Rev. J. C. Barham, of Warrenton, N. C., says: "I find Brown's Iron Bitters a thorough and complete tonic."

Street Drill.
The Wilmington Light Infantry had a street drill in front of the City Hall last night with quite a full turnout. The drill was in every way creditable and the "sober boys" felt pleased to notice that quite a number of ladies were on the sidewalk watching with much interest the different evolutions.

Vagrancy.
Robert Walker, a colored boy who says he came from Richmond, Va., by stealing a ride on the railroad, was arrested by the special policeman at the depot and brought before Mayor Hall this morning for his consideration. Judgment was suspended and the boy will be sent back whence he came.

Improvements.
Mr. J. H. Hanby is erecting a two-story frame building on the Southwest corner of Dock and Eighth street which will when completed add very much to the appearance of that locality. The lower floor is to be used as a store while the second story will be occupied as a dwelling. The structure throughout will be built of the best kind of materials and in the most thorough and workmanlike manner.

Needs Attention.
There is a place on Chestnut street, just above its intersection with North Seventh street, which needs attention. Every considerable rainfall floods the street from one side to the other, and there is no way to get rid of the water but by absorption. Some method of drainage should be adopted at once, as it is needed in a sanitary point of view, as well as for the convenience and comfort of travel.

The Weather.

This has been indeed a delightful May day, such as to make all nature smiling and glad. The warm and genial sunshine has been just what the earth has long needed and every species of vegetation has been made to thrive under its benign presence. It is now too late in the season for cold storms and it may reasonably be expected that the present "warm spell" has come to-day.

Improvements at Hilton Mills.

Messrs Parsley & Wiggins have recently added improvements to their saw and planing mills, at Hilton, and in addition have made preparations to do a large business in fancy wood work. They have put in their planing mills a turning lathe, moulding machine, scroll saws, and, in fact, all necessary machinery for fancy wood work, such as mouldings, brackets, baluster and all descriptions of ornamental house finishings. They are now filling some very large orders and are turning out very handsome work.—They have also in stock a large assortment of lathes and vegetable and fruit crates. Persons in the country would do well to correspond with Messrs Parsley & Wiggins when in want of anything in their line.

An Ancient Organization.

Under this caption the Fayetteville Observer furnishes us with the following interesting bit of history:
The Cape Fear Navigation Company, which up to last year owned the Cape Fear River from Fayetteville to Wilmington, was organized in 1785, that is to say, during the Confederation and four years before the adoption of the United States Constitution. This fact, and the doubt of the right of the government to assume control of a river lying wholly within a single State, induced the 46th Congress to pass the bill authorizing the payment of $10,000 to the company for its franchise; and control of the river has since rested with the government.

Clinton & Pt Caswell Railroad.

The Clinton Caucasian of this week's issue says: Capt. R. P. Paddison, Chairman of Com. on Survey, and Mr. Duncan O'Hanlan, Chief of the engineer corps of the C. & Pt. C. R. R. are engaged this week in locating ten miles of the road beginning at this point. They have already located ten miles from Pt. Caswell this way. The designs in leaving a gap in the line is that the question of passing down Black River on the east or west may be decided by future developments. There are no subscribers on the east, but it is thought that the lands on that side would better support the road than those on the west. Besides, there would be one large bridge less to build on the east than on the west.

Hostile Bees.

In speaking of Mr. Bloom's bees a few days since, we stated that, being Italian bees, possibly they could not sting in English, but now we are painfully aware that they can, and we are willing to make affidavit that they can sting effectually in any known language, idiom or dialect in use in the universal world. Mr. Bloom has three hives which swarmed this forenoon and there has been a hot war between the different colonies all day, with an occasional diversion in and attack upon human passersby. It was our misfortune to come under the notice of one of them this noon and as his blood was up and it being a "free fight," he reckoned "in" and went for us in the most approved fashion "getting in" on our face and neck with a vengeance. We changed our base to secure a better position in double quick time, during which time demonstrations were made upon our right and left, but owing to the rapid use of our small arms they were unsuccessful. Subsequently we had the gloomy satisfaction of seeing several others attacked in the same way and with like results.

P. S.—Since writing the above we learn that a hive of Italian bees, the property of Mr. J. R. Marshall, on North Third, between Market and Princess streets, swarmed this afternoon and alighted near the Southeast corner of Market and Second streets, where they were captured and hived without any unusual difficulty.

We thank Mr. Pulaski Cowper, of Raleigh, for a copy of "Extracts of Letters of Maj. Gen. Bryan Grimes to his wife, written while in active service in the army of Northern Virginia together with some personal recollections of the war, written by him" after its close—compiled from original manuscripts, by Pulaski Cowper, of Raleigh, N. C."

The book is edited by Mr. Cowper and the large mass of matter it contains is from notes taken at the time of the various occurrences by Gen. Grimes. It may be taken as a true and correct narrative of the scenes in which its gallant and distinguished author was engaged and the letters will prove a valuable addition to the true history of our late unhappy war.

Without a History.

Our attention was called to a curious and rare coin this morning, but in this instance its history is wrapped in the gloom of mystery. It is about the size in diameter of our present five cent piece, but is very thin. It has been so much worn by time and rough usage that none of the letters and inscriptions can be deciphered, although an image of a man's head, wearing a Roman helmet, is quite distinct upon one side, while upon the other are rough-looking figures which appear to represent a man and a woman. This coin was found among some ballast which came from the West coast of Africa, which was being used for grading Chestnut street. A young son of Capt. Charles D. Myers was the finder, and the coin may be seen at Capt. Myers' store.

A fine assortment of Guns and Pistols at JACOBI'S Hardware Depot.

Third North Carolina.

The Association of Officers of the Third North Carolina Regiment will celebrate the 17th anniversary of their organization at Greenville Sound, this year, on Wednesday, the 16th inst. This is the oldest Confederate organization of veterans in the South, having been organized February 6th, 1866. There are eleven members now residing in this city and the organization is intended to be perpetual, as there is a clause in their constitution which permits the eldest son of a member to become himself a member upon the death of the father, by making application for the same.

Fish Culture.

Mr. C. W. McDowell, of the North Carolina Fish Commission, arrived here last night, having in his charge 250,000 young shad from the fish hatchery at Avoca, near Edenton. Although he was expected, as was stated in Monday's REVIEW, there was no certainty of his coming until late last night when Col. B. R. Moore, through whose instrumentality the fish were brought him, received a telegram from Goldsboro that he was on his way to Wilmington. Upon Mr. McDowell's arrival here the fish, were in cans, were examined and found "all right," and taken to the dock at the foot of Market street, where they were emptied into the Cape Fear. Owing to the lateness of the hour and Mr. McDowell's unlooked for arrival, only a few persons were present to witness the operation of transferring the fish from the cans to the river.

It is expected that another installment of shad will soon reach the city, to assist in stocking the river, this latter lot to come from Washington, D. C. Col. B. R. Moore has worked quietly but effectively in securing these fish for our waters and deserves much credit from our people for his efforts and the success which has attended them.

The celebrated "Fish Brand Gills" Twine is sold only at JACOBI'S Hardware Depot.
