such unselfish and patriotic devotion to duty. Major Robbins speaks at Smithville to-day and to-morrow evening in this city, from the balcony of the Telegraph Office, on Front street, at 8 o'clock.

Go to Your Ward Meeting!

The call for the different Ward clubs to assemble to-night is printed in another column, and we earnestly hope there will be a larger turnout at the different meetings. Business of importance is to come before each ward club. The election draws near and there is little time left to work in. During the campaign of 1876 the most perfect organization existed in the various Democratic Ward clubs in this city. The plan of organization we think, was then inspired by the Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, the greatest political organizer, perhaps, in the whole country. Every ward in the city was thoroughly canvassed, and the political status of every voter taken and noted down. This is the only way to prevent fraud, and to prevent repeaters from registering in several different wards under different names.

Taking into consideration therefore the immense amount of work there is to do, the call for the different meetings has not been made one moment too soon.

State vs. Henry Johnson, charged with larceny. Defendant submitted and judgment was suspended.

State vs. Nicholas W. Carr, charged with extortion. On trial. This case has occupied the attention of the Court all day and up to the time of closing our report.

City Court.

For the first time in several days His Honor held a levee this morning. Scipio Hill, drunk and down, was the first case on docket. Send him below for a few days, was the sentence of the Court and below Scip went.

Fred Bradley, colored, was found lying down on the street near the corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets last night by Officer O'Brien and was ordered home when he became very obstreperous and resisted the arrest of the officer who finally doctored him with a blow or two from his club. The policeman received a kick near his right eye from the prisoner. The Mayor after trying the case gave the defendant the full extent of the law. Thirty days in the city prison.

The Carolina Rice Mills, in this city, is nearly completed. Yesterday, for the first time, steam was raised and everything about the engine worked very nicely. The proprietors, Messrs. Norwood Giles and Pembroke Jones, expect to begin work regularly next week.

The building is situated on Chestnut street, near Water. It is of brick, 40x50 feet, and is four stories high. The engine was purchased from the well-known Baltimore manufacturers, Messrs. Poole & Hunt, and is of 70-horse power. The furnace is known as the Jarvis patent, and there is also a Hancock inspirator. These are the only political features about the mill. The Jarvis furnace consumes the smoke and gases, so that there will be a very small smoke perceptible when in operation, and the Hancock inspirator draws water from the river and carries it to the tank.

The capacity of the mill is about 500 bushels of rice per diem, and the proprietors will soon be in the market for all of the rice which they can obtain. They calculate on getting enough of it to keep the mill running regularly and expect that their operations will extend until the Spring. There is much upland rice grown in North Carolina although it is inferior in quality to the river rice, and much of this is expected to be run through the works.

The miller is Mr. Butts, of Charleston, S. C., a gentleman of extensive experience and he says that this is as complete a rice mill as there is in the country. The machinery is all of the latest and most improved designs for this species of work. We cannot begin to describe it, as the complications are so various that it would be hard to elucidate on paper its various operations. Suffice it to say that it is all so complete that there will be no handling necessary from the time the rice goes into the mill with the chaff on until it comes out again clean and polished and carefully classed as to whole and half rice.

The new mills are an ornament to the city and will prove an important feature of its business interests. We wish the enterprising proprietors much success.
