AFTER THE BATTLE.

At this hour yesterday we felt confident that the Democrats had carried a majority of the ticket in Indiana, with the loss of the election for Governor. This belief was based upon the returns as received at that hour, but the special dispatch published by us yesterday from Indianapolis dissipated this confidence.

Indiana, as well as Ohio, has gone Republican, while the Democrats have carried West Virginia. So far, then, in the elections this year, the result is even. The Republicans have lost Maine and they have gained Indiana. The loss of this latter State is, however, depressing to the Democracy, inasmuch as they had counted so confidently on carrying it. Still, there is no real cause for despondency. On the other hand, the loss of that State may prove a real blessing in disguise. The nomination of Hancock had been so universally endorsed and approved throughout the entire country, and the accessions of prominent men, heretofore Republicans, to the ticket had been so numerous, that the Democrats were becoming over-confident of success—a confidence which, had it not been checked in time, might have resulted in a terrible disaster in November. As it is, the loss we have sustained can have but one good effect. It will but serve to stir us up to greater activity and to increased exertions in the short time now remaining to us. It will serve to unite and solidify the party and to keep down the hydra-headed monster, Independentism, which has of late threatened such serious disaster to our ranks.

We believe that Indiana is thoroughly Democratic, when left to itself, as it must be in November, and then, with the 10,000 negroes who had been colonized there withdrawn from her borders and with the services of the repeaters required at their own homes, the State will give Hancock a handsome majority. But even without Indiana, Hancock can be elected. New York is certain for him, and her 35 votes, with the 138 in the South, will leave but 12 more to secure. For these we may look with confidence to Connecticut, and New Jersey, or to Pennsylvania and Maine and California. The outlook is, therefore, by no means a discouraging one.

The 8x7 infamy is kept fresh by various means in the minds of the people. It is announced that a son of Aliunde Joe Bradley, of the U. S. Supreme Court, one of the 8x7 commission, is to marry a daughter of Senator Don Cameron.

The school elections for trustees and members of boards of education were held in New York State on Tuesday. A number of women voted. At Port Jervis fifty ladies voted, a great many being kept from the polls by the crowd of loafers standing around. The election was held in a small room, and this was crowded with men, who amused themselves by passing remarks about the ladies until the police were called in. Every lady who offered her vote was challenged and a great many left the polls in disgust.

The leaders of the party are, not by any means, depressed because Indiana has gone Republican. Here is a little clipping, from the New York Sun of yesterday's date, which will show the confidence still felt as regards the result of the Presidential election:
Ex-Senator Barnum, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, arrived at the committee's headquarters at 11:45 last night. He read Mr. Austin H. Brown's despatch concerning Indiana to the Republicans, and then said: "Connecticut will be carried for Hancock. There is nothing in the result in Ohio and Indiana to alter my belief in his election."
Senator Randolph, of New Jersey, said that the Ohio and Indiana elections could not affect the chances in New Jersey. In his opinion, that State would give not less than 5,000 majority under any circumstances.

William A. Fowler, Chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee, said that New York State would be carried for Hancock despite the result in Ohio and Indiana. He predicted that Hancock's majority in the counties south of Albany would reach 100,000.
Mr. William L. Scott said, in his opinion, the Democrats had been beaten in Indiana by the lavish use of money and partly by the unpopularity of the Democratic candidate for Governor with certain elements in the party. He added that the National Committee had not given up the contest, but would fight it out until November. No State issues would be in the way in Indiana in the November election. The Committee believed that Hancock was 5,000 votes stronger than Landers in that State.

Susan B. Anthony, Esq., declares that she is not for Hancock, nor for Garfield, nor for Weaver, nor for Neal Dow, nor for "any other man." We derive considerable satisfaction from the fact that it is not probable she will take the stamp this year against Hancock.

P. Lorillard & Co., the great tobacco firm in New York, employ 2,000 workmen in their factory in Jersey City. A report having been circulated to the effect that they were endeavoring to influence the votes of their men in the coming election, they have published an emphatic disclaimer and state that no political influence whatever will be allowed among them by any person in their employ. Very handsome of Lorillard & Co.

The Meeting in the Second Ward

There was quite a large crowd in attendance at the Second Ward Club last night. Besides the speaking, there was music to enliven the occasion, which was kindly furnished by the Cornet Band. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock, by the President, Maj. Dunham, and the regular order of business proceeded with. Shortly after the routine of business had been disposed of, Mr. J. H. Currie, the orator of the evening, arrived under escort of the Cornet Concert Club. Major Dunham, in a few appropriate remarks, introduced the speaker, who, by invitation from the President, then ascended the President's stand; and proceeded to address the audience. Mr. Currie began his speech by referring to the allegiance due North Carolina from her sons as first and paramount to all other considerations. He dwelt upon the open violations of the Constitution which had been practised in the State by the Radical party while in power. He referred to the extravagance of that party and the fraud which they practiced upon the people by squandering thirty millions of the State's money. He alluded to the arrests of the distinguished citizens of the State during the Holden-Kirk war, when the sacred privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, which had been handed down as a precious heirloom to the English speaking people for centuries past, was denied the citizens of this great commonwealth. He then referred to the conduct of our gallant standard bearer, Thos. J. Jarvis, during the dark days, standing almost solitary and alone, battling for the rights of the people in the Legislative Halls of the State. He contrasted the difference in the conduct of the two candidates for Governor, Jarvis and Buxton, during those dark and gloomy days. The speaker then referred to the other candidates for our suffrages. He showed the importance of our redeeming this Congressional district from the Greenback-Republicans, by the election of Mr. John W. Shackelford, and concluded his speech by referring in glowing terms to our National standard bearer, WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

Mr. Currie spoke for an hour and ten minutes and was listened to very attentively and frequently applauded by the large crowd present. Capt. Chas. D. Myers offered a resolution of thanks to the speaker for the entertaining speech which had been delivered by him, on this occasion, which resolution was passed unanimously. On motion, the meeting then adjourned to meet again at the same time and place on next Thursday night, the 21st instant.

The first number of this new paper came to hand yesterday. We were pleased to receive it. It is a handsome 25-column paper, printed with clear, new type. The Times is thoroughly Democratic. It is published at Wadesboro, in Anson county, and the editorial columns are in the hands of Mr. Robt. H. Cowan, the proprietor, a gentleman who has for some time past been connected with the Raleigh Observer. Mr. Cowan has our best wishes for a happy success.

Pretty Close.

The British barque Minnie Gray, Capt. Berrell, has been loaded with cotton at the wharf of the Wilmington Compress and Warehouse Company and will probably clear for Liverpool tomorrow. She registers 349 tons and will take out 1,460 bales of cotton. That is to say, she registers 781,760 pounds and will carry out 730,000 pounds of cotton, none of which is stowed either in the cabin or the fore-castle. At the rate of 500 pounds to the bale this is very nearly 2,100 pounds of cotton to the registered ton. The Minnie Gray is consigned here to Mr. C. P. Mebane and the cargo of cotton is shipped by Messrs. Williams & Murchison.

Five Eagles.

It would seem that there are plenty of eagles hovering about the woods and coast in the Federal Point section of this county. We understand that one day last week a fisherman in that locality caught fifteen fine drum-fish and placed them alive in a shallow salt water pond near the coast so that he might get them when needed. A day or two after he went to get a fish and found five eagles on the sand near the pond, each deliberately picking the bones of one of his fish. The party had no gun with him and therefore the huge birds got off clear.

You can buy No. 1 Cooking and Heating Stoves at almost any price at JACOB'S Hardware Depot.

Funny "Freaks" To-Night.

The very amusing comedy of "Freaks" will be presented at the Opera House to-night, by the New York Criterion Company, which is pronounced by the press generally to be one of the best comedy companies now on the boards. "Freaks" is replete with rollicking humor and extravagant burlesque. Every actor in the company has a freak for or against some special object, and the play presents such a constant succession of amusing situations and incidents, as the result of these remarkable freaks, as to keep the audience in a continual uproar of laughter. The Cincinnati Gazette says: "As revised and rewritten 'Freaks' is one of the best high class funny plays announced for the season. So much can be said for the text itself, and as rendered by the New York Criterion Company it is almost unsurpassable. The piece is running over with excruciatingly ridiculous contortions, and is bristling with brilliant hits at the weakest of human foibles. Of course there is a love story in the comedy—in fact there are three love stories—one of a progressive 'woman's rights' young lady, another of a sweet, sentimental, although sensible, young lady, and the third of an old maid who writes seven act tragedies. The trouble is they all fall in love with the same man, as they think, on account of each of their lovers being, by force of circumstances, forced to assume the same name. But things straighten themselves out at the end in a perfectly satisfactory manner, and it turns out that the man (that is, according to his name) all three of the ladies had given their hearts to, was a worthless coxcomb, a professional 'masher' of women, who ignominiously disappears from the scene after creating all the mischief he can."
