LOG ROLLING:

While Wrestling with a Fallen Tree a Lumberman Receives Consequential Damages.

While on a hunting excursion in the great cool and wood region near Carbondale, Pa., the writer met William Coll, a lumberman. Accustomed to life and labor to the ferest from early manhood, he was a true Knight of may insure a lifetime of happiness or the Are. Many a tree had fallen before his prevent one of misery. ringing strokes, and fleets of rafts had borne away to market the sawed products. Coll is a character, and if Oscar Wilde is right in anying that all movements in unhindered labor are graceful, our friend William, stripped for bis work, and attacking a tree as Richard I. assaulted the heavy doors of Front de Beuf's Sastle, must have presented an admirable pic-

One day, bowever, -but let him te'i the story hime If, as he told it to me: "I was out in the woods, you know, trying to start a log down a hill. Thinking I could get a better purchase on it from the lower side, I tackled it there with my log-rolling hook and threw my weight on the lever She started, she did, but as luck would have it, before I rould get out of the way, she rolled right over we. If to hadn't becomfor a lot of small limbs and brush lying in the road, which litted her up, she'd a crushed me flat. As it was I got up without a broken bone, but with some mighty bad bruises." "Then you were all right," said his auditor.

"Not by a blamed sight, stranger. I took celd, rhoumattsm set to, and, if I had'nt heard M BENSON'S CAPCINE PORTS PLASTERS and used 'em it's my opinion I should never made another chip fly. But the Capcine took bold quick, and I'm 'bout as good as new. But there's one thing you kin calkilate on -I shall sever wrastle with another log unless I have the advantage of the ground.
