Don Cameron is said to have contributed $150,000 to the forlorn republican hope in Indiana.

Hon. Frank Jones, of New Hampshire, will allow no intemperate man to work in his brewery.

Dr. Wilms, one of the most celebrated surgeons of Germany, died recently from blood poisoning, consequent upon an accidental cut while performing an operation.

Cotton gives nine estimates of the amount of the incoming cotton crop, the lowest estimate 5,250,000 bales, the highest 6,000,000 to 6,750,000, according to picking.

Dan Voorhees says Mr. English is worth three of millions dollars, but if he had given to every one who had come to him since the campaign opened he would not now have a cent to call his own.

A gentleman in Wilmington told us last Saturday that there were five hundred cases of fever in the city.—Laurinburg Enterprise.

Somebody, perhaps, who had just returned from Indiana.

And now we are told that some of the fashionable young men at the North not only powder their faces, but that they actually paint. That they wear corsets has long been admitted.

We regret to learn, says the Macon Telegraph, that the recent gale and terrible rain storm on the coast have played havoc with the standing rice, and that portion which had been temporarily stacked in the fields. The loss is even greater than was first reported, nearly every plantation on the Altamaha river having been overflowed by the booming tide and the dams badly washed and broken. The Darien Gazette puts down the loss at not less than 25 per cent. of the crop. The prospect had been previously very fine.

The latest development is that the Radicals have captured Mahone or, perhaps, Mahone has captured the Radicals. He is in Philadelphia and has had several conferences of late, with Senator Cameron on the one side and Speaker Randall, Roger A. Pryor and Abram S. Hewitt on the other. The Democrats, it is said, have retired and Cameron and Mahone have effected a compact by which the Democrats of Virginia who have followed Mahone in his mad career are to be delivered, bound hand and foot, unto the spoilers. Here is the programme of the little arrangement:

The Republican candidates for Congress in the Norfolk and Petersburg districts, Dezenford and Jorgensen, are to have no opposition from the Readjuster party. In return the Republicans are to withdraw their candidates for Congress in the other seven districts, and the negroes are to support the Readjuster candidates. By this means Mahone expects not only to capture the State, but a majority of Congressmen. In fact, he expects to get six out of the nine, and is quite willing to allow the Republicans two of the remaining three.

The State Fair, judging by the reports contained in the Raleigh papers, has proved very successful, although it would appear that some features do not realize the general expectation. The Raleigh Star says of the first day:

The exhibition is as large as we have ever seen on the first day, and the exhibitors were very busy all day getting everything ready, and the officers of the Society, with their unequalled and polite Secretary, were busy all day making entries and arranging space, which is getting scarce.

The racing promises to be fine, as there are some fast and fine horses, and we can expect some good sport in this direction.

The Fair was formally opened this morning by Colonel Thos. M. Holt, the President, who congratulated the Society on this, the opening of another of North Carolina's annual gatherings, and spoke enthusiastically of the grand prospects of our State, of the abundant crops all over the State and of the peace and harmony that prevailed.

The Concord Band furnishes the music, and does it well. The crowd is beginning to fill our city, and already we are enabled to shake hands with friends from the mountain to the seashore, and every train is filled with passengers.

Yesterday the trades' procession was one of the great features. It was not very successful, judging by this report from the Visitor:

The feature of the fair to-day was the procession exemplifying the different industries of the State, which moved up Fayetteville street. The procession was headed by a carriage containing the orators of the day. Then came the band of Durham, in an elegant band wagon, drawn by six horses, all wearing the bull brand, and a gaily caparisoned Durham bull followed close at its wheels. Then came a miniature tobacco factory, with the hands singing gaily over their work. Following this came the show of Edwards, Broughton & Co., showing a printing office in full blast. The Raleigh Nurseries was the next wagon, and was followed in order by the harness exhibition of H. N. Wyatt & Son; a stump puller, John Caxton, polishing a granite slab; R. N. Mitchell's boiler works, in full operation; a boat built in this city, and Allen & Crum's boiler exhibit wound up the show. Several of the industries of the city were not represented, but we hope they will do better next time.

Dr. West, a colored man of Atlanta, while addressing the negroes during the late canvass, on their duty in reference to the relations existing between them and the Southern white people, said: "Let the North take care of themselves and we will take care of ourselves, and vote for whom it is our best interests to support." If this view would prevail among the colored voters generally, there would be no room for suspicion upon the part of either class. Their interests being identical, they would all ways be found voting together.

Lippincott's Magazine.

Lippincott's Magazine for November opens with an article on the "Ruins of the Colorado Valley," by Alfred Terry Bacon. Jennie J. Young, author of "The Ceramic Art," contributes a comprehensive survey of the "Arts of India," with numerous illustrations. By way of comparison "Limoges, and its Porcelain," by George L. Catlin, presents us with a view of one of the great centres of industrial art in Western Europe. "A Pivotal Point," by Rev. William M. Baker, depicts graphically the situation in Texas in the day of secession, with anecdotes and personal reminiscences of Sam Houston and other prominent characters. "The Practical History of a Play," by William H. Rideing, introduces the reader into the manager's "den" and traces the successive steps by which an accepted play is got ready for representation. Dr. H. C. Wood's paper on "Automatism," the first of two, is a clear and popular presentation of biological principles and facts. "How She Kept her Vow," by S. G. W. Benjamin, professes to be a true narrative of adventure during the civil war. An agreeably written article on "Heinrich Heine," two amusing short stories by Olive Logan and Margaret Bertha Wright, the last instalment but one of "Adam and Eve," poems by Julia C. R. Dorr and John B. Tabb, and the usual variety of reading in the editorial columns complete the number. It is announced that with the next year this magazine will enter on a new series, the price being reduced to $3.00 per annum and 25 cents per number.

And so a commission from Ulysses S. Grant, "Commander-in-Chief" of the Boys in Blue," makes that organization a lawful organization. Well, this is a progressive age; but is that progress, or is it retrograding? Where did citizen Grant get such powers from? certainly not from the Constitution, nor from any statute law that we ever read or heard of.

A Sick Man and a False Rumor.

A colored man named Benjamin Frederick, about 35 years of age, was found in a very destitute and feeble condition yesterday near the corner of Sixth and Harnett streets by officer Capps, of the police force, who at once procured a cart and conveyed the sick man to the Guard Room where his case could be examined into by the city physician and his wants attended to temporarily, at least. But no sooner had the cart with the invalid arrived at the City Hall than it became rumored about that "there was the 'nigger' Officer Nelson shot," and we find to-day that the same report exists on the streets, to the effect that one of the police force shot a man who escaped from him and fled into the woods where he was discovered bleeding and insensible and brought into the city in that condition. Officer Nelson did fire at an escaped prisoner yesterday afternoon, but no one was hit, and the fleeing man, who was a sort of a confidence sharper, was afterwards arrested and his case disposed of.

The colored man, who was carried to the City Hall in the cart, was kindly cared for, and Dr. Walker, the city physician, remained with him from 10 until 12 o'clock last night and although speechless and insensible when the doctor first examined him, this morning he walked out as bright as a lark and bent his steps homeward. But whether the convalescent showed any signs of gratitude to the physician and Captain Brock, who both did everything they could for him, we have not been informed at this present writing. This was the extent of the rumor about a "nigger being shot and carried to the Guard House in a cart."

Mr. Nath'l Jacobi having been appointed agent for the Atlas Plow, parties in want of this celebrated Plow can now have their orders filed at JACOBI'S Hardware Depot, No. 10 S. Front st.
