Cigar Factory.
Messrs I. Hirsberg and M. F. Bentley, of Raleigh, have opened a factory in this city for the manufacture of cigars. At present they are located on Market street, between Front and Second. They employ ten hands and four strippers and turn out 2,000 cigars a day. They manufacture only fine goods and will not undertake to handle common grades. We wish them every success.

Magistrate's Court
Wm. Love, colored, was arraigned before J. C. Hill, J. P., to-day, upon the charge of larceny, and in default of bond was committed to Jail. The crime is alleged to be the same for which David Hall, colored, was arrested and tried by a Magistrate a few days ago to wit: the larceny of $22 in money from J. O. Nixon, colored. Hall gave bond for his appearance at the next term of the Criminal Court. But Love, the defendant, today in Justice Hill's Court, was committed in default of the proper surety as above stated to the next term of the Criminal Court. We presume it will be determined which of the two accused is the guilty party.

Judge Russell's Speech.

As there is a dearth of local news matter to-day, we publish herewith, in full, Judge Russell's remarks in the House of Representatives, on Friday last, in the matter of the contested election case of Boynton vs. Loring.

Mr. Russell of North Carolina said: Mr. Speaker: I propose to offer a substitute for both reports with a view of sending this case back to the Committee on Elections to ascertain whether the sitting member in this case or any other of this House from the State of Massachusetts is entitled to a seat on this floor.

It seems it is substantially admitted that Massachusetts has deliberately disfranchised a very large number of her inhabitants, citizens of the United States.
It is also manifest that this disfranchisement is so extensive as to deprive her of the representation founded on the whole number of her inhabitants. Even the contested in this case seems to admit that this disfranchisement is sufficient to take from her at least one member of the eleven which she claims and holds in this House. Here we have the astounding fact that this State, one of the foremost of those States which joined in establishing the fourteenth amendment as a part of the organic law of this land, has deliberately violated that amendment and has been, and is now, enjoying the fruits of this crime by holding representation here which belongs to the people of the other States of the Union.

And now, sir, it is plain that if this can be done your fourteenth amendment is a dead letter and the Constitution of the country a defunct instrument. Much has been said about the disfranchisement of black men in the South by violence and bloodshed, but it seems that Massachusetts does by her law-makers what she denounced the South for permitting to be done by her criminals.

The gentleman from Massachusetts, the sitting member in this Congress, has devoted much time to a defense of the laws, policies, and history of Massachusetts, and has made a signally unsuccessful attempt to wipe out blurs and blot that rest upon her name and fame. His glorification of his people as warriors, his claim to preeminent distinction for Massachusetts men as soldiers in the late rebellion, is calculated to bring smiles to the faces of the real soldiers of great war States of this Union, North and South.

Why, sir, if the real statistics could be obtained there is every reason to believe that States like North Carolina and Tennessee, which, next to Virginia, formed the backbone of the Confederacy, furnished more of their bona fide citizens to the Federal Army than Massachusetts. Of course in arriving at this result it would be necessary to deduct from Massachusetts and credit to us the large numbers of our black men that she enlisted into Massachusetts regiments and used as substitutes for her kid-gloved gentry, and not one in a hundred of whom ever went into the Army, except in an easy, comfortable and safe position. She is no more entitled to claim these as a part of her war quota than she is to claim as her own production the cotton which we produce and the manufactures. And if her talent and her culture were in the Army, how is it that she cannot send any of them to Congress, how is it that almost all her representative men, instead of being soldiers, were during that terrific strife engaged in making money and contributing to that vast wealth of the North without which the South could not have been conquered?

But, sir, I make no charge upon the people of Massachusetts. The gentleman has gone far out of his way to seek an opportunity to defend what he is pleased to call the State of Massachusetts. Nobody had assailed the State, but the gentleman, with a coolness that is characteristic of his caste, assumes the aristocracy of Massachusetts to be the people and the State. The great mass of the people of Massachusetts are laboring men and women. Her common people and her middle classes that constitute the great majority of her people are as good as the people of any other State. It is not they who are now brought to the bar of the country for a violation of the Constitution, but the minority which tramples them down by disfranchising them by the thousands, and which constitutes itself an aristocracy, founded upon neither blood nor brains, but money alone.

It can hardly be seriously contended that the contestant is entitled to admission.

The legal question here is, it being established that Massachusetts is entitled to less than eleven members of the House, shall she be permitted to violate the plain mandate of the Constitution because Congress by the apportionment act of 1872 allotted to her eleven members?

It is contended, Congress having fixed the apportionment erroneously, wrongfully, and unconstitutionally, the wrong can only be righted by a new congressional reapportionment. The answer is that Congress can no more violate the Constitution than Massachusetts can, and when Congress declared that Massachusetts was entitled to eleven members it violated the Constitution, and, like all other unconstitutional legislation, the act, so far as it applied to Massachusetts, was simply null and void. Will any man contend if North Carolina had been declared to be entitled to forty members when in truth and in law she was only entitled to eight, that she could have sent forty members to this House and kept them here under the pretense that Congress had so ordered? Would Massachusetts consent that her people should be robbed of their legitimate share of political power because Congress, in violation of the Constitution, had given to North Carolina an excessive quantum of representation? Would she admit that members elected under such circumstances should be entitled to hold their seats in this House a single day?

It may be said that although Massachusetts is enjoying an undue share of political power by her excessive representation in this House, having eleven members, for example, when she is only entitled to nine, it would be monstrous to turn out all of her members, to deprive her of all representation. The answer is that if she has two more votes on the floor of this House than she is entitled to, thereby giving to, say, three men in Massachusetts the same political power as four men in New York or North Carolina—if she has thus violated the Constitution of the country in its plainest terms, then the wrong must be remedied and such steps must be taken as are necessary to give her her true and lawful representation. The only way to do this is to turn out all her members in this House and provide by competent legislation for her true and lawful apportionment. It is clear that there is no difference between the title of the contestant in this case and that of any other member of the Massachusetts delegation.

There is no method by which you can select two of the eleven and exclude them so as to reduce the number down to her constitutional nine. The defect is in the title of each and every one of them, it is inherent and vital, and no man can distinguish this case from the other case which I have put of a State sending forty members when she is only entitled to eight.

It does not follow that because the apportionment law of 1872 is null as to Massachusetts it is so as to the other States. Every law you know that a law may be good in part and bad in part; nor does it follow because the illegitimate and excessive two which Massachusetts unlawfully enjoys belong to some other State that the title of the Representatives of that State is defective.

The distinction between the case of a State which sends more and the State which sends less than its constitutional quota is easy. A State which sends more can only remedy the wrong by withdrawing them all and sending the proper number. The State which sends less has only to provide by her own legislation for the additional number, leaving those who have already been elected. For example, if in this case the Massachusetts members should be ousted and that State should send nine and the other two should be distributed between two other States, the two latter could provide through their Legislatures for an election, perhaps by districts, certainly by the State at large, for the additional member.

Broke His Leg.
We regret to learn of a serious accident to Mr. Wm. Taft while at work at the blacksmith shops in this city, at the W. & W. R. R. Mr. Taft was at the time of the accident engaged in lifting a heavy piece of iron, when he fell and broke his right leg just above the ankle bone. He was carried to his home in the Southern portion of the city, and his wounded leg cared for by Dr. Thos. F.
Wood. He is doing as well as can be expected, though it will be some time before he will be able to go to work again.

To Morrow Evening.
There are still a few desirable seats to be had for the entertainment which is to be given in the Opera House to-morrow evening. "All of the world will be there" which means that many representatives of the youth and fashion and beauty and gallantry of Wilmington will be present. The two pieces to be presented are in skillful hands and the entertainment is sure to please.

In this connection we would remind those who will be present that a number of ladies have made preparations to furnish refreshments on the occasion which may be found in the Mayor's office.

Sleighting in the Mud.
It ceased snowing last evening about dark and soon afterwards there was a fall of sleet. The sun rose clear this morning, as is almost invariably the case here after a snow storm, and as it has been bright and clear all day the snow has melted rapidly and the streets have been full of slush. There were but two sleighs out and the drivers of these soon found out that there wasn't much fun in being dragged through the mud, and the sleighs thereupon disappeared more rapidly than the snow had done.

Catarrah Sometimes commences with a cold, but its cure always commences with the use of Sage's Catarrah Remedy. This old, reliable and well-known remedy has stood the test of years, and was, never more, popular than now.
