Execution at Whiteville.

Yesterday, the 4th inst., Henry Lovett, colored, paid the extreme penalty of the law at Whiteville, Columbus county, for the murder of Archibald P. Williams, who was also colored. The crime was committed at Williamson's X Roads, in Tatam's township, in the above named county, on the 19th day of July, 1880. The parties had always been upon the most friendly terms, but upon the day of the murder there had been a slight misunderstanding between them, both being partially intoxicated. The difficulty, however, had been settled, and Lovett went to Williams and, putting his arm around the neck of the latter, said, "There is no trouble, 'ard, (a name by which Williams was sometimes known) between us; and the two walked off a few steps together in seeming friendship, when a blow was heard by the bystanders and Williams exclaimed, "I'm a dead man, without cause," and at the same time Lovett was seen to draw his knife from the neck of his victim. The assassin made no effort to escape, and was immediately arrested by some of the people present, while others hastened to the assistance of the wounded man. They found him with his throat and windpipe cut and the jugular vein nearly severed. Medical skill was promptly in attendance, but the man lived only about twenty-four hours after receiving the fatal wounds.
The murdered man was about fifty-five years of age, and left a wife and several children. He was, generally, a peacable, quiet man, but sometimes, especially when he had become intoxicated, was inclined to be turbulent. On this occasion, although drinking freely, he was very quiet.
Lovett was held to await the finding of the jury of inquest, and that being in accordance with the foregoing facts, he was committed to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury in the matter. At the Fall term of the Superior Court of Columbus county, the grand jury found a "true bill" against Lovett, and he was arraigned for trial. Messrs. W. L. Norment, of Robeson, and C. C. Lyon, of Lenoir county, were assigned by the Court as counsel to defend the prisoner, and upon affidavit made that the defense was not prepared for trial, the case was continued to the Spring Term of 1881. At the Spring Term of 1881 the defendant asked for a still further continuance to enable him to secure the attendance of important witnesses, and upon an affidavit to the effect, the prayer was granted and the case continued to the Fall Term of 1881. At the Fall Term, which convened at Whiteville on the 19th of September, 1881, His Honor, Judge Jesse F. Graves, presiding, Lovett was brought to trial, and after a fair and impartial hearing, an able defense by his counsel and an exhaustive charge, both of the law and testimony in the case, a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree" was rendered by the jury. A motion was made for a new trial upon the ground that no malice was shown upon the part of the prisoner, but His Honor overruled the motion and upon the request of the Solicitor for the State, J. D. McIver, Esq., proceeded to pass sentence, which was, "That the prisoner be taken back from whence he came and there confined until the 4th day of November, 1881, and that he then, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., be taken thence by the Sheriff of Columbus county to the place of common execution and there hanged by the neck until he be dead." The prisoner received his sentence with a perfectly stolid indifference, and without any apparent remorse for his fearful crime or regard for the awful fate which awaited him. In this state of mind he has remained until within the last few days, when he professed to become convicted of sin and was converted. He, however, to the last maintained that he had no knowledge or realization of the crime for which he has just paid the penalty. He was visited during his incarceration by the Rev. J. W. Dickson, of the Baptist Church, who offered him spiritual advice and consolation, and he has also been visited by two colored clergymen of the same denomination and for the same purpose. One of the latter, Rev. H. Gore, stated to the reporter that Lovett expressed himself as willing and prepared to go.

Lovett was about twenty-four years of age, full black, small stature, and his status, as a colored man, was considerably below the average of intelligence among those people. He was never married, his father is dead, but his mother, three sisters and one brother are now living near Kinston, Lenoir county, in this State.
At an early hour the streets of the quiet and lovely town of Whiteville began to be thronged with people from the surrounding country who were incited there to witness the awful but unusual spectacle of a public execution. The gallows, which was in the jail yard, was so erected as to afford ample accommomodation to all who desired to see the solemn proceeding.

At precisely thirty minutes past eleven o'clock, A. M., the jail doors were opened and Lovett, in the custody of Sheriff A. McCollum and his deputy, and attended by his spiritual advisors, came out and mounted the scaffold with a firm step and perfectly calm demeanor. After prayer and singing, he bade goodbye to those in attendance and hoped that he should meet them all in heaven. The Sheriff then adjusted the cap and rope and at precisely 12 o'clock and 10 minutes, P. M., the drop fell and Henry Lovett was launched into eternity. His neck was dislocated by the fall and he died with hardly a struggle. After being suspended fifteen minutes the attending physicians, Drs. Jackson and Harrell, declared that life was extinct and he was cut down and taken to the "Potter's Field" for burial.
The reporter takes this method of tendering his thanks to Col. W. M. Baldwin, Clerk of the Superior Court of Columbus county, to Sheriff McCollum and to the jailor, Mr. Prigden, and others for their many courtesies to him on the occasion.
