The Art Amateur for February contains some striking crayon and charcoal drawings, including the Lions in Trafalgar Square by F. Hopkinson Smith, a portrait of that artist by Millet and Abbey, and a very life-like figure study by Geo. H. Boughton, whose beautiful painting, "Flowers and Fall ing Leaves," is also handsomely reproduced. The illustrations of "Inexpensive Home Decoration," by Lewis F. Day, and of "Japanese Decorative Art" by Dr. Dresser, are numerous and extremely interesting. Capital designs of narcissus, clover and barberies for jug and vase decoration, and a clever honey-suckle design for a screen are given, besides a variety of suggestions for general decoration and ecclesiastical embroidery. The text of the number is embroidery. The text of the number is especially strong. Edward Strahan has an excellent article on water color painting; Clarence Cook dissects without mercy the alleged Raphael at the Metropolitan Museum; the art of the past year is reviewed; picture exhibitions in New York and Philadelphia receive ample attention, and "My Note Book" is full of sharp paragraphs. New houses of artistic pretensions in New York and elsewhere are keenly criticised. There are valuable articles on fan painting, china painting and needlework, and various topics relating to brio-a-bree and art in dress are agree. bric-a-brac and art in dress are agree- ess streets.
