LET IT BE PREVENTED.

Bebril will locate himself upon a shore before it finishes the first half of its secof the rapids, for the purpose of studying and testing them by daily plunges. He will make dummies of weight equa to his own and throw them into the rapids at all the dangerous points for the purpose of ascertaining the precise tendencies and actions of the waves and currents. When he has completed his observations and practice he will set apart a day for his attempt to make the swim in which Capt. Webb lost his life, and he states his firm belief that he will young men, succeed, and do so without becoming much exhausted, claiming that the undertaking will depend far more upon actual knowledge of the water, presence of mind, and careful management of the body, than upon any exercise of strength, for which, he argues, there will be but little use.

We hope that he will not make the attempt, We hope that he may not be permitted to make it. All such exhibitions are demoralizing and pernicious, and we hope that the arm of the law is strong enough on this side of the Atlantic to be able to prevent any such reckless undertaking. There is not a shadow of probability, and only the most remote possibility, that success would attend the attempt, and all the chances are that there will be another learful spectacle of a fool rushing head long to a death which an anxious and horror stricken throng of spectators are impotent- to avert, and that another ghastly corpse wilf be thrown upon the shores of Niagara river for interment. But this would not be so deplorable in its consequences as success; for should he succeed, and safely pass the terrible fall, there would be many others willing and anxious to try the same experiment and would hazard every danger for the notoriety the act would bring. We have had enough of such scenes, and we trust that these is enough power, enough regard for human life, and enough regard for public morals to prevent any and all such exhibitions in the future.

AN EXPERIMENT.

The Savannah News states that a practical effort to improve the cotton erop after it comes from the field, or, more properly speaking, to manipulate in such a manner while in the seed, as to do justice to the staple according to its merits, is to be made in Florida this season by the agents of one of the great spool cotton manufacturers. Seed of resolution .- N. O. Picayunc. the best sea island quality was furnished to a number of the leading planters in Middle Florida, with the understanding that the product in cotton was to be sold to the parties supplying it Improved gins have been put up at Madison and Lake City, where the cotton will be carefully ginned. By this investment the spool cotton manufacturers expect to get the best resuits possible-a good staple, carefully ginned and packed.

The enterprise, says the News, is what is known as carrying out the "Atkinson" theory that the value of the eotton crop can be greatly increased by to tell about. more careful handling before it is put on the market.
