There will be a dearth of amusements for the balance of the season. Nothing is booked for the Opera House, and so far, only one inquiry for dates in February.

And now they tell us that, stimulated by the example set by Mr. Duke, the junior clerk at the Parcell is about to follow the path tread by the Duke. Oh! Benny!

The Charlotte Observer tells us that work on the third wire of the American Union to Columbia is still being prosecuted, but the swamp being overflowed on the lower end of the Carolina Central it has been necessary to discontinue work at present on the Wilmington wire on account of the difficulty of getting posts.

Indications.
For the South Atlantic States threatening weather and rain, northerly to easterly winds, stationary or a slight rise in temperature and during the rest of Tuesday slight changes and followed on Wednesday by falling barometer.

Down the River.
Gen. J. B. Imboden and Mr. E. K. Hyndman, the gentlemen of whom we spoke yesterday at length in connection with their visit to this city, went down the river this morning on the steam tug Woodbury, accompanied by Mr. Henry Nutt, Gen. M. P. Taylor and Mr. Bacon, the engineer in charge of the government works. They will visit Smithville and the works at the mouth of the river and will return to the city late this afternoon.

Go to JACOBI'S for Doors, Sash and Blinds, pure White Lead, Oils, Varnishes, Window Glass, all sizes. All at the lowest prices.

Mr. Hill's Condition.
The news from Abbottsburg to-day relative to Mr. W. E. Hill's condition, is very sad. His injuries are now said to be fatal. No hopes are entertained of his recovery and his death this noon was expected at any moment. It was thought to be impossible for him to live throughout the day and we fear that ere this reaches the eyes of our readers his kindly spirit will have winged its flight. The family physician from this city, the same who went up to Abbottsburg and Shoe Heel last Saturday, is with him to-day and we know that all that care and skill could accomplish has been done.

The Great Atlantic Coast Inland Canal

The idea of a continuous line of inland navigation along our Atlantic seaboard is almost as old as our Government. Our first President (George Washington) manifested his faith in its desirability, by taking an active part, and investing liberally in the Dismal Swamp Canal. As early as the year 1807, the Secretary of the Treasury urged the matter upon Congress. He says: "Should this great work be accomplished, a sea vessel entering the first canal in the harbor of Boston would, through the Bay of Rhode Island, Long Island Sound, and the harbor of New York, reach Brunswick, on the Raritan; thence pass through the second canal to Trenton, on the Delaware, down that river to Christiana or Newcastle, and through the third canal to Elk river and the Chesapeake; whence sailing down that bay and up Elizabeth River, it would, through the fourth canal, enter Albemarle Sound, and by Pamlico, Core and Bogus Sounds, reach Beaufort and Swansborough in North Carolina. The first of these canals across Cape Cod is now being constructed. The three last mentioned have been in successful operation many years, and more than twenty five years since a formidable rival to the Dismal Swamp Canal was projected by persons in Norfolk, Va., and so wonderful has been the increase of traffic through them that during the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1880, six thousand seven hundred and seventy-four craft were passed through the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal, yielding a revenue from tolls of $36,138.99.

Congress has from time to time made liberal appropriations for surveys of routes to extend the Canal further South. A line was surveyed in 1837 by Col. James Kearney, of the U. S. Topographical Engineers, to connect the Neuse with the Cape Fear River. In 1875 Col. Abert made another survey with the same object in view, but so great were the obstacles encountered, that Congress in 1878 made another appropriation for a third survey, which was made under the direction of Capt. C. B. Phillips, (see his report, Senate Ex. Doc. No. 73, 46th Congress, 2nd session. From his report we learn that he, like his predecessors, devoted much labor, and surveyed hundreds of miles, in the vain endeavor to discover a practicable route for a canal to connect with the Cape Fear River above Wilmington. He finally abandoned that idea, and recommends the route through the Sounds, connecting with the river three miles below Wilmington.

In the year 1876, three Wilmington gentlemen, who were familiar with the Sounds on the Coast of North Carolina, being impressed with the importance of having the Inland Canal extended further South, applied to the Legislature for a charter, which was ratified March 12th 1877, granting unto them the "exclusive right for a term of thirty years to construct the canals." They immediately went to work reconnoitering and surveying, and finally succeeded in locating the same route that is now recommended by the report above mentioned. They estimate the cost of opening this route by thousands instead of the millions of dollars estimated by previous surveyors, but owing to the general impecuniosity of our Southern people they have as yet been unable to do more. So soon however as they can succeed in finding a copartner who has a few thousands to invest, they will rapidly proceed with their cherished enterprise.

River News.
The river has fallen off since the last freshet, until now there is only a depth of twelve feet on the Shoals with the water still falling slowly. From the pilot of the steamer A. P. Hurt, in this morning from Fayetteville, we learn that the damage to the sunken steamer, Gov. Worth, is not so great as was at first feared. The hurricane deck has been swept away by the freshet, together with the pilot house and forward cabin of the promenade deck, but the after cabin and the frames of the state rooms on that part of the port, as well as the after part of the promenade deck, are still preserved, though in a damaged condition. The work of raising the sunken steamer, we learn, will be commenced to-morrow.

LITTLE GIANT HALL

Bohemian Glass Blowers.
There are but few, if any, of our citizens who have seen anything to equal the glass novelties made by the Bohemian Glass Blowers, who opened a short engagement in the Little Giant Hall last evening. The company, six in number, are polite, affable gentlemen, who are ever willing to answer questions and entertain their audiences. The descriptive lecture with models is more than treble worth the price of admission.

Apart from the novelty and uniqueness of the entertainment given by the Bohemians, it is a very instructive one, and one in which a child, and a great many adults, could learn more from observation and oral instruction than could be attained by weeks of reading.

The Corliss engine is what is known as a walking beam marine engine, and is a marvel of perfection, being made entirely of glass. All the workings of the valves, machinery, etc., can be seen and much better understood than could be learned from text books. By means of this engine each valve or joint can be disassembled, so to speak. The flexible glass bonnets, slippers, tidies, crochet mats glass lace handkerchiefs, and other specimens attracted much attention, wonder and admiration.

Prof. Woodroffe, who is no stranger to our older citizens, he having paid Wilmington several visits in ante-bellum days, explains how every article is made as he is manufacturing them and by this means enables his audience to more fully comprehend what they see. The company are thorough masters of their art and when one remembers that they work the most brittle of all substances, glass he can but stand in wonder and admiration of their skill. The large number of ornaments which were made during the entertainment were given away and to-night we are assured that an additional number will be given to the audience.

The voting for the handsomest baby in the city was commenced and will be continued during the week. To-morrow afternoon a matinee will be given. We would advise our citizens to pay a visit to the entertainment.

Water street merchants will keep their feet dry in winter by wearing ROSENTHAL'S boots and shoes.

Lippincott's Magazine.
Lippincott's Magazine for February is the second number of the new series, and gives satisfactory evidence of the improvements promised at the time of the change. "Down the Red River of the North," by Alice Ilgenfritz, is a sprightly and profusely illustrated sketch of a trip through the province of Manitoba. In "A Celestial Colony" a graphic description is given of that part of San Francisco known as Chinatown. Fiction is attractively and liberally represented by the serial "Lilith," which is continued with increasing interest, and three capital short stories, viz., "Monsieur Paul's Heroism," by Louise S. Houghton; "The Kourasoffs," by Vera Lapoukhya; and "A Midwinter Romance," by L. K. Black.

The more solid articles of the number are an analytical description of "Welsh Women," by Wirt Sykes; a discussion, under the title of "Power-Centres," by an old journalist, of the various types of journals, and the why and the wherefore of their existence; an able criticism of Sarah Bernhardt in her various characters, by M. G. Van Rensselaer; and "Among the Cherokees," an account of that prominent tribe, with observations made during a visit, by A. M. Williams. A bright sketch, entitled "A Country Tavern in Winter," by Mary Dean; two striking poems, with the usual variety of "Monthly Gossip" and literary criticisms, form the balance of a choice number of this justly popular magazine.

Disapprove The Contract.
The Board of Audit and Finance met yesterday afternoon to take into consideration the contract made by the Board of Aldermen with the Wilmington Market Company. After consideration it was decided that the Board of Audit and Finance do not approve of the contract, and a committee, consisting of the Chairman, Mr. Norwood Giles, and Mr. R. J. Jones, was appointed to draft in writing the reason for the disapproval. The opinion of the City Attorney, which was called for by the Board, was that the contract was illegal.
