The World says the ice fields extended more than a mile from the shore at Long Branch and the extraordinary scene was witnessed of people walking out on the ice 200 yards to sea. About ten a. m. a strong northeasterly current brought the ice field with great force against the outer end of the ocean pier, breaking in twain seven of the iron col umus. All the heavy materials on the sea end of the pier were hastily removed in expectation of further damage.

In other words, Mr. Vanderbilt is a windler. We can make nothing else of it. His gains were made through false pretences. 'He plundered the public and is therefore a public robber. If some poor devil who is really hard up should step intoMr. Vanderbilt's office and chisel him out-of a dollar or two through false representations, and Mr. Vanderbilt should ascertain the fact in time, the said p. d. would probably visit Blackwell's Island. The Western agricultural interests, we see, says the New York Bulletin, are having something to say on the steamship subsidy jobs now before Congress, and they say it, too, with a force and a logic that the lobby will find extremely difficult to answer. Thus, in the Missouri Legislature last week, a series of resolutions in the form of a memorial to Condistribution of subsidies those depending upon agricultural products be not overlooked, and that provision be made "to pay ten cents for each and every hog of religion may not again deal out nis raised" as a bounty to increase the profits of farming and "encourage and aid all who may engage in so great a national his public appearance here in future in industry, and that the poor laborer may the character of arch blasphemer and re thereby get cheaper bacon." A New York letter says: "As everybody knows William H. Vanderbilt made a vast deal of money-probably a million or two-by his laie telegraph operations, which he seems to have managed with exceeding shrewdness. This is the way that he conducted his finapcial schemes: He told his immediate kinsmen by blood and marriage to sell Western Union short, and they naturally. went into the street and did as they were hidden. Stock brokers and speculators, seeing what the Vanderbilt party, as it is called, were doing, imagined that they had an excellent point and did likewise. Meanwhile Vanderbilt himself was stead- all parts of the city.
