CONFEDERATE BONDS.

The trade in Confederate bonds, says tion incurred in aid of insurrection surplus. or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slaves, but all such debts, obligations or claims shall be illegal and void." The States composing the Confederacy are all back in the Union, and even if they were disposed to compromise with the creditors of the defunct Confederacy they are prohib ited from doing so by the laws and Constitution of the country, which they are bound to obey. This is the whole case in a nutshell .-All Confederate securities arealso absolutely worthless as financial obliga tion, and yet a syndicate of foreign capitalists has been formed to press their payment. The particulars of the crazy scheme are published to-day .-"It is," as the New York Herald says, "one of the most impudent wildcat schemes that was ever devised even by English rogues to gull English fools," and "nothing less than a deliberate conspiracy to bully the people of the Southern States to pay by general contribution to English bankers and other holders a part at least of the face of the Confederate bonds." The Confederate Syndicate have hired a vault in London, have organized under the auspices of an English Lord and two members of Parliament, have secured legal counsel and intend to boycott the credit of the Southern States in all the foreign money markets until this long suffering section is forced to comply with their ridiculous and infamous demands. The scheme will not work, and there is not one of the old Confederate States that can be frightened into an acceptance of the terms of the foreign cranks who are suing a corpse for the price of the coffin.

The charge that the financial embarrassments of the Southern States are due in the slightest degree to the worthlessness of the Confederate securities is absurd. Millions of foreign capital have been invested in the South. A company of British capitalists is now that somebody would take his life.' doing business through its agents in this State, and other companies will send their money here as soon as it is known that the security is good and that the rate of interest is remunerative. The Southern States are not asking for any foreign loans just now. They can get all the money they want they were hunting for foreign loans they would hardly go to the London gamblers who have invested in Confederate securities.

It comes to us from New York, and from a source entitled to consideration says the Louisville Courier-Journal that an arrangement has been reached between the President and the Governor of Ohio by which the two, their managers and followers, are to work together to make the Republican ticket of a woman for "doing too much talk-in 1884 read Arthur and Foster. If those States are lost, then enterprise to match it. it will, of course, go to pieces. How do the Republicans like it? And what
