There is some talk of the cultivation of tobacco in the Holly Shelter section of Pender county. The lands there seem well adapted to the growth of the weed. It is a stiff potato soil and of religion are being conducted at sevwould doubtless produce well. An experiment was made there a few years ago and two crops were gathered from the same stalks in one season. The leaves, some of them, were thirty inches in length. The grower knew next to nothing of the curing process. He hung the leaves up in his barn and when they were dry he sold them for 224 cents per pound.
