

THE DAILY REVIEW.

JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Proprietor.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1891.

Entered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N. C., as Second-Class Matter.

The pompano, which is considered by epicures as the most delicate fish that swims, is hawked and sold in Pensacola at 25 cents per dozen. The only people that starve in Florida are those who will not eat.

Of the 11,000 factories on Main, in an Island, 950 factories are engaged in the manufacture of clothing, producing $78,000,000 annually; 540 printing and publishing houses produce $24,000,000 worth of literature. There are $8,000,000 of cigars and $10,000,000 worth of furniture produced every year.

Mrs. Booth, the widow of the great tragedian, lives in a cottage at Long Branch with her son, Mr. Joseph Booth. Notwithstanding four score years she is extremely bright and chatty, converses freely on past and present topics, and takes especial interest in making inquiries as to people and things in Hartford county, Md., where she so long resided.

In several corps of the Russian army dogs have been introduced in the place of men as sentries. The wolf dog of the Ural Mountains has been found most serviceable for this purpose for the reason that it is wont to signify its disapproval of intruders by low growls instead of vociferous barking, which would incite all the other dogs in the camp to similar vocal exercises.

A cannon and in fragments of timber which belonged to the British frigate Shannon, sunk in the York river shortly before Cornwallis surrendered, have been recently raised, and will doubtless attract attention during the coming celebration at Yorktown. They are at present in Norfolk, but it is to be supposed that some arrangements will be made for their exhibition during the ceremonies of next month.

The Washington Star says the signal office meteorological summary for the month just closed at that station, shows a mean temperature of 77 degrees—higher than any previous month. The warmest approach to it the past decade was in September, 1874, when the mean was 70.4 degrees. The lowest mean temperature in September the past ten years was in 1871, when the record was 62.6 degrees.

THE EXPOSITION.

The Atlanta Exposition has opened very successfully. The space allotted to exhibitors has all been taken and it is expected that at least one hundred thousand visitors will be present during the season. The Exposition was formally opened at noon on Wednesday, in the presence of about ten thousand people. The opening prayer was by Bishop Elliott, of Kentucky. Director-General Kimball presented the buildings and Gov. Colquhoun replied in acceptance. Senator Vance, who had been invited to deliver the opening address, was then presented and spoke as follows:

Fellow Countrymen: The Spanish soldier, DeLeon, in the early part of the 16th century anxiously sought through the wilds of the Florida peninsula for the fountain that would renew youth; and his no less illustrious countryman, DeSoto, cut his way through all this Southern wilderness in search of the fabled hills of gold. Both died without finding the object of their search. Nevertheless, they trampled over it every day; they beheld it with their eyes; they inhaled it through their nostrils; it was the soil and the atmosphere, fitted to the production of that wondrous plant in whose honor we have assembled today. Better than the fountain of DeLeon, it renews the youth of nations; richer than the golden hills of DeSoto, its wealth, annually repeated, is inexhaustible. Through it means the splendors of modern commerce are made to surpass the glories of Carthage, of Tyre and of Venice. The world is now interested in its growth from the germ to its maturity, as the Infant Heir of the Blood Royal to the Empire of Trade. The merchant in the distant city listens for tidings of its coming up; the manufacturer amid his brick walls and tall chimneys anxiously observes its bloom; the restless speculator gazes upon its young bolts; the mariner, with his broad sails flapping idly against his masts, waits for its maturing, and the poor everywhere pray for the gentle shower and the soft sunlight on which it feeds, and rejoice at its safe ingathering. Its growth is the idyllic poem of our people; its mature existence is a system of political economy. It is the source of the hoarse shout of the steam engine; it is the melody of the soft song of the spindle and the loom. It is the Fairy of the waterfall—it is warmth, it is comfort, it is beauty. It is the pride of our fields, the source of our wealth, the king of our commerce.

This day we celebrate, with grateful joy and rejoicings, the beneficent glories of our Mother, and not only cotton, but we have brought every other product of our goodly land to this fair young city. Our tobacco, our bread grains, rice, our timbers and forest products, sugar-cane, tropical fruits and flowers; coal, iron, copper, silver, gold, corundum and precious stones; marble, malachite, mica from mines opened by the Toltees a thousand years before the coming of Christ; and all useful and precious things from the bosom of the earth or that grow upon the surface thereof; the fruit of our orchards and the clusters from our vineyards; specimens from our infant manufactures and arts.

To me has been assigned the pleasing duty of welcoming those who come from distant regions to participate in this grand parliament of industry.

We who live by deducing from Mother Earth the fabric which clothes her children, welcome you, men of the West, who, following kindred pursuits, live by evolving bread from the fertile bosom of nature.

You, merchants and shippers of the East and North, we welcome you to this exhibition of a people whose industry furnishes the chief article of your commerce—the principal agent of your foreign exchange.

You, manufacturers and artisans of the East, we welcome you to this exhibition of the productions of a people which assures you that they can live and thrive with no other governmental aid than that which is given by peace and respect for the rights of property.

Farmers, merchants, manufacturers, miners, carriers, laboring men and men of leisure, the great army of civilizers and supporters of progress and free government, the men of the press; strangers and lookers-on; countrymen and countrywomen—we welcome you all. To every one present or to come we extend a Southern welcome, warm as our sunshine, and bid him behold what can be done by a land whose fields were but yesterday "bleached into bloody sods by the maddening wheels of artillery," whose bosom of burden were swept away by devastating armies; whose noblest sons were slaughtered in battle; whose home were burned with fire, and whose State governments have passed through an era of corruption worse than anarchy. We invite you with pride to witness these conclusive tests of the genial nature of our climate, the fertility of our soil, the energy of our people, the conservative vitality of our political institutions; in short, we invite you to see that what we renewed our youth at the fountain of industry and found the hills of gold in the energies of an imperishable race.

You will remember, too, that what we are in the South is chiefly due to the almost unbroken blood of the pre-revolutionary settler in these sun-loved wilds. The migration of races and nationalities which have so largely sought the shores of the new world, within the last hundred years, has scarcely touched our borders; it has flowed across the Alleghenies, peopled the great valley, moved along to the base of the Rocky Mountains and across their snowy summits, to the shores of the Western sea, marking its progress everywhere by wealth and prosperity. The South, too, by this exhibition, offers to the world, its resources and wealth-giving influx to her own borders, and will receive gladly all who will come to her in the name of labor and law, and free government.

To every human soul, from all the broad realms of Christendom, which may have one desire to promote the happiness and stimulate the progress of our race, which can add one voice in praise of the triumphs of peace, we say—welcome! in God's name, to the hearts and homes of this Southern land; to the hospitalities of our cities; whose vigorous growth and rapid development show that American thrift and enterprise are confined to no section. We invite you to learn what you can of us; of our hopes and fears, our prejudices and methods of thought, our systems of action, our desires and our devotion to a common country. Teach us, if you can, in all these things a more perfect way. We will gladly learn of those whose success justifies them in teaching us. We would gladly learn a lesson in industry from the men of the great Northwest; in the thrift and the arts from the men of the East; in business sagacity, from the men of the great cities.

I need not remind you, my countrymen, that we stand in the shadow of a great delinquency. But verily, the wrath of man is the praise of the Almighty. The sufferings and death of the President of the United States have touched all hearts in this great land; and none with a more tender emotion than those of the South. It has awakened every feeling of pity and every sentiment of chivalry in our breasts. A common sorrow has made the American people remember that they have a common country and the cold page of history will say that this reunion of estranged hearts is his noblest monument. In the language of the old Arabian chroniclers, he has passed to the clemency of the Most High. May we not permit the feeling of brotherhood inspired by his death ever to perish, and may the intermingling here bear fruit in the time to come with us and with our children worthy of the citizenship of a free, Christian republic. May every legitimate branch of human industry and every generous passion of the human soul be stimulated and enlarged by this exhibition, so honorable to the great State whose people conceived and brought it about.

The Popular Demand.

So great has been the popular demand for the celebrated remedy, Kidney-Wort, that it is having an immense sale from Maine to California. Some have found it inconvenient to prepare it from the dry compound. For such the proprietors now prepare it in liquid form. This can be procured at the druggists. It has precisely the same effect as the dry, but is very concentrated so that the dose is much smaller.—Lowell Mail.

A young girl, 16 year old, while reciting in a Sabbath school class in Bristol, R. I., on Sunday, September 25, was suddenly deprived of the power of speech, and has been unable to speak since. Her body health is good, and no explanation of her affliction has been given.

MOONSHINE

Some geologists have contradicted Moses; but as all geologists have contradicted each other, Moses stands about as well as anybody.—New Orleans Picayune.

Lorillard and Keene are the men to send to England and France as ministers. They would make themselves respected by worthily representing a stable government.—New Orleans Picayune.

Chancer couldn't spell. Neither could Bacon. And Shakespeare was the worst of the lot. He couldn't spell his name. And for that matter, no more can any one else.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Midsummer conundrum: Johnson—"Smith, what kind of a beast would you prefer to be if you had to be one?" Smith—"Well, just at this time of year I think I'd rather be a little bare."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Baltimore people have great presence of mind. When a man fell dead the other day, it was proposed to call a corner. Said a man, "Hold on! Call two. This is a very melancholy occurrence, but we may as well make the best of it, and enjoy seeing the race between the corners, and their fight over the body." And they did.—Boston Post.

Few complexions can bear the strong white morning light which exposes every speck of tan, every pimple and the slightest spotting of eczema. In Dr. Benson's Skin Cure is sure relief from the annoyance of these blemishes on the cheek of beauty.
