THE UNFINISHED MANU-SCRIPT.

The Story of Fate an Arkansaw Man Told.

Some time ago the writer visited Prof. Gailnet, of Little Rock, Ark., and while sitting in the library, engaged in conversation with the entertaining gentleman. observed a roll of manuscript tied with a strip of black cloth. We asked him it it were something designed for publication.

"It will never be published," he said and began to unroll it. "See how it ends," and glancing at the bottom of the last page we read the tollowinn: "While he sat alone, deeply musing, a hearse passed the house, and-" here the sentence broke off. Requesting. almost imploring, the Professor to tell us the history of the curious manuscript he finally consented.

Dancing With a Duke.

The other night the young Duke of Newcastle danced with five gorgeous partners. It was a special ball night and the toilets were such as to illustrate the newest developments in the sum-mer styles. His first partner is in Algerian striped muslin, transparant, lined with pink silk and looped over a short underskirt of white satin cut into blocks around the bottom. Each block is hand-painted with a spray of pink morning glories and foliage, this block-trimming falling over a deep flounce of Oriental lace. The satin bodice has a spray of morning glories starting from the left shoulder, crossing the waist diagonally and falling in a garland over the sides of the pan ers. His second wore a dress of heavy white corded silk, hand-embroidered in white sadler silk bouquets. The front is a breadth of spendid chenille embroidery in the proper colors for roses and drooping clusters of wisterias and their foliage. The long train is split up the back and from the opening there rushes a sweeping of this chenilleembroidered silk.

The third is in purplish blue and bluish French gray, both materials the heaviest satin, and at the smallest cal culation twenty yards of each is gobbled in the manufacture of this stunning costume. Newcastle's fourth waltz was with a girl in a toilet of oak satin merveilleux, trimmed on the bottom with a puffing of the same stuff, surmounted by a flounce of old-rose silk, embroidered in open work. The corsage of oak armure is pointed at the waist. with a flounce in large plaits set on all round. But the most georgeous dress pressed by the young Duke's arm is gendarme blue, with huge brocaded flowers of shaded gold nearly covering the surface. This superb material is pulled, looped and draped from the treedom utterly regardless of cost. Be- spected citizens. sides, there run up the front, across the breast and down the back an exquisite trimming of floss embroidery of flowers and leaves in natural colors, cut out and thickly studded with pearl beads. The fellow might easily have imagined that he was dancing with a duchess .-Cincinnati Enquirer.

MR. N. EZEKIEL has made known to me the composition of his Hair Pestorer and I have also subjected it to chemical examination. It contains no lead or silver, substances very commonly employed in making preparation for the hair, nor anything harmful, and may therefore be used without apprehension of injurious results.

Whilst thanking you, Mr. Ezekiel, for the Hair Restorer you so kindly sent me, I take great pleasure in saying to you that its beneficial effects upon my hair have been so apparent as to attract the commendation of all my friends who have noticed it.

It is in my estimation a treasure, without which the toilet of none who have used it will be complete. Hoping it may realize you the pecuniary success you so richly deserve. I remain, very respectfully, MRS. A. E. V. WISE.
