So to live is beaven: To make undying music to the world, Breathing as beauteous order that con trols with growing sway the growing life of man So we inherit that sweet purity For which we struggled failed and agonized with widening retrospect that bred despair. Taking Time by the Forclock. At the battle of Groveton Stonewall Jackson tried an experiment which nearly frightened a Federal division out freekles, with other beauty blemishes. of their boots Bars of railroad iron For such conditions, Dr. Benson's Skin some of his heaviest guns, and the noise tuble. these missiles made as they went skiling through the air was a sort of cross between the shrick of a woman and the braying of a mule. The Federals listened in wonder at the first few which bang ed through the tree tops, and presently one of the pieces fell just in front of a Peinsylvania regiment. A captain stepped forward to inspect it, and after turning it over he rushed to his colonel GENERALS G. T. BEAUREGARD and with the news:

The Dying Daughter.

Dr. Elliot, who was well acquainted with the celebrated Colonel Ethan Allen, visited him at a time when his daughter was sick and near to death. He was introduced to the library, when the colonel read to him some of his writtings, with much self-complacency, and asked, "Is not that well done?" While they were thus employed, a messenger entered, and informed Colonel Allen that his daughter was dying, and desired to speak with him. He immediately went to her chamber, accompanied by Dr Elliot, who was desirous of witnessing the interview. The wife of Colonel Allen was a pious woman and had instructed her daughter in the principles of Ubristianity. As soon as her father appeared at her bedside she said to him. "I am about to die; shall I believe in the principles you have taught me, or shall I believe in what my mother has taught me?' He became extremely agitated; his chin quivered, his whole frame shook; and after waiting a few moments he replied, "Believe what your mother has taught you." A deathbed is a fearful tester. Men who, whilst in health and strength, loudly boast of their skeptical principles, and ridicule religion, are generally the first, on approach of death, or even sickness, to shudder with fear! Even of Hobber, the celebrated infidel, it is recorded that he could not bear to be left alone and used to awake in ter ror if his candle went out during the night. He never could endure any discourse about death! Infidelity has no consolation for its unhappy followers in the testing hourl-From Frank, Leslie's Sunday Magazine for May.

S. GUTHRIE,

Henry Clay's Poverty.

Mr. Clay had a large and expensive family, and he keenly felt his poverty, while he, lost no opportunity of expressing his gratitude to friends, known and C)C unknown, for all kinds of favors. The d y upon which Mr. Webster made his celebrated speech, in March, 1850, he was highly eulogizing it at dinner, when some one asked him if he did not think Mr. Webster's influence had been greatly impaired by his allowing certain wealthy men in Massachusetts to settle an annuity apon him for abandoning his practice in the courts so as to devote more time to public affairs. Mr. Clay responded : "In view of the manner in which my note was raid at the bank at Kentucky, I do not think I ought to speak upon that subject, With difficulty I raised the money to pay the interest when I went to the bank to ask a renewal. The cashier told me I had no note there. asked him what had become of it, and he said he was instructed to answer no question. And never have I been able to find out who paid it ; but," turning to Judge Conrad, of New Orleans, he said : "Judge, I always supposed you had something to do with that matter." To which he responded : "Whether I or any one else had anything to do with the matter you will never know." Mr. Clay then said : "In view of my many opponents, I am as thankful for the secrecy as the money; but, when I am free from public life. I am going to insist upon knowing who were such benefactors." When some one said : "Mr. Clay, your friends will never let you be free from public life." "In that view, gentlemen," said he, "bear witness to my inexpressible gratitude to my friends, not only for their favor, but for their manner of beasant thing about it that it according to law.
