One day last week when the remains of a woman had been driven away from pain strikes it once at the root of the a tenement on Division street to a pauper's grave, half a dozen women gathered in the bare rooms to act as executors. Law did not enter with them. There was not enough there to attract the vulture. The bed was old and poor—only tit for a bon-fire. The stove would hardly pay for removal. Three or four old chairs, a table, a few pieces of crockery—even the poorest For Dabeles ask for WARNER'S SAFE DI who had gathered there had no use for them. And yet a woman and her boy babe had lived there in the poverty and among the shadows for long months. No, it was not living; it was dragging out the hours—waiting for another sunset—for another sunrise—for the coming of the glad relief. When the body has long been ill and the soul sickwhen days and nights and weeks and enjoys the nicest surroundings if in bad months have brought nothing but cold health. There are miserable people dread of death is nothing. The coming | when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonle of the shadow is even hailed with glad satisfaction.

And so they had lived; and one night tried. There was no story in them for a man-there was a whole life's history in them for a les. woman. They had not found even a penny in money—not an article that would bring a dime—not enough property there to call for removal, and yet they had found something there of more value than gold or diamonds. There was a legacy for the babe. There was a faded old tintype of father and mother, some letters stained with tears, two locks of hair pinned to the same cardmore to him than if the old boxes had been full of bright dollars. Only by them will he recall the dead-will he realize a mother's love and devotionwill he know that one dark morning women crept up stairs and found him prattling to the dead. Money might have worked his ruin. Those relics, on which a mother's tears have fallenover which a mother's prayers have ascended to Heaven—will be a holy light to guide him through the deepest

Dr. C. W. Benson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cures.

Beware of imitations, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real hold or merit on the public, that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable, except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package.
