are never emalated or counterfeited This is especiall true of a medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon ss it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to in-duce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in simlar style to II, B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with word "Hops" or "Hops" in their name, or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch mone of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits. may 12-1m

He had friends in this city, or at least his wife had, but stoppages along the route and places in this State deferred their arrival here until February. Here they spent about two weeks. Of course the friends of the entertainers were invited to meet them, and among the latter at several of the houses to which the couple were invited was a most charming and agree able young lady. She manifested a lively interest in the sergeant's story of his experience in the far West, the life in camp, and the encounters with Indians. It was but natural that the sergeant should mention in his narratives the name of his comrade, Davis, and comment on his bravery, manliness and other good qualities. The sergeant noticed the maiden's interest in his comrade and perhaps thought, "Well there is a chance to secure him a wife who will prove a treasure." A curious tool was one whose death in Charenton madhouses was registered on Sunday. His name was Roussot, and he was sentenced to death at the Assizes of the Seine in 1853 for having assassinated an old man named Demoury, in order to steal his money. Rousset had been a pettifogging man of business about the Palace of Justice, and his case attracted a great deal of attention. She made some startled exclamation, which called the white man's attention, and thereupon he drew a revolver and declared his intention to kill her if she raised any alarm. In no wise daunted this spirited young lady quickly took a pistol from under her pillow and fired at the villain, at which the negro took tright and fled. The white brute, however, returned the fire .-Plucky as she is fair, Miss Gamble not only fired at him again, but upon his turning to run, sprang out of bed, fired still another shot, and as the scoundrel was hastily getting out the window, struck him a good blow over the head with her weapon. And after it was all over she didn't faint either, as heroines in novels usually do, but was able in a collected manner to tell her family all about it when they came rushing into the room.
