Patched Coins.

It is a difficult matter now to pass a coin with a hole in it. The banks here, refuse to receive them at par and every coin is now scrutinized closely as it is received over the counter of every trader. This is as it should be. That which was once a nuisance has become an abomination. If every banking house in the country would but refuse to receive these mutilated coins they would soon drop out of circulation.

To steal an umbrella is at last a crime. But if a man steals a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to cure his cough, can it be called a crime?

How to Send Flowers by Post.

The fashion of sending flowers by post has become such a favorite mode of late, that directions for their safe packing may be found useful: A card board box, about seven inches long by four and a half broad, such as shop-keepers have for crochet cotton, is the convenient size, and though at first sight it may appear too small to contain more than a dozen blooms, it is wonderful how much can be put in with judicious packing. In the bottom of the box lay a little slightly damp moss, then a layer of flowers and a few green leaves, another layer of flowers and leaves on top, and so on, till the box is nearly full, then finish with an upper stratum of moss. Pansies and lilies-of-the-valley travel well and will come out as fresh after a twenty-four hours' journey and in almost as good a condition as when first packed. If a difficulty occurs as to the length, the stalk should always be cut, as the bloom will not stand bending. Geranium blooms are too lightly set in the calyx to bear a journey, but primroses, violets, anemones, sweet peas and verbenas, mignonette, tulips, rosebuds and forget me nots, are all treasures to use for this purpose. After unpacking a box of flowers, place the tips of their stalks in boiling water, let them remain for about five minutes, remove them, cut off a tip from each stalk, and put in clear, cold water. Treated in this way, the most faded flowers will generally revive.

Wishing for Death.

Since my return from the army I have suffered with severe pains in my lower limbs, which at times totally unfitted me for any kind of business; and at other times the pain was so severe that I wished for death to relieve me of my sufferings. After having tried the best physicians and various well-known remedies without benefit, I procured a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil which relieved the pain instantly.

Not a True Bill.

In the case of Thomas J. Murphy, who was arrested in the early part of January, charged with the larceny of a watch at Capt. J. M. McGowan's saloon, and who has been in confinement in the county jail ever since, the Grand Jury failed to find a true bill and he was discharged. Murphy came here with Coup's circus, in which he held a responsible position, and shortly after the company left here returned to the city, and in a few days was arrested as above stated. He belongs in New York City and intends to return there.

Re-elected.

Rev. S. Mendelsohn was re-elected minister of the Temple of Israel, by the congregation of that Church, at a meeting held recently, and his salary was also increased. He has served this people six years, and the fact that his salary has been voluntarily increased is an evidence of the esteem in which he is held.

Shameful!

There was some outrageous conduct in this city last night. There is a gang of young rowdies developed on each Valentines Day, who go around to different houses and throw bats against the doors and windows. Last night was no exception to the rule, but their conduct then, in some instances, was a little worse than we have ever known it before. We know of one instance where a window was broken and another where the gate was taken off and the steps broken up, and there are numerous reports of doors badly battered and the ladies and children of residences frightened. Such things are a shame and a disgrace to any community and a reward should be offered by the city authorities with the view of punishing the young rascals to the full extent of the law.

Rescued from Death.

William J. Coughlin of Somerville Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and I was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. William Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. I got a bottle, when to my surprise, I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.
"I write this hoping every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will take William Hall's Balsam, and convinced that Consumption can be cured. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness."
