THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.

THAT SETTLES IT.

Brought into Competition with the World, the Best Carries off the Honors.

At the great Centennial Exhibition of 1876, the leading products of all the branches of the World's Industry were assembled at Philadelphia. To carry off a prize in the face of that tremendous competition was a task of no ordinary difficulty. Inventions and preparations for the alleviation of pain and the cure of disease were present in the greatest possible variety, representing the skill and the profoundest study of the age, and it may be of vital importance to you, personally, to know that the highest and the only medal given to rubber Porous Plasters, was awarded to the manufacturers of BENSON'S CAPSINE POROUS PLASTER, by the following jury:

Dr. WM. ROTH, Surgeon-General, Prussian Army.
J. H. THOMPSON, A. M., M. D., Washington, D. C.
C. B. WHITE, M. D., New Orleans.
ERNEST FLEISCH, M. D., Austria.

The decision was afterwards confirmed by the medical jury at the last Paris Exposition. Knowing the value of such high and unbiased testimony, the medical profession, both in the United States and in Europe, quickly threw aside the old, slow-acting plasters they had been using, and adopted Benson's in their regular practice. That physicians and surgeons of the broadest reputations did this, distinctly proves the intrinsic merit of the article.

It is no more than just to add that the average physician of today is not dominated by the prejudices which retarded the progress and modified the successes of his predecessors of not more than twenty-five years ago. He accepts hints from all quarters and endorses and adopts demonstrated healing agents wherever he finds them.

The right of Benson's Capsine Porous Plaster to stand at the head of all external applications whatsoever, for the mitigation or cure of disease, is no longer questioned.

Let the purchaser, however, be on his guard against imitations. The genuine has the word CAPSINE CUT in the middle.

EYES VERSUS LIPS.

My lady's lips, so curved, so soft, Have dealt to me a cruel "No." Now shall I, thus dejected and scorned, From out her beautiful presence go? Not so—proud lips, your lovely scorn Within my breast shall plant no thorn. Till deep I've gazed beneath lashes black Which hide her wondrous eyes from me, And in response there flashes back A glance, which shall my answer be. Curved bows are lips whence arrows fly To wound, to rend, mayhap to slay; Deep wells are eyes where truth doth lie.

They will to me her heart betray. Dark, tender eyes, your light denies The proud lips' curve. Ah, rapture lies Within those pure, clear depths for me.

Nor snowy lid, nor jetty lash Can longer hide the glow and flash Of Love's tide welling full and free, Red lips, to haughty mocking lent, Kisses shall be your punishment.

—JENNIE S. JUDSON.

Trips the Fast Clippers Made.

About the year 1844 began the most important era in the history of American ship-building. Our Liverpool packets had already demonstrated the capabilities of our builders and mariners. The clipper ship Canada, for example, under the command of Capt. Mady, made her trips almost with the regularity of a steamer. From fourteen to sixteen days was the average length of her voyages between the two ports. This may have been an extreme case, perhaps, but the fact remains that these liners made a remarkable record. Without discussing the question concerning the respective merits of our clipper and foreign ships, it is not too strong a statement to say that for the period of perhaps fifteen years, during which our vessels circled the globe in their voyages and spread their vast expanse of canvas in every sea, the runs made by American ships have never been surpassed by sail, and rarely equalled by steam. Donald McKay, about the year 1844, commenced to win his world-wide reputation for building clipper ships of a size and speed hitherto unequalled. The clipper ship James Baines, built by McKay, ran 430 miles in 24 hours. The Red Jacket, built by Deacon Thomas, at Rockland, Me., in 1853, became celebrated after her first trip, when she made the remarkable run from New York to Liverpool in 13 days, 1 hour and 25 minutes, then the fastest time on record for a sailing ship, and it has not been beaten since. I believe, except in one instance. The Flying Cloud, McKay's most celebrated ship, once made 374 knots, or 433 miles in 24 hours and 25 minutes, equal to 17.17 miles an hour.

Doctors of the Period.

A short time ago, when travelling, the celebrated Dr. Barthez was taken sick, and according to the manner of all physicians, he called in a fellow practitioner to attend him.

When the strange doctor put in an appearance, Barthez discovered, to his stupefaction, that his colleague was none other than an old servant of his.

"How is this? you a doctor? Since when? and what can you do?"

"Sir, I picked up a little medicine in your service, and I have great success here."

"Is that possible?"

"Yes, and more so than you could have yourself."

And seeing the astonishment of his old master, he continued:

"How many inhabitants do you think this town numbers?"

"I don't know; 20,000, perhaps."

"Yes, about that many. And how many do you think are really intelligent and capable of appreciating your merits?"

"I do not know."

"Let us say a thousand, and that is simple. Well, the thousand are yours, and the rest belong to me."

Barthez became thoughtful for a moment and then answered: "It is true, and you are right. And this is the way of the world, notwithstanding its constant improvements; in spite of the recommendations of all honest and modest doctors, the multitude will always belong to the few great or small, humble or exalted, politicians or doctors, ignorant or wise, in health or sickness, to charlatans, who are invariably gifted with that imperturbable assurance, which, under the name of 'brass,' fascinates and conquers the public, who accept their theories and cover before their assumed superiority."

—French paper.

Mrs. Lulu Reed, of Mathews, N. C., says: "I received great benefit from Brown's Iron Bitters in general debility."

A New Enoch.

"What're you doing here?" demanded a policeman of a chap whom he had caught peeping in at the window of a Furman street house last night.

"Nothin'," replied the man, jamming his hands into his pockets and gazing up at the sky.

"Didn't I hear a woman yell in that house a few minutes ago?" continued the policeman.

"Shouldn't wonder," returned the man, carelessly. "In fact, I know you did, for I heard her myself."

"What's going on in there?" queried the policeman, peeping in.

"I guess he's kicking my wife," suggested the stranger.

"Do you live here?" asked the policeman in some astonishment.

"I used to, but I kinder fell out of the habit lately," was the indifferent response.

"What kind of a man are you to stand out here and let another man lick your wife?" demanded the policeman indignantly.

"I think he can do it better than I can," growled the stranger. "I never had any luck at that kind of a job, and if there's any one can make a success of it I'm not going to interfere with his fun now, you bet!"

"Who is the man? Do you know him?"

"Never saw him before," replied the stranger. "I guess he and she thinks he's her husband."

"And it's your wife?"

"Sure! Only I've been away a long time—shipwrecked, you know—and I just got home. I saw 'em at it, and I thought I wouldn't interfere."

"Do you want me to arrest him?" inquired the policeman, contemplating the returned husband in amazement.

"Just as you like," returned the other. "Only don't mention my name in the matter."

"But don't you propose to do anything about it?"

"Well, now, you just bet! Just as soon as that man winds off that job he's going to be dry, and if I get a quarter anywhere he's going to get a drink, and don't you interfere now, you hear me?"

And the policeman strolled off down the silent street, while Enoch, bending low his chin upon the window that contained Annie, absorbed the scene, then turned him round as Philip came the while a little ahead of a flat-iron and took him by the arm. And so they went, and Annie left alone wot not that Enoch had been so near, and had him shekels in his pocket where-with to assuage the great grief of Philip.
