Mr. and Mrs. N. Jacobi have returned to the city, after a visit of two weeks to friends in New York, during which time Mr. Jacobi made large purchases of goods in his line, which will go to swell his already large stock.

Golden Days, which is in itself a gem, comes to us this week with an elegant supplement, a "statuesquo chromo," entitled "Ouch!" which is a very charming picture and is alone worth more than the price of a monthly part.

It costs about $8.70 to be convicted of disorderly conduct now-a-days. This expense is for a plain case, without any embellishments, and includes a fine of $5 and the costs, which are about $3.70. More elaborate and ornamented styles will come proportionately higher, but we wouldn't advise indulgence in these high priced luxuries. -

A Young Rogue.

On Saturday last a man in this city employed a colored boy to cut some wood. The boy left in a few minutes, carrying with him an axe belonging to his employer. Later in the day the latter found the boy and accused him of the theft, which he at once confessed. The two then went to the house of the boy's father, underneath which the axe was found buried. The man agreed not to prosecute the boy, providing the father would give his son a good flegging, which was readily promised .-Whether the promise was carried into execution or not is a question concerning which your "deponent saith not."
