Here is an incident of love's labor lost. A party at Smithville wished to see a party in Wilmington on some important business and so early this morning he got aboard of his boat. hoisted his sail and started for the city. On the way he was overtaken by the Alpha which picked him up, took his boat in tow and brought him here. On arriving here about 11 o'clock he found that the party had gone down on the Passport to Smithville to see him, the two having passed each other, unknowingly, on the way. Nothing daunted, the Smithvillian took on a cargo of watermelons to pay expenses of the trip and started back in his sail boat and it is hoped that he arrived in time to interview his friend and that the two did not again pass each other on the way.

They then recovered their own boat, righted her and bailed her out and returned to the city, very wet, it is true, but not at all unhappy at the romance. During August the planets Neptune, Saturn, Mars, Jupiter and Venus are all "morning stars." Neptune, if he were near enough, would be seen above the horizon about half past eleven o'clock in the evening. Saturn "peers above the eastern hills" an hour after midnight, and is followed by Mars twenty minutes later. Jupiter is due about a quarter after three, and Venus rises half an hour later. On the third she is at her nearest point to Mercury, and to Uranus on the 6th, and on the 29th she is very near Neptune. At half past one o'clock on the afternoon of the 25th she is in close conjunction with Saturn. In some portions of the globe the moon occults Saturn for the fifth time since the beginning of the year. She completes her circuit of the planet by her conjuction with Mars on
