Mrs. PERSON—Dear Madam: I think your medicine is the best that is now before the public for the cure of blood diseases. I have great confidence in it, and believe that it will do all that you claim for it. I have the personal knowledge of the condition of young Mr. Stokes, before he commenced taking your medicine, and I see you have his testimony that he is cured. Go on, and I say God speed you in your efforts to ameliorate the condition of mankind, and add to his comfort and happiness. I will do all in my power for you among my friends. Yours respectfully,

For the Penitentiary.
Sheriff Ward, of Pender county, started to-day for the penitentiary with the following named prisoners, convicted at the term of Pender Superior Court which adjourned last evening, the 24th inst.:

Abbie Howard, manslaughter, five years; Joshua Hayes, larceny, five years; Holly Herring, larceny, four years, and William Murphy, larceny, two years. Louis McKay and Austin James were both convicted of larceny, and sentenced to six and four months respectively in the county jail, or to be hired out by the County Commissioners. All of the above parties are colored.

Nana's Daughter.
A Continuation of and Sequel to Emile Zola's Realistic Novel of "Nana." T. B. Peterson & Bros., Philadelphia. Morocco Cloth, $1.00.—Paper Cover, 75 cents.

"Nana's Daughter" is a sequel to Zola's world-famous "Nana," but is in many respects superior to that great work. Intense and continuous action characterizes it throughout, and every page is of absorbing interest. The aim is to show that evil instincts are not hereditary. Nana is a prominent personage in the story, but occupies a more elevated plane than Zola assigns to her. Her daughter, Andree, is a direct contrast to her. Abandoned in infancy by her mother, she is adopted and brought up by the Naviels, an upright family belonging to the working classes. Nana finds her and strives to gain possession of her, her efforts forming the staple of the story. Andree is tempted time and again and subjected to trials without number, but remains true to her parents by adoption, herself and her betrothed, Lucien Desprez. All the characters are vividly sketched, the plot is of unusual strength and merit, and the style of composition is vigorous and concise. The translation of "Nana's Daughter" is by John Stirling, who has done his work conscientiously well.

Fort Fisher.
Col. Wm. Lamb, once Commandant of Fort Fisher, now resident in Norfolk, Va., writes to Ex-President Davis a correction as regards the fight on Christmas Day, 1864, at Fort Fisher, a day which will long be remembered by those of our citizens who were resident here then. Col. Lamb's letter is very interesting and is valuable, too, as containing the exact number engaged in the contest in both fights at Fort Fisher. We clip it from the Norfolk Virginian:

NORFOLK, VA., June 15, 1881.
Hon. Jefferson Davis:
MY DEAR SIR:—I have just received my copy of your work on the "Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government." I very naturally turned to your remarks in regard to Fort Fisher, a work which I built and commanded until it was captured by the enemy. In your statement (p. 645) about the garrison of the fort there occurs an error which must have been a lapsus penne. You put Butler's troops in the first attack at 6,500, and then state the fort had a garrison of about 6,500 men. I have before me my official report of the fight, written with great care on December 27, 1864. From it I find that on December 24 I had a total of 928, consisting of 738 regulars and 190 junior reserves (boys under eighteen years.) On the 25th I had a total of 1,371, consisting of 921 regulars and 450 junior reserves.

In the first terrific bombardment the armament of the land face and the palisades were uninjured, and the reconnaissance of the enemy was met with such an effective fire of grape-shot and small arms that they were withdrawn without an attempt at assault.

In regard to the last attack, you say that the garrison of Fort Fisher had been increased to about double the number of men there on the 24th of December. In this fight I did not have, from first to last, over 1,900 men in the work, and this includes the sick and disabled. Besides, 350 of this force, comprising the Twenty-first and Twenty-fifth South Carolina regiments, arrived just previous to the entrance of the fort by the federal troops.

I feel grateful for your recognition of the heroic defense made by my garrison after sixty hours of continuous bombardment by the heaviest armed fleet that ever attacked a fortification, and in the face of overwhelming numbers.

Yours sincerely,
WM. LAMB.

Postal Matters.
We are requested by Col. Brink to state that sealed proposals for carrying the United States mails from Wilmington to Wrightsville, six times a week, from July 16 to December 31, 1881, will be received by the Postmaster at Wilmington, until July 5, 1881. The advertisement can be seen and particulars learned at the Postoffice.

Col. Brink has been endeavoring for some time to have this service established and has at length succeeded. After December it is hoped to make it a permanent thing. Miss Katie Wilson Manning, daughter of Capt. E. W. Manning, has been appointed Postmistress, the object being to have some one in charge of the office who resides, the year round, at Wrightsville. It will prove a great convenience to many in the city as well as the residents by the seashore.

It is a fact that at this time the Postoffice in this city is the only one in New Hanover county but arrangements have been made for reestablishing the office at Castle Hayne. It will be located, as formerly, at Mr. Schriver's place, near the depot, and Mr. John Bordeaux has been appointed Postmaster. It is expected that the service will begin by the first of July.

To Builders and others—Go to JACOBI'S for Sash, Blinds and Doors, Glass, &c. You can get all sizes and at the lowest prices. †

Correctional.
We are requested to correct an error into which our correspondent has fallen who briefly reported the proceedings of the North Carolina Medical Society at its recent meeting in Asheville.

In the report contained in the issue of this paper of the 6th inst. it is stated that, among the applicants for license of the Board of Examiners, was one who had been a member of the Faculty of the Charleston Medical College (should have been Medical College of the State of South Carolina.)

The person to whom allusion is made has never held a professorship in that college, but was, during the space of fifteen years, Lecturer on Clinical Medicine and Surgery in the Marine and Roper Hospitals, in Charleston, to the classes of that institution; and was, during several years, Lecturer on the Principles and Practice of Medicine, in the Charleston (Summer) Preparatory Medical School; having as colleagues Prof. J. I. Chisolm and F. T. Miles, now of the University of Maryland, Prof. F. P. Porcher, now of the Medical College of the State of South Carolina, and Prof. S. Logan, now of the University of Louisiana.

Mr. Kingsbury's Address.
We find in the Raleigh News and Observer the following eloquent, but short, report of the address delivered by Mr. T. B. Kingsbury, of this city, at Wilson recently:

Mr. Kingsbury's address before the Wilson school was the most thorough and exhaustive discussion of the "Men and Times of North Carolina" which has ever been presented to a popular audience. Owing to the modesty and self-depreciation of this distinguished gentleman, it is highly probable that this brilliant effort will perish with the occasion which called it forth, unless he can be induced to let it go to the press for publication. It would be in excellent taste for the journalists of North Carolina, among whom the author is so shining an ornament, to request its presentation to the intelligent and cultivated masses of the State, that they may see in the most truthful and attractive garb what a noble history we possess.

Mr. Kingsbury's tribute to those pioneer heroes, the daring Regulators who fought and fell at Alamance, and who sanctified with their blood the very threshold of the temple of liberty, is warm with the flesh-tints of the brightest painting of the orator, and is worthy of perpetuation with the best literature of the land. His persistent tracking of the spirit of independence, which has ever throbbled in the defiant blood of our people, from the old Albemarle farmers and fishermen up to the martyrs of our civil war, shows that he has closely studied and fully digested the morals of our commonwealth. But the highest excellence of this splendid address is its faithful and graphic portraiture of the intellectual giants who made the professional and political fame of North Carolina. A man may have some dim conception of these towering, mystic shapes as they flit to and fro among the dense shadows of the past. But he never knows clearly who and what they were, how large in their intellectual stature, how diverse in their acquirements, how supreme in their wonderful endowments of talent and genius, how glowing and finished in their accomplishments and how irresistible in their life work until he hears this address of Mr. Kingsbury's. In this department of thought, criticism and discussion the editor of the Wilmington Star stands almost without a rival. The extensive literary resources of his fine mind have been so repeatedly employed in this kind of pleasant work that his pen pictures of illustrious men are very nearly perfect. It is well known that Pender among soldiers, and Badger among lawyers and public speakers are his favorites of "all the great thinkers and workers and heroes of the State. Accordingly in this admirable address he fits up with ivory, gold and precious stones a glorious niche for each of these immortals in the pantheon of our eventful history. Each of them and all the others come out before us vividly as we tread the shining marble under our feet, and we feel that our gallant old State need covet no Westminster Abbey nor ancient mausoleum to preserve the memory of her dead. They will live forever in her historic page. We repeat the hope that Mr. Kingsbury will not limit to his Wilson audience this most able and interesting address. H.

A REPLY TO THE "ICE RING."

GENTLEMEN—We take this public method of replying to your third proposition to buy us out. We were driven into the ice business by the prices extorted by your monopoly and we now propose to give the people of Wilmington and surrounding country the benefit of low prices, and let you try ever so hard to drive us out. If you wish to put your threat into execution of selling ice at 1/4 cent per pound do so, and the people will get the benefit, while we can use our ice in our business at one quarter of the cost we have been forced to pay you for years.
