"YANK" AND "JOHNNY."

The last number of the Raleigh Farmer and Mechanic contains an article relative to which we desire to offer a few suggestions. The term "Yankee," as we understand it, as applied to residents or natives of the Northern States, is not used generally among our people as a term of reproach or contumely, but merely to designate the people of a certain section of the country.

Nor do we apprehend that the people of the North object to the term "Yankee," by which they are generally known, unless it be coupled with some disrespectful adjective. It is a name by which they have been known all over the civilized globe ever since the formation of the government, and it will probably stick to them as long as the government exists.

At the recent centennial celebration at Yorktown, as we have been told by those who were present, a regiment from Michigan was encamped in the immediate vicinity of the troops from our own State, and the soldiers from the two sections fraternized in a spirit of fun and hilarity, such as none but soldiers know how to enjoy, but they were known to each other by no other names than "Yank" and "Johnnie."

The time has come for the Southern people to drop the use of the word "Yankee,"—except in speaking of the Yankees of the past twenty years. Tilden's election five years ago, and every election since, demonstrates that fully half (if no more) of the Northern people are not "Yankees."

The remarks of Bro. Shotwell are worthy of careful consideration and we copy them. They are as follows:

The time has come for the Southern people to drop the use of the word "Yankee,"—except in speaking of the Yankees of the past twenty years. Tilden's election five years ago, and every election since, demonstrates that fully half (if no more) of the Northern people are not "Yankees."

Let us think of these things, and make a distinction between our friends and our enemies. Massachusetts is considered a blackly Radical and "Yankee" State, yet there are more Democrats in Massachusetts than in North Carolina and South Carolina put together!

A prominent politician, long resident in Virginia and thoroughly acquainted with Gen. Mahone, gives it as his opinion that the Republicans will make a great mistake if they imagine that the results of the Virginia election will bring the Virginia Senator into close party communion with them. He says that Gen. Mahone will still keep on the edge of the Republican party, and act with that party as he has since his admission to the Senate, but that it will be on his own terms entirely, and that his quasi-independent attitude will be preserved to the last.

An Old Doctor's Advice. It was this: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open." For this purpose many an old doctor has advised the habitually constipated to take "Kidney-Wort" for no other remedy so effectively overcomes this condition, and that without the distress and griping which other medicines cause.

consummate skill, and that Col. Cameron, their candidate for Governor, is not excelled by any man in the State for incisive force and political sagacity. He says that thousands of white voters, who would otherwise have voted for Daniel, remained away from the polls, as they wanted to see the debt scaled down, and were willing that the colored voters should get the credit, or the obloquy, as it may be considered, of doing it.

Since the recovery from the effects of the panic of 1873, the surplus revenue of the government has steadily increased until it is estimated that it will reach the enormous figure of $167,000,000 for the current fiscal year.

Cincinnati Gazette: "If General Grant wants a situation with steady employment, and salary no object, he has found it in writing letters of recommendation for appointment to office. He will find a plentiful crop of stalwarts of the stalwarts. Ohio alone could keep him and half a dozen secretaries employed, although Ohio did not come within gunshot of sending a third term delegate to Chicago."

The Captain of a ship recently arrived at New York announces a curious change in the gulf stream lately. The stream suddenly turned around and began running towards the North. The current continued in this opposite direction for two days and then, as suddenly and mysteriously changed back again. The gulf stream has been showing a number of eccentricities lately, and can no longer be relied on.

Quartermaster General Meigs reports that the moneys for the service of his department, during the year amounted to $13,857,187.50, and the disbursements were $12,191,891.53, leaving a balance undrawn in June 30, 1881, of $1,705,296.04.

MUNSHINE.

"How is it, my dear, that you never kindled a flame in the bosom of any man?" said an old lady to her niece. To which the young lady replied: "The reason, my dear, is, as you well know, that I am not a good match."

Some parents don't seem to discern any difference between "Bring up a child in the way he should go" and "Bang up a child in the way she should go," consequently the female child is "banged" in a most idiotic manner. And pretty often there is a great deal of banging in bringing up the boy.—Norristown Herald.

To the ordinary observer it looks somewhat peculiar to see a woman stand up in court and testify that her husband has assaulted her, and after he is fined $5 and costs, dip her hand into her pocket and produce the money, which she has been saving to get a new dress, to pay the fine. But that's a woman all over.—Somerville Journal.

Basil, the editor of a popular periodical, says he is glad the world is coming to an end on November 12. He believes it will enable him to get rid of a number of contributions that he does not like to reject, and that would get him into trouble if he ventured to print. This is a new illustration of the old saying that everything has its uses.—Boston Courier.

"There has been a wonderful improvement in the speed and comfort of traveling during the past quarter of a century." For instance, less than a score of years ago it took nearly four years to go from Washington to Richmond, and the travelling was very uncomfortable. Now the journey can be made in less than a day, with ease and comfort.—Norristown Herald.

Mrs. Jane Pinkerton, of Manchester, Eng., has just been cut off in the flower of her youth by excessive smoking. It is only 107 brief summers since Jane first saw the light of day. She probably might have lived a long and happy life had not tobacco brought her to an untimely end. We believe now, if we never did before, that tobacco is a slow poison.—Boston Transcript.

Iconoclasm: The old proverbs are great things. At least some folks think they are. One of them says, "A man cannot bite the bottom of a frying-pan without smutting his nose." Now, what is clever or remarkable about that? If it had said that a man cannot bite the bottom out of his nose without smutting the frying-pan or that a man cannot bite the snout of the pan without frying his nose, or something like that, there would be something in it to interest and instruct.—Lowell Citizen.
