PHARISEE AND SADUCEE

To church the two together went, Both doubtless on devotion bent, The parson preached with fluent ease, Of Pharisees and Saducees, And as they homeward slowly walked, The lovers on the sermon talked. And he-he deeply loved the maid-In soft and tender accents said: "Darling, do you think that we Are Pharisee and Saducee?" She flashed on him her bright black eyes In one swift look of vexed surprise, And thus he hastened to aver He was her constant worshipper "But, darling, I insist," he said, That you are very fair-1-see, I know you don't care much for me,

On the first week of their trip the girls suffered much from exhaustion, and the youngest and weakest of the party, Miss Murdock, had to stop and rest because of severely blistered feet. It was feared that she would have to abandon the trip, but she kept up nobly, and after the eighth day began to gain attempts and is now one of the healthings. strength, and is now one of the healthiest of the travellers. Their record shows that the young women walked 420 miles. They started out with the expectation of making between 500 and 600 miles. Each walker wore a pair of stout red-leather shoes and short walking costumes. The carried strong staffs in their hands and knapsacks upon their shoulders, in which were packed their hammocks and other necessary articles. They also wore very broad-brimmed hats, which, however, do not brimmed hats, which, however, do not seem to have protected their complexions, for they are all burned brown. Two of the girls carried pistols to protect them from wild cats and bears. Much of the time they slept in the open air in their hammocks under canvas coverlets, which were used to shield them from heavy dews and rains, One night, ten days ago, apprehending a severe storm, they camped in a graveyard and slept between the graves. Another night, in the mountains, they were thrown into conmountains, they were thrown into consternation by the appearance of a bear, but the beast, being as frightened as they were, fled without offering to molest them. A novel feature of their under the state of the sta dertaking was the keeping of what they called their log-book. In this a record of their impressions and adventures was kept, each taking her turn in 'keeping the log." The book contains 1,246 closely written pages. They spent three days in exploring the celebrated Bald mountain, whose mysterious rumblings some years ago created so much excitement. They not only made the difficul ascent to the top, but went into one of the crevices, which they examined mi-nutely with the aim of discovering what caused the strange sounds in the inte-

The novel trip of the six young ladies has been much talked about, but as they avoided the crowded thoroughfares they were ignorant of the interest taken in them, and were much astonished and slightly irritated when they learned that bets had been made that they would not make 400 miles in the month. The girls end their trip now because three of their number will begin their school-days early in September. They assert their determination to walk over the unexplored portion of the State next summer. They leave to-morrow by rail for their homes near Henderson-

A great change has been decided in the Russian army. With the exception of the Cuirassiers, Life Guards and Cossacks, the whole force of regular cavalry is to be transformed into Dragoons carrying small bayonet rifles for the performance of infantry service. The existing regiments of Hussars, Lancers, mounted Grenadiers and other will retain their present titles. other will retain their present titles, but as regiments of Diagoons. The reasons for this change are chiefly toward lessening the enormous expense which is entailed in a national army like that of Russia by too great a variety economical, and seem to be directed of uniform and equipment.

Rescued from Death.

William J. Coughlin of Somerville Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appe-tite and flesh, and I was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. William Hall's Balsam for the lungs. I got a bottle, when to my surprise, I commenced to feel better and to-day I feel better than
