908't Marry for Money, Specially Silver Dollars.

Incle Pleasant Batkins is sixty and is rife seventy-two. The other day a mend said: "Uncle Pleasant, why in wnischief did you marry a woman pary old enough to be your mother?" To see, boy," he replied, with a deep "I was a wurkin' for Long John man in Hanover when I was jest stres, and Sary Ann Rust, old Mrs see only daughter, was thirty if she maday. At every quiltin' she used prinse me for her partner, and everyboly said it peared like she wur a courtine. She gimme four pair cotton socks mis heap of things, but still I didn't breno notion of her. Well, one Christna eve, when I was sorteresh drinky, I set to the old woman's, and had hardsot down before Sary Ann brought mome sweet-periato pie, which | she haved I was monstrous fond of. While [ms estin' it I heard the old woman petars a-countin silver dollars. Now, by was no plaster to the sealing, and to ap stars floo had cracks in it as wide any finger. So, you see, I could hear be jugle of the money jest as well as if had been up thar, myself. When she and counted nine hundred and six I ined up to Sary Ann and popped the testion. In course she said she'd have me and the next Thursday we was marned. Now, what do you think I found out the next day? Why, that the old woman didn't have but thirty Mexican dollars, and that she counted 'em- over solover jest to fool me. Don't marry formoney, boy, specially for silver dol-

Haunted Me.

Suhington's Ex Queen at the Seashore-Living a Dreamy, Secluded

ATLANTIC CITY, July 22 .- Did you ever look upon a beautiful face which told you almost as plainly as words that mental anguish had but added to its beauty? I contemplated such a counte nance in the parlor of the Shelbourne tonight. Its owner was a lady rather inclined to be tall, but with a symmetrical form which looked all the more attractire for the extremely plain costume, black a color and almost severe in its lack of trimming or other adornment. Her bloode hair, dressed in the prevailing seaside fashion—an English frizze—cevered the forehead to within an inch or so of thedark blue eves, and two flushed cheeks, mouth full of pearly teeth, lips like a the cherry and a short, round chin, completed the picture. But there was something in the face apart from its natural gifts which was calculated at once to first the attention of the observer. It an expression of indescribable melancholy and pain, as if the iron had entered the soul of its owner and left there, Bit hate or vindictiveness-a look so plaintive, so appealing, that one might match it to melt the hardest heart.

"Who is she?" I heard the question sked twenty times inside of an hour, and each time the answer was returned: hate Chase Sprague." The former histress of Canonchet has been the guest of the Shelburne since Tuesday, and proloses to remain until the close of the sason. A maid and two nurses, who mail, addressed only to have entire charge of her three children, all girls, the oldest being 12 and the Joungest not yet 3, comprise her retinue. the moves about in a dreamy sort of way, addom mingling with the other guests or engaging with them in conversation. when in the society of intimate JUBAL A. EARLY. fiends, several of whom are at the same botel, she sedulously avoids all references to her domestic difficulties. I asked her baight if the sale of the Sprague estate, merred to in the morning dispatches from Providence, jeopardized any of her aterests, and her mouth was open for a teply when Judge Tyner put in an inoplanguage appearance with a remark on the acsquitoes, a popular subject, which inmantly changed the drift of the conver
