Spirits and Rosin.

A gentleman in a city to the north of us, a prominent railroad manager, who had seen in the REVIEW of September 2d a statement of the receipts and exports of naval stores from this port, was much amazed at the immense amount of business done and wrote here for detailed information in regard to the exports. The matter was referred to Col. Jno. L. Cantwell, Secretary of the Produce Exchange, and that gentleman, with his usual willingness to oblige, has taken the trouble to prepare a statement of the exports of spirits turpentine and rosin from this port to other ports for the year ending with August 31st, 1882. We have been permitted to publish the statement and it will be found a matter of much interest to the mercantile community, inasmuch Thus far in September the aggregate as it gives the exports in detail to the receipts of spirits turpentine at the various points of destination. My Portfolio.

We have received from the publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, a book entitled "My Portfolio, a Collection of Essays," by Austin Phelps, D. D., late Prsfessor in Andover Theological Seminary. As its title would indicate it is a "Collection of Essays," treating upon such subjects as would be apt to claim the attention of an eminent and learned clergyman. They are well and forcibly written, and, however much one may differ from the author in some of his opinions, they are interesting and instructive. The essay uvon "Woman-Suffrage as Judged by the Working of Negro Suffrage," is an able and comprehensive paper, which we should imagine would bring a storm of censure and reproach from many of the author's Northern associates, but which no one at the South who knows the facts will attempt to deny or dispute, so far as it relates to the experiment of negro suf-

The Claire Scott Dramatic Company bid fair to have a large audience at their rendition of the Princess of Bagdad at the Opera House to-morrow evening, judging by the large number of reserved seats already taken. We clip the following from the Rome (Ga.)

The performance of Claire Scott was certainly a surpise to our people, not-withstanding the almost fulsome praise for no attempt at artificial means of attraction is needed. In the curse scene leading support, it is only necessary to say that in every act and motion of Miss Scott, he seconds her and meets every requirement. The entire com-pany are artists, and ably lend their aid to the star. In fact it may be said that

To My Friends.

WITHILE NOT WISHING TO OBTRUDE upon the public my private troubles, there appeared in the DARLY REVIEW of the 21st inst., a notice by W. B. Hocut, which requires me to give to the public an outline of the whole facts of the controversy between us. In 1875, my time being engrossed by an extensive country practice my farm mach nery and sive country practice, my farm, machinery and other business. I put Hocut in charge of a small mercantile business at Rocky Point, conducted mainly for the convenience of my employees, agreeing to give him one-half the profits, he having neither credit nor money. He remained in charge of the business until January 5th, 1882, when we dissolved, he agreeing to take the stock and accounts and assume the debts, I to pay what I then ewed the firm. He ran the business under this arrange-firm. He ran the business under this arrangement until about the 19th of February, collected all available accounts, exhausted the remaining stock and then visited me at my sick room and informed me that he could not carry out his agreement and threw the business upon my hands. He being irresponsible, I could not do otherwise than take the remnant left. On assuming control of the business and examining closely into its condition, I found that he had collected over ten thousand dollars, which he had not accounted for. I called his attention to the fact and in the presence of mutu-al friends pointed out many of the items and he failed to explain them. The ill-gotten gains thus obtained by him being in his pockets and beyond my reach, I nell, Jr., as umpire. The terms of dissolution were proven, as stated above, he having admitted them in the presence of several respectable witnesses. He admits in his cord of April 8th, published in the Wilmington Star, that there were terms of dissolution agreed to on January 5th, 1882. He confesses it in the agreement under which the arbitrators sat. Yet for reasons known to himself he went upon the witness standard swore that there was no dissolution until February 17th. He swore that I had possession of the books from Janu-ary 5th to February 17th, that he never saw one of them during this time except at my house. He stated this repeatedly. He stated it on his cross-examination more than once, and when shown various entries in his own so lavishly bestowed by our exchanges throughout the country. Our people did not expect to see a star company which may be said to be the equal, if not superior, to any that has ever visit-ed the South. Claire Scott certainly is the stand unless he admitted the facts, he a most magnificient actress and the broke down and confessed to have had at the claims set forth for her have not been magnified. Her acting is sublime—in fact she may be called a natural actress, able to tell or demonstrate in any way how much he used. He confessed to have been in traction is needed. In the curse scene in "Leah," the forsaken outcast rises magnificently, and casting defiance at Rudolph, she causes a shudder to run through the veins of her hearers and to have been made in his presence and by his consent); these books were admitted as consent); these books which were admitted as consent); these books which were admitted as consent); when at the close the breathless silence is broken by long and heavy plaudits. Of Mr. S. K. Coburn, her counted for and for which he offered no explanation other than to say "I used it in the business". Of this amount $1,478.21 was collected the last year; $1,471.98 of which is credited to himself and to his immediate family. The accounts of Messrs. Patterson & Hicks, Worth & Worth, B. F. Mitchell & Son, J. C. Heyer, T. B. Henderson and others, show that he had drawn from them over $8,000 which he
